(18) as soon as practicable after the 31st day of December in each year, furnish the medical officer of health with a tabular statement containing the following particulars:

(c) the result of the service of such notices.

The Minister may dispense with any of the requirements of these Regulations in any case in which it appears to him desirable so to do, on such terms and conditions as he thinks fit, and such dispensation may be given at any time, provided that the Minister is satisfied that the interest of any person will not be prejudiced thereby.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
31st March, 1936.

DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE ON LOCAL GOVERNMENT OFFICERS.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to invite the attention of the Council to the report made in 1934 by the Committee appointed under the Chairmanship of Sir Henry Hadow to inquire into and make recommendations on the qualifications, recruitment, training, and promotion, of Local Government Officers. Since the issue of the report discussion of the recommendations made (which are set out in Appendix I to this Circular) has been proceeding with the Associations of Local Authorities and with other interested bodies.

2. The principal recommendation of the Committee was directed to the establishment of a Standing Central Advisory Committee representative of the Associations of Local Authorities. On this recommendation the Committee observe:

"157. Importance attached to recommendation.—The establishment of a central advisory committee is the chief of our recommendations. The more far-reaching of our proposals are closely bound up with it, and we feel that substantial progress depends on the setting up of such a body. Quite apart from individual recommendations, we regard the absence of a central organisation as one of the most serious defects in the existing system. It is absurdly wasteful that there should be no one body empowered to supply information regarding entry to the local government service, no one body to which suggestions, representations, criticisms can be made. Representatives of schools and universities have told us that they have known able young men who might have done well in local government, but who have been diverted to other channels simply because they did not know how to enter the service of local authorities. Nor is this all. Excellent work has been done by individual local authorities in the recruitment and training of their officers, but the value of this work is dispersed through the lack of machinery for passing on the results to other local authorities. A central service of informed advice would be invaluable. Local authorities would find it useful to compare the practice of the civil service, of large business firms, of other countries, in the management of staff, and this would naturally be done by a central committee. We have no hesitation in saying that a central advisory body would provide one of the most effective means of securing an improved service."

"158. Functions and constitution of the committee.—We contemplate that the committee should ordinarily act in a purely advisory capacity, except so far as they may be used as agents by authorities."

3. Unfortunately, while the London County Council and certain Associations have ndorsed this recommendation, it has not as yet proved possible to secure its acceptnce by all the Associations. In the absence of general agreement, and particularly f the support of the Association of Municipal Corporations, it seems better to uspend any steps in this direction for the present. It has, however, become clear, n the correspondence and discussions which have taken place, that there is widepread, and in some cases unanimous, support for other recommendations of the ommittee (a).

4. Many of these recommendations have, in fact, already been accepted by local uthorities for their own guidance. In particular, recommendations 1, 2, 3, 4, and 4, which relate to matters covered by the model standing orders issued by the Minister on December 31st, 1934, for the guidance of local authorities, are applied n many areas as the result of the adoption of standing orders substantially following he model.

5. Other recommendations which have received a large measure of support are hose numbered 5, 6, 7, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 21, and 22, and the Minister trusts that ll local authorities will give careful consideration to the issues raised. He feels that nly special and unusual circumstances would justify a local authority in disregarding hese recommendations.

6. I am to draw special attention to recommendation 11, which relates to the ecruitment of university candidates to the local government service. The Minister entirely concurs with the view of the Committee that a service so large and so far reaching as the local government service has now become loses a source of strength when, on the one hand, its possibilities are not brought to the notice of young men in their last years at the University, and, on the other, the system of recruitment generally adopted penalises in practice though not in theory candidates of this class. He realises that while the establishment of a Central Advisory Committee remains in abeyance it may sometimes be difficult to bring suitable vacancies in the service to the knowledge of these possible candidates.

Local authorities will, however, often find it desirable to keep in touch with the Appointments Boards which have been established at the Universities: a list, supplied by the University Grants Committee, is printed as Appendix II to this Circular. These Boards are understood already to be in touch with many local education authorities, and to be giving assistance as regards educational appointments, and they should be able to give similar assistance where other appointments are concerned.

(a) The suggested Committee was afterwards established, in November, 1937, under the chairmanship of Lord Phillimore. The bodies represented are the County Councils Association, the Association of Non-County Boroughs, the Urban District Councils Association, the Rural District Councils Association, the Metropolitan Boroughs Standing Joint Committee, and the London County Council. The terms of reference are "to consider general issues relating to the recruitment, qualifications, training, promotion, and grading of local government officers, and to advise local authorities thereon."

OFFICERS

In this connection, local authorities should bear in mind that they are now substantial contributors to University funds, and it is (as Sir Henry Hadow's Committee pointed out) illogical to spend money on higher education while not securing the full advantage of employing persons so educated.

7. As has been said, the recommendations of the Committee are set out in Appendix I to this Circular (a). Every local authority is, however, recommended to study the whole report, and particularly, where the authority have followed the normal practice of having a Committee (under whatever name) charged specially with questions relating to their staff, to instruct that Committee, if it has not already done so, to examine the report and recommendations and see how far those recommendations can be adopted, looking to the circumstances of the authority's own district.

8. The appointment and training of local government officials is a responsibility of local authorities themselves. In this the Minister has no desire to intervene. It will be clear to them that the increasing importance and complexity of their work makes it year by year more necessary to increase the efficiency and improve the organisation of their staffs. The authoritative character of the Committee, on which the Associations of Local Authorities and the principal Associations of their officials were represented, make it his duty to urge that the most careful consideration to the Committee's conclusions shall be given.

Copies of the Report and additional copies of this Circular may be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown on the back hereof, or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
H. W. S. FRANCIS,
Director: Local Government Division.

The Town Clerk,
or
The Clerk of the Council.

APPENDIX I.

RECRUITMENT.

General Considerations and Proposals.

1. Notification of vacancies.—All vacancies should be widely notified, except where it is intended to fill them by promotion inside the office.

2. Selection.—Candidates should ordinarily be interviewed by a committee of the Council; selection by an officer should be exceptional.

3. Disqualification of interested persons.—The candidature of near relations of members or officers should be closely scrutinised; members, officers and candidates being required to disclose relationship.

4. Canvassing should invariably disqualify a candidate.

5. Probation.—All newcomers to the service should be appointed on a term of probation, should be thoroughly tested, and should be appointed to the established staff only if reports are satisfactory.

6. Security of tenure.—Before a senior officer is dismissed, notice should be given to all members of the authority, and, if the officer so requests, the notice should state the grounds of the complaint.

7. Employment of authority.—Local authorities should not authorise their officers to appoint and pay their own assistants, but should be directly responsible for the appointment and salary of every member of their staff.

(a) These should be compared with the related provisions of the model standing orders, ante, p. 3271.

Junior Clerical Officers.

8. Minimum qualifications.—Sixteen years should be the minimum age for entry and a school certificate the minimum educational qualification. Vacancies should be open to girls as well as to boys.

9. Recruitment from a higher age group.—Local authorities should recruit a certain proportion of junior clerical officers at eighteen or nineteen years of age, the larger local authorities making systematic arrangements to do so.

10. Method of recruiting clerical officers.—Junior clerical officers should preferably be recruited by open competitive examination, neighbouring local authorities combining for the purpose.

University Graduates.

11. University graduates should be systematically recruited by the larger local authorities, and there should be central machinery for the selection of this type of candidate. Competitive examination is recommended.

Professional and Technical Officers.

12. Field of recruitment.—In recruiting their professional and technical officers, local authorities should look to all available sources, whether inside or outside the service.

13. Articled pupilage.—No premium should be required from pupils articled to officers; and the selection of pupils by officers should be subject to the authority's approval.

QUALIFICATIONS OF PRINCIPAL OFFICERS.

14. Clerks.—The essential qualification of a clerk is administrative ability; a legal qualification may be convenient, but should not be insisted on to the exclusion of persons of proved administrative ability who do not possess the qualification.

To secure that sufficient officers of administrative ability are available, local authorities should broaden the basis of recruitment, provide training in administration for junior officers, and encourage the study of the principles of administration.

15. Other principal officers.—No radical change in the existing system of requiring principal officers to possess technical qualifications is suggested, but more attention should be paid to administrative ability and experience.

16. Subordinate administrative officers.—Large authorities might consider the appointment of responsible administrative assistants to the principal officers.

TRAINING AND PROMOTION.

Grades and Salary Scales.

17. Every local authority should adopt a scheme of grading and salary scales. The grades of different authorities should as far as possible be comparable.

Variety of Experience.

18. Selected clerical officers should be given experience of different departments. Freer movement of clerical officers between different authorities is also desirable, and senior clerical vacancies should ordinarily be advertised. Universal superannuation schemes are required.

The Use of Examinations.

19. An examination bar.—Local authorities should require junior officers to pass a qualifying examination before they will be considered eligible for promotion from the general grade.

20. Nature of the examinations.—The examinations qualifying officers for promotion from the general grade should be either the first part of a recognised technical examination; or an administrative examination. Local authorities should combine to secure that an administrative examination of suitable standard is available.

Promotion.

21. Method of promotion.—Principal officers should keep records of the progress of all officers in their department, and these records should be referred to the appropriate committee if the officer is either unusually promising, or not up to standard.

22. Grants, increments, special leave.—Grants or increments might be made to officers obtaining approved qualifications. Grants might also be made to educational institutions providing approved courses, on condition that selected officers are allowed to attend. Special leave should be granted in exceptional cases.

OFFICERS

TECHNICAL QUALIFICATIONS.

23. Several questions arise and a thorough investigation is required. The investigation should be carried out by a central body, representative of local authorities.

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS.

Establishment Committees.

24. All questions affecting the recruitment, qualifications, training and promotion of officers, should be assigned to a central committee in every local authority.

A Central Advisory Committee.

25. The principal need of the service is a standing body charged with the supervision of all questions affecting officers. The associations of local authorities and the London County Council should combine to appoint a standing committee for this purpose.

HEALTH VISITORS: TRAINING.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to say that, as a result o revision of the Rules of the Central Midwives Board for the training of midw he has had under consideration the midwifery training which Health Visitors sh in future be required to undertake.

2. Hitherto, as the Council are aware, under the conditions of grant relating t training of Health Visitors set out in Memorandum 101/M.C.W. (a), dated Febr 1925, Health Visitors have been required to obtain, or to declare in writing intention of obtaining, the Certificate of the Central Midwives Board. Unde above-mentioned Rules, which the Minister has approved, the Central Mid Board have extended the period of training for intending midwives and divid into two parts, (i) a first period of six months in the case of pupils who are tr nurses and of eighteen months in all other cases, and (ii) a second period extending over six months in all cases. OFF

3. The Minister, after consultation with the Council of the Royal Sanitary Institute, has come to the conclusion that students intending to qualify only as Health Visitors should no longer be required to obtain the Certificate of the Central Midwives Board, and he understands that the Institute propose to amend their regulations accordingly. In future, therefore, the conditions of grant laid down in Memorandum 101/M.C.W. will be construed as if for any requirement relating to the certificate of the Central Midwives Board there were substituted a requirement that intending Health Visitors shall undertake the course of midwifery training appropriate to their qualifications in the first period only referred to above, that is to say, a course of six months in the case of trained nurses and of eighteen months in all other cases. Appropriate Exchequer grant as set out in the enclosed Memorandum will continue to be available in aid of the midwifery training of Health Visitors, in addition to the grant already payable towards the cost of her training as a Health Visitor under the conditions prescribed in Memorandum 101/M.C.W.

4. Courses of instruction under the new Rules of the Central Midwives Board will begin not later than November 1st, 1938, and accordingly no pupils can enter for training under the old Rules later than September 1st, 1938, if they are trained nurses, or May 1st, 1938, if they are not trained nurses.

5. Various suggestions bearing on the training of Health Visitors have been brought to the notice of the Minister from time to time. These are receiving attention and will form the subject of a communication to local authorities at a later date.

6. A copy of this Circular has been sent to the Medical Officer of Health, and further copies of the Circular and Memorandum may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at the addresses mentioned below.

MEMO. 211/M.C.W.

MEMORANDUM AS TO THE CONDITIONS UPON WHICH GRANTS WILL BE MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH IN AID OF MIDWIFERY TRAINING.

I.—INTRODUCTION.

1. The Central Midwives Board have recently revised their rules relating to the training of midwives and have decided to extend the training and divide it into two parts (i) a first period of six months in the case of pupils who are trained nurses and of eighteen months in all other cases, and (ii) a second period extending over six months in all cases. An examination will be held after the first period of training, but only candidates successful at the examination held after the second period of training will be admitted to the Roll of Midwives. The revised rules have been approved by the Minister. No pupils will be admitted under the old rules later than May 1st, 1938, if they are not fully trained nurses, or September 1st, 1938, if they are fully trained nurses.

Provision is made under the grant conditions in Part II below for an increase in the Exchequer grant commensurate with the extended periods of training now required under the rules of the Central Midwives Board. The opportunity has

PUBLIC ANALYSTS REGULATIONS, 1939.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Authority a copy of the Public Analysts Regulations, 1939 (a). These Regulations have been made under Sections 66 (2) and 69 (3) of the Food and Drugs Act, 1938 (b), and will come into operation with the Act on October 1st next.

2. Section 66 (2) of the Act provides that no person shall be appointed a Public Analyst unless he possesses either the prescribed qualifications or such other qualifications as the Minister may approve, and, further, that no person shall be appointed Public Analyst for any area who is engaged directly or indirectly in any trade or business connected with the sale of food or drugs in that area. The Minister has prescribed qualifications in the Regulations. As indicating the qualifications which the Minister is prepared to approve other than those prescribed, I am to say that he will require evidence, satisfactory to him, that the candidate for the office of Public Analyst has attained a standard in analytical chemistry, therapeutics and microscopy equivalent to that required for the qualifications set out in the Regulations. A personal testimonial is of no value as evidence of competence, unless it is given by a person who is himself a recognised expert of high standing in the subjects in question and testifies to his personal knowledge of the proficiency of the candidate in these subjects.

It will be noted that no new departure is being made from the existing practice as set out in paragraphs 10–14 of Memorandum 36/Foods (as revised in January, 1929) issued by this Department and the Regulation of March 7th, 1900, made by the Local Government Board (which will lapse when these Regulations become operative (a)).

When the appointment of a Public Analyst is submitted for the Minister's approval, particulars of the appointment should be given on a form obtainable from the Department.

3. Section 69 (3) of the Act requires a Public Analyst to give to a person submitting a sample to him for analysis a Certificate in the prescribed form specifying the result of the analysis. The form is prescribed in these Regulations and set out in the Schedule thereto. It will replace the form contained in the First Schedule to the Food and Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928.

4. A copy of this Circular is being sent to the Medical Officer of Health and to all Public Analysts. Further copies may be obtained through any bookseller or directly from H.M. Stationery Office at the addresses shown below.

Your obedient Servant,

R. STANTON,
Assistant Secretary.

THE PUBLIC ANALYSTS REGULATIONS, 1939, DATED AUGUST 1ST, 1939, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTIONS 66 (2) AND 69 (3) OF THE FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, 1938.

Whereas it is provided by subsection (2) of section 66 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1938 (b), that no person shall be appointed a public analyst unless he possesses either the prescribed qualifications or such other qualifications as the Minister of Health may approve;

And whereas it is provided by subsection (3) of section 69 of the said Act (c) that the public analyst shall analyse as soon as practicable any sample sent to him in pursuance of that section and give to the person by whom it was submitted a certificate in the prescribed form specifying the result of the analysis:

Now therefore the Minister of Health in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the said sections and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following regulations:

1. These regulations may be cited as the Public Analysts Regulations, 1939, and shall come into operation on the first day of October, 1939.

2. The Interpretation Act, 1889 applies to the interpretation of these regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. A person shall not be qualified to be hereafter appointed as a public analyst under the Food and Drugs Act, 1938, unless either (a) he already holds an appointment as public analyst, or (b) he is the holder of the Diploma of Fellowship or Associateship of the Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain and Ireland and is also the holder of a certificate granted by that Institute after an examination conducted by them in the chemistry (including microscopy) of food, drugs and water.

[6] Here the analyst may insert at his discretion his opinion whether the analysis indicates any addition, abstraction, or deficiency of any kind and whether the addition, abstraction or deficiency (if any) was for the purpose of rendering the article portable or palatable, or of preserving it, or of improving the appearance, or was unavoidable. He may also state whether the addition, abstraction or deficiency is in excess of what is ordinary, or otherwise, and whether it is or is not, injurious to health, and add any other observations he may wish to make. Where a sample of milk is found to be deficient both in milk fat and in other milk solids the analyst should indicate how much, if any, of the milk fat deficiency he considers to be due to abstraction, allowance being made for the effect of added water. In the case of a certificate regarding milk, or any other article liable to decomposition, the analyst should specially report whether in his opinion any change had taken place in the constitution of the sample that would interfere with the analysis.

USE OF BUILDINGS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES FOR THE AUDIT OF THE ACCOUNTS OF APPROVED SOCIETIES AND PURPOSES CONNECTED THEREWITH—CIRCULAR.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, WHITEHALL, S.W.,
December 5th, 1912.

SIR,—I am directed by the Local Government Board to state that representations have been made to them by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury as to a difficulty which it is anticipated will arise in some cases in finding suitable office accommodation for conducting the audit of the accounts of approved societies under the National Insurance Act, 1911. The Board are informed that many societies have no office of their own, and that where instructions are being given to the officials of such societies by the auditors of the National Health Insurance Commission it has been found necessary to make use of private premises. Their lordships consider that it is undesirable that the proceedings of a formal audit should take place in private houses or that recourse should be had to the use of rooms on licensed premises, and the Board concur in this view.

Apart from the provisions contained in section 27 (2) of the Act, it appears to the Board to be competent to a local authority to place accommodation provided for their own meetings or for the transaction of their business at the disposal, when not otherwise required, of approved societies for the purpose of the audits referred to on terms which may enable the societies to have a temporary use of the premises without expense to the local authority.

The Board are desirous of bringing this matter under the notice of local authorities and trust that they will be willing to allow the use of their buildings for the purposes in question where the circumstances admit of their doing so.

Usually no consent on the part of the Board will be requisite to the use of the buildings in the manner suggested. In the case of a room belonging to a board of guardians, however, such consent needs to be obtained, and the Board will be ready to give it subject to the guardians reserving to themselves the power to determine the arrangement if at any time it is regarded as inconvenient.

The Board hope that local authorities will give the suggested arrangement their favourable consideration.

I am directed to add that this circular will be placed on sale, so that copies may shortly be obtained from Messrs. Wyman and Sons, Limited, Fetter Lane, E.C. either directly or through any bookseller.

ORDER IN COUNCIL APPLYING THE PETROLEUM ACTS, 1871 TO 1926, TO BISULPHIDE OF CARBON CONVEYED BY ROAD.

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 5th day of November, 1926.

PRESENT,

The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas it is provided by the Petroleum Act, 1871, that His Majesty may, from time to time, make, revoke, and vary Orders in Council directing that the said Act or any part thereof shall apply to any substance, and that the said Act or the part thereof specified in any such Order shall, during the continuance of the Order, apply to such substance, and shall be construed and have effect as if such substance had been included in the definition of Petroleum Spirit, subject inter alia to the qualification that the label on the vessel containing such substance shall be such as may be specified in that behalf in the Order:

And whereas the Petroleum Act, 1926, is to be construed as one with the Petroleum Act of 1871:

And whereas the provisions of section 1 of the Rules Publication Act, 1893, have been complied with:

Now, therefore, in pursuance of the above-mentioned provisions of the Petroleum Act, 1871, His Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order and prescribe that so much of the Petroleum Acts, 1871 to 1926, as relates to the conveyance of petroleum spirit by road shall apply to bisulphide of carbon, and that the label on the vessel or package containing bisulphide of carbon shall bear in conspicuous characters the words "Bisulphide of Carbon, Highly Inflammable," together with the name and address of the sender.

THE PETROLEUM-SPIRIT (MOTOR VEHICLES, &C.) REGULATIONS, 1929, DATED OCTOBER 28, 1929, MADE BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE UNDER SECTION 10 OF THE PETROLEUM (CONSOLIDATION) ACT, 1928, AS TO THE KEEPING AND USE OF PETROLEUM-SPIRIT FOR THE PURPOSES OF MOTOR VEHICLES, MOTOR BOATS, AIRCRAFT AND CERTAIN CLASSES OF ENGINES.

By virtue of the powers conferred on me by section 10 of the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act"), I hereby make the following Regulations:—

Exemption from Act and application of Regulations.

1.—(1) Subject as hereinafter provided, the keeping and use of petroleum-spirit by persons intending to use it for the purpose of any motor vehicle, motor boat or aircraft, or of any class of engine specified in the Schedule to these Regulations and not either wholly or partly for the purposes of sale, shall be exempt from the operation of sections 1 to 9 inclusive of the Act (a), and petroleum-spirit and kept used by persons intending to use it as aforesaid shall be kept and used in accordance with the regulations hereinafter contained:

(2) Provided that on the application of any person intending to use petroleum-spirit as aforesaid, the local authority may grant a petroleum-spirit licence authorising

4. Any vessel used for the purpose of keeping the petroleum-spirit, not being the fuel tank of a motor vehicle, motor boat, aircraft or engine, shall bear, in conspicuous characters, the words " petroleum-spirit " and the words " highly inflammable " indelibly marked on the vessel or, where that is impracticable, on a metal label attached thereto.

5. The petroleum-spirit shall not be kept in any storage place which does not comply with the following requirements, that is to say :—

(a) the storage place shall, unless it is in the open air, be effectively ventilated to the open air :

(b) there shall, unless the storage place is in the open air, be an entrance thereto direct from the open air :

(i) is constructed of material not readily inflammable ; and

(ii) has no opening therein, so, however, that in the case of a storage place in which the only petroleum-spirit kept, in addition to that contained in the fuel-tank of any motor vehicle, motor boat, aircraft or engine, is kept in not more than two vessels of capacity not exceeding two gallons each, there may be an opening in any such partition (not being a floor) if the opening is fitted with a self-closing door constructed of hard wood or other fire resisting material :

(e) the storage place, if in any building, shall not be situated under any staircase or under any other means of exit likely to be required to be used for escape in case of fire unless it is separated therefrom by a substantial floor or partition conforming to the requirements contained in sub-paragraphs (i) and (ii) of the last foregoing paragraph.

6. Not more than sixty gallons of petroleum-spirit shall be kept at the same time in any one storage place, and in computing for the purposes of this regulation the amount of petroleum-spirit kept in any one storage place—

(a) any petroleum-spirit contained in the fuel tank of, or otherwise carried on, any motor vehicle, motor boat, aircraft or engine for the time being within the storage place shall be deemed to be kept in the storage place ; and

(b) any two storage places not more than twenty feet apart, in the occupation of the same occupier, shall be deemed to be one storage place.

7.—(1) The petroleum-spirit shall not be kept in any vessel of capacity exceeding two gallons, not being the fuel-tank of a motor vehicle, motor-boat, aircraft or engine, unless—

(a) it is kept in a storage place situated more than twenty feet from any building, highway or public path ; and

(b) provision has been made by excavation or by the erection of retaining walls or otherwise to prevent the petroleum-spirit from flowing out of the storage place in case of fire ; and

In pursuance of Section 6 of the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928 (a), as applied by Order in Council dated January 20th, 1930, I hereby make the following Regulations (c) for the conveyance by road of vessels containing any of the gases specified in the First Schedule hereto in a compressed state.

PETROLEUM

1. No cylinder shall be used for the conveyance by road of any of the said gases in a compressed state unless (1) it is constructed in accordance with the specifications contained, and has complied with the tests described, in the Second Schedule hereto; (2) the conditions contained in the following Regulations are complied with.

2. Cylinders shall be maintained in good condition and the valves shall be securely closed so as to prevent leakage.

3. Cylinders shall be so conveyed as not to project beyond the sides or ends of the vehicle. Adequate means shall be taken to prevent cylinders falling off the vehicle. This Regulation shall not apply to any cylinder containing any of the gases specified in the First Schedule in a compressed state carried exclusively for the purposes of, and attached to, the vehicle.

4. Cylinders shall be legibly marked or labelled with the name of the gas and the name and address of the person or firm by whom it was compressed.

5. The working or internal pressure in any cylinder shall not exceed 1,800 lbs. to the square inch.

6. The valves of cylinders containing carbon monoxide, coal gas, hydrogen or methane shall be protected against damage, either by the design of the cylinder or by the provision of a stout metal cap or metal cover, securely attached to the body of the cylinder. The metal cap or cover shall be so made that it is nowhere in actual contact with any part of the valve or valve body. Every valve cap or cover shall be provided with a vent of such size as to prevent any gas pressure inside the cap or cover. This Regulation shall not come into force until after a period of one year from the date of these Regulations.

7. The valves of cylinders containing carbon monoxide, coal gas, hydrogen or methane shall be provided with left handed screw threads for the pipe or other connections.*

8. Oil or similar lubricant shall not be used on any valves or other fittings of any cylinder.

9. Each cylinder shall, before being filled with gas, have been submitted by the gas compressing person or firm within the preceding two years to the hydraulic test specified in the Second Schedule. Prior to any hydraulic test the cylinder shall be thoroughly cleaned and examined externally and, so far as practicable, internally, for surface defects, corrosion and foreign matter. Where internal rust or foreign matter is observed the cylinder, prior to the hydraulic test, shall be heated to a temperature not exceeding 300° C. and again cleaned and examined. After each hydraulic test and before being taken into use the cylinder shall be thoroughly dried internally, and shall be stamped on the neck end with marks and figures indicating the person or firm and the date of test as specified in Clause 8 of the Second Schedule. Any cylinder which fails to pass the test shall not be conveyed by road when containing any compressed gas to which these Regulations apply.

10. Cylinders containing gases shall be painted with the following identification colours:

Air	grey.
Argon	blue.
Carbon monoxide	red with yellow band.
Coal gas	red.
Hydrogen	red.
Methane	red.
Neon	medium brown with black band.
Nitrogen	dark grey with black band.
Oxygen	black.

The distinguishing colour band shall be painted round the neck of the cylinder close to the valve fitting.†

* Precautions should be taken to insure that the valves of emptied cylinders are securely shut before the cylinders are loaded for conveyance. These precautions apply more especially when the cylinders have contained inflammable gases and are conveyed in closed vehicles.

† The requirements of this Regulation will be met if the instructions contained in British Engineering Standards Association Specification No. 349/1931 are followed.

This Regulation shall not come into force until after a period of one year from the date of these Regulations.

11.—(a) The owner of a vehicle used for the conveyance of cylinders containing any compressed gas to which these Regulations apply, who employs any person in connection with such conveyance, shall take measures to ensure that any such person is acquainted with and carries out the provisions of Regulation 3.

(b) No person shall deliver or cause to be delivered any cylinder containing any compressed gas to which these Regulations apply to any carrier for the purpose of conveyance by road :

(i) unless he shall have brought to the notice of such carrier the provisions of Regulation 3 ;

(ii) unless he delivers any such cylinder or causes it to be delivered, as the case may be, to the carrier in such a state as to comply with the requirements of these Regulations.

12. In proceedings for a breach of Regulation 1 in respect of the material and manufacture of cylinders it shall be a good defence to produce a certificate from the makers stating that the cylinders were manufactured in accordance with the requirements of the Second Schedule.

13. These Regulations shall not apply to the conveyance of :

(iii) Any air receiver which forms part of a compressing plant.

14. If the Secretary of State is satisfied that in respect of any class of cylinders or any mode of conveyance any of the requirements of these Regulations may be safely suspended or modified, he may by Order authorise such suspension or modification for such period or under such conditions as he may think fit. Any such Order may be revoked by the Secretary of State at any time.

15. These Regulations shall come into force on the 1st day of September, 1931, and may be cited as the Gas Cylinders (Conveyance) Regulations, 1931.

J. R. CLYNES,
One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

(b) Before the necking or closing in operations, each cylinder shall be examined for maximum and minimum thickness and for external and internal surface defects,

(c) Cylinders after manufacture shall be raised to a temperature not less than 820° C. and not exceeding 850° C. in a furnace, remaining within the furnace only for a time sufficient to ensure that all parts of the cylinder are at the same temperature. Before the temperature falls appreciably, they shall be removed and allowed to cool in still air in such a position that they are not subjected to draughts.

(e) Impact tests shall be made in the case of cylinders of not less than 6 inches diameter. Six test pieces shall be cut, three in a longitudinal and three in a transverse direction, from the same cylinder from which the test pieces were taken in accordance with paragraph (d), and machined to the dimensions shown in Fig. 1 (a). The mean energy required for fracture shall be not less than 3 foot-pounds for the transverse test pieces and 5 foot-pounds for the longitudinal test pieces.

(f) Another finished cylinder in every batch, or, where the number of cylinders in any batch exceeds one hundred, one cylinder in every hundred shall be subjected to and prove satisfactory under a flattening test as follows:

The middle part of the cylinder shall be placed between two compression blocks having flat faces $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches wide with corners rounded to $\frac{1}{4}$-inch radius, and pressure shall be applied until cracks appear at the folded surface between the compression blocks. The test shall be deemed to be unsatisfactory if the distance between the faces of the blocks in contact with the cylinder, when cracks appear, is more than eight times the wall thickness of the cylinder. If the cylinders are of such length that from the cylinders used for the tests in paragraphs (d) and (e) above there can be obtained a parallel portion four diameters long, this parallel portion may be used for the flattening test.

3. *Specification B.

(a) The steel shall be made by the acid or basic open hearth process and shall have the following composition:

Carbon	0·20 to 0·25 per cent.
Manganese	0·25 to 0·75 per cent.
Silicon	Not to exceed 0·2 per cent.
Sulphur	Not to exceed 0·045 per cent.

(d) Tensile tests shall be made on the material of one finished cylinder in every batch or, where the number of cylinders in any batch exceeds one hundred, from one finished cylinder in every hundred. The tensile tests shall be made on a bar cut longitudinally from the finished cylinder, of the form and dimensions shown in Figure 2 (b).

The yield stress shall be not less than 15 tons per square inch.

Provided that, if the yield stress is less than 17 tons per square inch, the hydraulic stretch test to be applied to the completed cylinders of that batch, in accordance with the provisions of Clause 6, shall be carried out by the manufacturers of the cylinders by the "water jacket" method.*

The ultimate stress shall be not less than 28 tons per square inch nor more than 33 tons per square inch.

(e) Another finished cylinder in every batch, or, where the number of cylinders in any batch exceeds one hundred, one cylinder in every hundred shall be subjected to and prove satisfactory under a flattening test as follows:

The middle part of the cylinder shall be placed between two compression blocks having flat faces $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches wide with corners rounded to $\frac{1}{4}$-inch radius, and pressure shall be applied until cracks appear at the folded surface between the compression blocks. The test shall be deemed to be unsatisfactory if the distance between the faces of the blocks in contact with the cylinder, when cracks appear, is more than four times the wall thickness of the cylinder. If the cylinders are of such length that from the cylinders used for the tests in paragraph (d) above there can be obtained a parallel portion four diameters long, this parallel portion may be used for the flattening test.

(a) The steel shall contain not more than 0·25 per cent. of carbon and not less than 99 per cent. of total iron.

(b) The ultimate stress of the steel shall be not less than 26 tons per square inch and not more than 33 tons per square inch. The ultimate elongation shall be not less than 1·2 inches on a test piece of 8-inch gauge length. The test piece shall be cut from a finished cylinder.

5. The thickness of the cylinder wall of cylinders made to specifications A and B shall not be less than the value of t (in inches) as given by the following formula:

Where p = maximum working pressure (1,800 lbs. per square inch).
D = external diameter in inches.
f = 22,400 pounds per square inch for cylinders made to specification A and for cylinders made to Admiralty specification, and 17,920 pounds per square inch for cylinders made to specification B.

(Note).—The formula in use for wrought iron, lap welded cylinders and for steel cylinders, lap welded or of seamless construction made to Specification C, was

Where f = 14,560 pounds per square inch for wrought iron cylinders.

6. Each completed cylinder when ready to be put into service shall be subjected to a hydraulic stretch test. The proof pressure applied in this test shall be 3,000 lbs. per square inch.

* Details of the "water jacket" method will be found in the Fourth Report of the Gas Cylinders Research Committee, to be obtained direct from H.M. Stationery Office or through any Bookseller.

PETROLEUM

No pressure greater than the working pressure shall have been applied to any cylinder before the test.

The permanent stretch shown by the test shall not exceed 10 per cent. of the total stretch under the test pressure. Should the permanent stretch exceed 10 per cent. of the total stretch under the proof pressure, the cylinder may be re-heat treated and if it then passes the test it may be retained in service.

The re-heat treatment applied shall be, in the case of cylinders made to Specification A and to Admiralty specification that given in paragraph (c) of Specification A and in the case of cylinders made to Specification B and C that given in paragraph (c) of Specification B.

7. Cylinders made by British manufacturers prior to the year 1921 to Admiralty specification shall be of steel having from 0·43 to 0·53 per cent. of carbon and may be conveyed by road provided :

(i) In the case of complete cylinders that they have been re-heat treated and tested by the manufacturers with satisfactory results.

(ii) In the case of cylinders made by cutting the original cylinder into lengths, that the new cylinders as constructed withstand the foregoing mechanical and hydraulic tests for finished cylinders, except that the flattening test may be limited to a flattening to 10 thicknesses of the cylinder walls without fracture occurring.

8. Each cylinder shall be permanently and visibly marked with :

(b) Date of last hydraulic test. This may be indicated by the month and year or by the year with a symbol to denote the quarter of the year.

(c) For cylinders manufactured after the date of these Regulations—a mark denoting the specification to which the cylinder has been manufactured. This mark may be that of the British Engineering Standards Association Specification No. 399/1930 (B.S.S. No. 399/1930) for cylinders to Specification "A" or Specification No. 400/1931 (B.S.S. No. 400/1931) for cylinders to Specification "B."

The marks shall be stamped on the neck end of the cylinder with the exception of the manufacturer's mark, which may be on the base.

9. If, for any reason, the re-heat treatment of any cylinder becomes necessary, that specified in Clause 6 above shall be applied. After any such re-heat treatment the cylinder shall be thoroughly examined and subjected to the hydraulic stretch test.

1. Any vehicle on which petroleum-spirit is conveyed shall be constructed strongly and with sides and back of adequate height, and shall be maintained in good condition.

Provided that in the case of a horse-drawn vehicle the foregoing requirement as to the sides and back of the vehicle shall not apply if the following conditions are observed, viz. : (a) the load must be securely fastened to the vehicle ; (b) all vessels of two gallons capacity and under must be packed in wooden cases.

The load shall be protected from sparks, lighted matches or fire from without by a cover, whether fixed or loose, of fire resisting material.

2.—(i) The petroleum-spirit shall be conveyed in strong metal vessels in good condition and securely closed so as to prevent leakage.

(ii) If empty vessels which have contained petroleum-spirit are carried on the same vehicle with petroleum-spirit, they shall be securely closed.

All vessels shall be so packed as not to project beyond the sides or back of the vehicle.

3. If the vehicle is mechanically-driven, the engine, which shall be of an internal combustion type, fuel tank and electric batteries shall be effectively screened from the body of the vehicle by a fire-resisting shield carried up above the height of the load and down to within twelve inches of the ground, and the exhaust shall be wholly in front of this shield.

Provided that—

(1) The fuel tank of a vehicle other than an articulated vehicle may be behind the shield if,

(a) a fuel feed apparatus, placed in front of the shield, is used to lift the contents from the fuel tank : and

(b) the fuel tank is protected from blows by a frame or by stout steel guards, and the filling hole cover is provided with a lock ; and

(2) The fuel tank of any vehicle may be behind the shield if the fuel used in the engine does not give off an inflammable vapour at a temperature of less than one hundred and fifty degrees Fahrenheit.*

If windows are provided in the shield they shall be fitted with wired glass.

A quick action cut-off valve shall be fitted to the fuel feed pipe in an easily accessible position, which shall be clearly marked.

Provided that in the event of the breakdown of any vehicle conveying petroleum-spirit, and of there not being any vehicle constructed in accordance with the requirements of this Regulation available within a reasonable time to replace it, it shall be permissible to use a vehicle not so constructed and fitted for the purpose of conveying the petroleum-spirit to its destination.

(B) PROVISIONS RELATING TO CONVEYANCE OF PETROLEUM-SPIRIT IN TANK WAGONS.

4. A tank wagon used for the conveyance of petroleum-spirit shall be constructed in accordance with the provisions contained in the Schedule, and together with its connections and fittings shall be maintained in good condition.

5. The capacity of a tank wagon shall not, in any case, exceed 2,500 gallons, nor shall the capacity exceed 1,500 gallons, nuless the general design of the vehicle used shall have been approved by order of the Secretary of State as suitable for the conveyance of quantities exceeding 1,500 gallons.

6. The filling and dipping pipes shall be kept securely closed at all times except during the operations of filling or emptying a tank wagon. Where the filling pipes are not provided with the liquid seal, the covers shall be kept locked at all times except during the operation of filling a tank wagon, and the keys shall not be carried on the wagon.

7. The space of not less than six inches required by paragraph 1 of the Schedule to be left between the fire-resisting shield and the end of the tank shall not be used to accommodate any equipment or other article.

8. During the filling or emptying of a tank wagon the following precautions shall be observed :

(i) If the wagon is mechanically-driven the engine shall be stopped the whole time the filling or emptying is proceeding and shall not be run until all tanks have been securely closed.

(ii) If the wagon is horse-drawn, the horses shall be removed and the wheels securely scotched before the filling or emptying is begun.

(iii) Adequate provision shall be made to prevent the accumulation of a dangerous static charge of electricity.

(iv) The vehicle shall be constantly attended by a competent person.

9. Petroleum-spirit in cans or other packages shall not be conveyed on any tank wagon used for the conveyance of petroleum-spirit unless it is so constructed (composite vehicle) as to comply with the conditions applicable to conveyance on wagons other than tank wagons as well as with the conditions applicable to conveyance

* The standard method for testing Flash Points of such fuels is given in " Standard Methods of Testing Petroleum and its Products," published by the Institution of Petroleum Technologists.

PETROLEUM

on tank wagons, and unless, if intended to be used for conveying petroleum-spirit to or from any place within the Administrative County of London or County Borough of West Ham, it has been approved by a Government Inspector.

(C) PROVISIONS OF GENERAL APPLICATION.

10.—(1) Every vehicle while engaged in the conveyance of petroleum-spirit by road, shall—

(a) if the quantity exceeds 1,500 gallons or if it is being trailed by another vehicle, be constantly attended by at least two persons; or

(b) in any other case, be constantly attended by at least one person;

Provided that, while any vehicle so engaged is halted on a highway, it shall not in any case be necessary for the vehicle to be constantly attended by more than one person.

(2) A vehicle so engaged as aforesaid shall, while halted elsewhere than on a highway, be exempt from the requirements of paragraph (1) of this Regulation if and so long as the vehicle is in some place for the time being approved for the purpose by the local authority empowered under the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, to grant petroleum-spirit licences.

11. Trailers other than articulated vehicles.—(a) A trailer not exclusively used or intended to be used exclusively for conveying petroleum-spirit shall not be attached to any vehicle conveying petroleum-spirit;

(b) A trailer conveying petroleum-spirit shall not be attached to any vehicle except to a motor tractor or to a vehicle used or intended to be used exclusively for conveying petroleum, and not more than one trailer shall be so attached. A trailer shall have two axles. The total quantity of petroleum and petroleum-spirit together conveyed shall not exceed 2,500 gallons.

In the case of a tractor being wider than the trailer, the shield shall be carried back to a distance of not less than two feet on each side unless the sides of the trailer themselves provide an efficient fire-resisting shield. The exhaust shall be wholly in front of the shield.

(f) No trailer attached to a tank wagon shall be employed within the administrative County of London or the County Borough of West Ham.

12. In these regulations the tank forming part of a tank wagon or tank trailer means one or more tanks on the same chassis and any limitation herein prescribed on the capacity of a tank shall be construed so as to permit of the tank containing the amount specified under varying degrees of temperature.

13. No fire or artificial light capable of igniting inflammable vapour shall be allowed on any vehicle or trailer conveying petroleum-spirit, nor shall any explosive substance or substance or article capable of causing fire or explosion be carried on such vehicle or trailer.

16. A person while on or attending to any vehicle or trailer conveying petroleum-spirit shall not smoke.

17. Petroleum-spirit shall not be conveyed on any public vehicle whilst carrying passengers.

18. All persons engaged in the loading, unloading or conveyance of petroleum-spirit shall observe all precautions necessary for preventing fire or explosion.

19. It shall be illegal on a highway to fill or replenish with petroleum-spirit the fuel tanks of mechanically-driven vehicles direct from vehicles carrying petroleum-spirit in bulk, except with the sanction of the local authority under the Act, and then only at such places and under such conditions as the local authority may approve.

Provided that, during such filling or replenishment of the fuel tank of any public vehicle used for the conveyance of passengers, no passenger shall be allowed to remain in the vehicle.

20. Care shall be taken to prevent any petroleum-spirit escaping into any drain or sewer.

21. The owner of a vehicle or trailer used for the conveyance of petroleum-spirit, who employs any person in connection with such conveyance, shall furnish a copy of these Regulations to, or affix a copy thereof in some place where it can be conveniently read by any such person and shall take all other measures necessary to ensure that any such person is acquainted with and carries out the provisions of these Regulations.

Regulations 3 and 14 shall not apply to a vehicle used in accordance with the foregoing conditions.

23. These Regulations shall not apply to the conveyance of petroleum-spirit on any vehicle for use only in the propulsion of that vehicle.

24. These Regulations shall not apply to the conveyance of petroleum-spirit on a vehicle (not being a tank wagon or a public vehicle used for the conveyance of passengers,* or a vehicle used for hawking of petroleum-spirit to which Regulation 22 applies) in a quantity not exceeding thirty gallons of petroleum-spirit in securely closed containers of a capacity not exceeding two gallons or in securely closed metal cans or drums of a capacity not exceeding ten gallons, or in a quantity not exceeding fifty gallons of petroleum-spirit contained in a single securely closed steel barrel.

of such local authority for the purpose of ascertaining that the provisions of these Regulations are duly observed.

(ii) Every such local authority shall institute and carry on such proceedings in respect of breaches of the Regulations as may be necessary to secure the observance thereof; and an inspector appointed by the local authority for the purposes of the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, may, if so authorised by the local authority institute and carry on any proceedings under the Regulations on behalf of the authority.

(iii) The expenses incurred by a local authority in the enforcement of the Regulations shall be defrayed as part of the general expenses of the local authority under the Public Health Acts or in Scotland out of the Burgh General Assessment in the case of Burghs, and the General County Purposes Assessment in the case of Counties.

27. If the Secretary of State is satisfied that in respect of any class of vehicle or any mode of conveyance any of the requirements of these Regulations may be safely suspended or relaxed, he may by Order authorise such suspension or relaxation for such period or under such conditions as he may think fit. Any such Order may be revoked by the Secretary of State at any time.

28. These Regulations may be cited as the Petroleum-Spirit (Conveyance) Regulations, 1932, and shall come into force on the first day of February, 1933, as from which date the Regulations made on October 18th, 1926 (a), and on May 31st, 1927 (b), shall be revoked.

and (iii) the steel used in the construction of the cylinder has been made by a manufacturer approved by the Secretary of State for the purpose of these Regulations.

2.—(a) Each cylinder and valve or other fitting for the connection of the cylinder with the pipe line shall be of forged steel, and shall be provided with left handed screw threads at the point of connection with the pipe line.

(b) Each cylinder or said valve or other fitting shall be fitted with a fusible plug designed to fuse at 150° C. or with a bursting disc designed to shear at a pressure of 4,500 lbs. to the square inch.

Prior to any hydraulic test the cylinder shall be thoroughly cleaned and examined externally, and so far as practicable, internally for surface defects, corrosion and foreign matter. Where internal rust or foreign matter is observed the cylinder, prior to the hydraulic test, shall be heated to a temperature not exceeding 300° C. and again cleaned and examined. After each hydraulic test and before being taken into use the cylinder shall be clearly and permanently marked on the neck end with marks and figures indicating the person or firm by whom the test was carried out and the date of the test as specified in paragraph 9 of the Second Schedule. Any cylinder not passing the test shall be destroyed.

5. Except as provided in Regulation 4 and paragraph 7 of the Second Schedule no cylinder after completion of manufacture shall be subject to any heat treatment process or be mechanically altered in any way.

9. The owner of a vehicle fitted with cylinders for gas propulsion who employs any person in connection with such vehicle, shall take measures to ensure that any such person is acquainted with and carries out the provisions of these Regulations within the scope of his duties.

10. In proceedings for a breach of Regulation 1 in respect of the material and manufacture of cylinders it shall be a good defence to produce a certificate from the makers stating that the cylinders and the steel of which they were constructed were manufactured in accordance with the requirements of Regulation 1 and the Second Schedule.

11. If the Secretary of State is satisfied that in respect of any class of cylinders or any mode of conveyance any of the requirements of these Regulations may be safely suspended or modified, he may by Order authorise such suspension or modification for such period or under such conditions as he may think fit. Any such Order may be revoked by the Secretary of State at any time.

12. Nothing in the Gas Cylinders (Conveyance) Regulations, 1931 (a), shall apply to cylinders to which these Regulations apply.

13. The requirements of these Regulations shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any requirements of Regulations made by the Minister of Transport under powers conferred upon him by the Road Traffic Act or any other Act.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

Coal gas, carbon monoxide, hydrogen and methane.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

Quality of Material.

1. The steel used in the manufacture of the cylinders shall be made by the acid or basic open-hearth process or in electric furnaces.

Chemical Composition.

2. The composition of the steel used in the manufacture of the cylinders shall be left to the discretion of the manufacturer, provided that the proportion of—

Silicon shall not exceed 0·30 per cent.
Sulphur shall not exceed 0·04 per cent.
Phosphorus shall not exceed 0·03 per cent.

Steel Maker's Certificate.

3. A certificate shall be supplied by the steel maker to the cylinder maker that the material from which the billets have been produced has been made by one of the processes specified in paragraph 1 and giving details of the chemical analysis.

Manufacture of Cylinders.

4. The cylinders shall be solid drawn and no welding shall be permitted.

Thickness of Cylinder Walls.

5. The thickness of the cylinder wall shall be not less than the value of t (in inches), given by the following formula:

$$t = \frac{pD}{2f + D} = 0{\cdot}026D$$

where p = the maximum working pressure of 3,000 lbs. per square inch.
f = the maximum working stress of 56,000 lbs. per square inch.
D = external diameter in inches.

The neck of the cylinder shall be of sufficient strength to prevent permanent distortion during the fitting of the valves or other connection.

Examination of Cylinder before Closing-in.

6. Each cylinder shall be examined before the closing-in operations for maximum and minimum thickness and for external and internal surface defects. The tolerance on wall thickness shall be + 20 per cent. — 0.

Heat Treatment.

7. The details of the heat treatment to which the cylinders are to be subjected are left to the discretion of the manufacturer, but must be such as to enable the cylinders and material to pass the tests detailed in paragraphs 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15.

Oil and Grease.

8. No oil or grease in any form shall be used inside or outside the cylinder after heat treatment, and all particles of grit, filings, or other matter which may have collected inside the cylinder in course of manufacture, heat treatment or testing, shall be removed completely.

(b) Date of the last hydraulic test; this may be indicated by the month and year, or by the year with a symbol to denote the quarter of the year,
(c) A mark indicating the Specification in this Schedule, viz., H.O.G.P.; or corresponding British Standards Institution Specification,
(d) A mark by the Authority approved by the Secretary of State denoting that the supervision required by Regulation 1 has been exercised.

The permanent marks specified in this paragraph shall be put on the neck end of the cylinder; they shall not be put on the parallel portion or base of the cylinder.

Tensile Test.

10. Tensile tests shall be made on the material of one finished cylinder in every batch* or when the number in any batch exceeds 100, on the material of at least one finished cylinder in every 100.

The tests shall be made on a strip, cut longitudinally from the finished cylinder, of the form shown in Fig. 1 (a).

In preparing the test pieces, only the edges shall be machined; the face and back of the test piece shall each represent the surface of the cylinder as manufactured.

The elongation shall be measured on a gauge length which is equal to—

where t = measured average thickness of specimen, in inches.

NOTE:—This gauge length has a value of 6 inches for a cylinder of 8 inches external diameter and having the designed thickness (0·21 inch) as given by the formula in paragraph 5.

The results of the tensile test shall conform to the following conditions:

Yield Stress: Not less than 45 tons per square inch.
Ultimate Tensile Strength: Not less than 55 tons per square inch.
Elongation on specified gauge length: 7 per cent.

Impact Test.

11. Impact test pieces shall be cut from the same cylinder as that used for the tensile test (paragraph 10).

Six test pieces shall be cut—three in a longitudinal and three in a transverse direction—and machined to the dimensions shown in Fig. 2 (b). The energy required for any single fracture shall not be less than 4·5 ft. lbs. for a transverse test piece, and 10 ft. lbs. for a longitudinal test piece.

12. One finished cylinder in every batch or when the number in any batch exceeds 100, one finished cylinder in every 100, shall be subjected to a flattening test as follows:

The middle part of the empty cylinder shall be placed between two compression blocks having flat faces $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches wide with corners rounded to a $\frac{1}{4}$ inch radius, and pressure applied until cracks appear at the folded surface of the cylinder between the compression blocks.

The distance between the faces of the blocks in contact with the cylinder, when cracks appear, shall not be more than twelve times the wall thickness of the cylinder.

If the cylinders are of such length that from the cylinder used for the tensile and impact tests (paragraphs 10 and 11) there can be obtained, in addition to the tensile and impact test pieces, a parallel portion 4 diameters long, this parallel portion can be used for the flattening test.

Bend Test.

13. Cold bend tests shall be made on six strips cut from the same cylinder as that used for the tensile and impact tests; three strips shall be cut in the longitudinal direction and three in the circumferential direction. Each strip shall be one inch in width and machined

* By a batch is meant a group of cylinders of similar analysis heat treated in the same manner and at the same temperature.

on the edges only. Each strip shall be bent cold through 180° round a radius tool of which the radius shall not exceed four times the thickness of the test specimen.

The material shall be deemed to have passed the test if no cracks appear.

Hydraulic Streich Test.

14. Each completed cylinder shall be subject to a hydraulic stretch test, by the "water-jacket"* method. The proof pressure applied internally in this test shall be 4,500 lbs. per square inch. No pressure greater than the working pressure shall have been applied to the cylinder before the test. The cylinder shall be deemed to have passed the test if the permanent stretch is not greater than 2 per cent. of the amount of the increased temporary stretch under the proof pressure.

Hydraulic Test to Destruction.†

15. One finished cylinder in every batch, or when the number in any batch exceeds 100, one finished cylinder in every 100, shall be subjected to a hydraulic test to destruction,† or to a pressure exceeding 6,600 lbs. per square inch. The bursting pressure shall not be less than 6,600 lbs. per square inch. The cylinder must in any case be destroyed.

Record of Test.

16. A record shall be kept of all tests made at the cylinder-maker's works and copies forwarded to the purchaser of the cylinder.

In pursuance of Section 6 of the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, as applied by Order in Council dated November 5th, 1926, I hereby make the following regulations for the conveyance of Bisulphide of Carbon by road:

1. Bisulphide of Carbon shall not be conveyed except—
   (a) In steel or iron containers each of a capacity not exceeding 50 gallons, constructed in accordance with the specification contained in the First Schedule, maintained in good condition and securely closed so as to prevent leakage; or
   (b) in luted and tied-over stoppered bottles, each containing not more than 7 lbs. securely packed in strong wooden cases in sawdust, kieselguhr, or other suitable material. Each bottle shall be separated from other bottles by wooden partitions and the total weight of bisulphide of carbon in any one case shall not exceed 30 lbs.; or

Where the position of the bung renders it necessary for containers such as barrels or drums to be carried on their sides in order that the bung may be uppermost, each container shall, unless packed in a strong wooden perforated case or crate, be carried on a cradle or on runners fixed to the floor of the vehicle. The load shall be securely fastened to the vehicle by ropes or otherwise, unless sides and back of adequate height are provided.

* Details of the "water-jacket" method will be found in the Fourth Report of the Gas Cylinders Research Committee, to be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office or through any bookseller.

PROVISIONAL ORDERS UNDER THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1875.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH, WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
September 1*st*, 1920.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose herewith copies of instructions which he has had prepared for the assistance of local authorities in making application for Provisional Orders under the Public Health Act, 1875.

I am to point out that Standing Order 193 (A) of the House of Commons provides that no Bill originating in that House for confirming a Provisional Order shall be read the first time after Whitsuntide; and experience shows that, unless this date is strictly adhered to, it will probably be impossible for Bills to confirm Provisional Orders to reach the House of Lords by the date necessary to ensure compliance with the Lords' Sessional Order relating to the second reading of such Bills.

* The standard method for testing Flash Points of such fuels is given in "Standard Methods of Testing Petroleum and its Products," published by the Institution of Petroleum Technologists.

PRO-VISIONAL ORDERS

The Minister has consequently determined that all applications for Provisional Orders under the Act referred to must be received by him not later than the dates mentioned in the Provisional Order instructions, and it must be clearly understood that those dates are fixed as the latest at which applications for such Orders can be received, if it is wished that the Orders should be confirmed during the Session of 1921. It is, however, very desirable that, wherever practicable, applications should be made earlier, and the Minister would impress on every local authority who may propose to apply for a Provisional Order the importance of making their application as soon as they are in a position to furnish the requisite particulars.

It is particularly desirable that applications for Provisional Orders to alter Local Acts should be made at the earliest possible date. These applications generally require much consideration, and more attention can be given to them in the autumn than is possible during the earlier part of the following year.

The Minister has revised the instructions previously issued relating to these applications, and particular attention is drawn to paragraph 7 of the revised instructions (B).

I am to add that, in dealing with applications for the sanction by the Minister of the costs incurred by a local authority in promoting or opposing a Provisional Order under section 298 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the Minister will require that such costs shall be taxed by the taxing officer of one of the Houses of Parliament. It will not, therefore, be necessary to submit such costs for taxation by the Clerk of the Peace.

In connection with the question of costs the Minister thinks it necessary to draw attention to the fact that one of the advantages which should attach to procedure by Provisional Order as compared with procedure by Private Bill is the opportunity of saving expense which the former method affords. This advantage is largely discounted if, instead of conducting their case at a local inquiry with the assistance of their officers, who are usually perfectly capable of placing the facts before the inspector appointed to hold the inquiry, local authorities employ counsel for the purpose.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. J. WILLIS,
Principal Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Local Authority.

PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS A (a).

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO APPLICATIONS TO THE MINISTER OF HEALTH FOR PROVISIONAL ORDERS UNDER SECTIONS 176 AND 279 OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1875.

Applications for Provisional Orders under Section 176 (b) to put in force the compulsory powers of the Lands Clauses Acts (c).

1. (a) The application must be made by a petition under the seal of the local authority, containing the particulars required by section 176 (3) of the Public Health Act, 1875. In the case of a rural district council requiring lands for the purposes

(a) These instructions are still in force, and are therefore retained in this edition, but in practice ss. 176 and 279 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (now s. 160 of the L. G. A., 1933, ante, p. 978, and ss. 2, 6 and 8 of the P. H. A., 1936, ante, pp. 5, 10, 13) are less convenient than the Public Works Facilities Act, 1930 (printed in a later volume of this work), and these instructions will therefore be seldom required so long as that Act is continued by Parliament (see s. 8 thereof). As printed here, the regulations are shortened by omitting certain matter which also occurs in Instructions B, post.

of two or more contributory places it is not necessary (unless special circumstances would lead to saving of expense) that a separate application should be made or separate proceedings taken as regards each contributory place. The lands proposed to be purchased should be specified in the petition by inserting therein before the prayer of the petition a copy of the book of reference (see Instruction 4), amended, if necessary, to show any changes ascertained between the preparation of the reference and the sealing of the petition, and any necessary corrections. The petition must also indicate whether the several owners, lessees and occupiers assent, dissent, are neuter, or have not replied to the notices, and this information may conveniently be given by inserting additional columns.

(b) Where it is only intended to carry sewers or water mains into, through, or under lands, such lands should not be included in the petition, as the local authority are empowered by the Public Health Act to carry sewers or water mains into, through, or under lands without purchasing the lands.

2. (a) Attention is drawn to the provision in section 176 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which empowers local authorities to give in the months of September and October, or of October and November, the advertisements and notices which are required before they can apply for a Provisional Order to enable them to obtain lands by compulsory purchase. The local authority should avail themselves of this power as far as practicable, so that the petition may be presented at an earlier date, and so as to prevent the possible loss of a Parliamentary session in the event of errors being discovered too late to be remedied.

(b) The petition must be presented not later than the 31*st of October if the advertisements were published in September; not later than the* 30*th November if they were published in October; and not later than the* 18*th December if they were published in November.*

3. (a) It has been found in some instances that there has been a misapprehension as to the period within which the advertisements and notices prescribed by section 176 of the Public Health Act must be given. It is essential that the three consecutive weeks in which the publication takes place should all be included in the same month, whichever of the three months is selected for the purpose. Moreover, the advertisements must be published in the same newspaper each week, and the notices to the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the lands which it is proposed to purchase must in all cases be served in the month immediately following that in which the advertisements are published.

(b) It has also been found that in some cases the deposit of the plan of the proposed undertaking at the place named in the advertisement referred to in section 176 (2) (hereinafter referred to as the "deposited plan") has not been made until after the advertisement has been published; the deposit should always be made at such time as to enable the deposited plan (and sections, if any) to be seen at all reasonable hours at the prescribed place as soon as the first advertisement appears. The plan should be marked "Deposited Plan" when deposited, and should (together with the sections, if any) remain open to inspection at all reasonable hours from the date of the deposit until the time when it is sent to the Minister of Health with the petition in accordance with Instruction 4 (b). When the deposited plan (and sections, if any) are returned by the Minister, they should be re-deposited and remain at the prescribed place and be open to inspection at all reasonable hours until the Bill to confirm the Provisional Order, if an Order is issued, has received the Royal Assent.

4. (a) As regards the deposited plan and the book of reference, the following directions must be strictly complied with:—

(i) The deposited plan, which should be carefully corrected on the ground, should show not only the lands to be purchased, and the parish in which they are situated, but also the manner in which those lands will be utilised for the purposes in view, and the position, as nearly as practicable, of any buildings, tanks, reservoirs, or other works to be erected or constructed on the lands. The position in relation to the lands of any sewers, pipes, or other works, which may be contemplated as part of the undertaking for which the lands are required, should also be shown. In the case of land required for making a new street or for widening a street, the frontage line of the new street, or of the street when widened, should be shown by a hard line of colour; and the deposited plan should be accompanied by sections showing the proposed level of the new street in relation to the adjoining lands and to any existing streets which will communicate with the new street, and showing any alteration in the levels of the streets to be widened or altered, so far as it affects lands in that street or the communication with any existing streets. In the case of any street proposed to be widened, the deposited plan should be figured so as to show the widths at all material points of the existing street, and of the street as proposed to be widened. Any tramway in such street should be accurately indicated on the plan, and the space at material points between the outer lines of the tramway and the footpath on each side of the road, both before and after the contemplated improvement, should be given.

(ii) The deposited plan should be coloured so as to distinguish the lands proposed to be actually purchased, and each parcel of land, notwithstanding that several may belong to one owner, should be separately numbered, the outside boundaries of each parcel being defined by hard lines, and the buildings (if any) on each parcel being linked into it, so that it may be seen to what properties each number applies. If the lands are described in the advertisements by reference to numbers on the ordnance map, these numbers must be shown on the deposited plan.

(iii) The book of reference should also be prepared, on the ground, at the same time as, and in conjunction with, the deposited plan; it should show the parish in which the lands are situate, each parcel of land being numbered to correspond with the deposited plan, and being described so as to show clearly what properties are covered by each number. (See Instruction 1 (a).)

(iv) A copy of the book of reference should be placed with the deposited plan at the time of deposit, for local inspection.

(b) The petition should be accompanied by a copy of the deposited plan (and section, if any) or of so much thereof as relates to the petition, by a book of reference (in duplicate), altered (if necessary) in manuscript to correspond with the copy included in the petition in accordance with Instruction 1 (a), and by the statutory declaration or declarations required by these instructions. The deposited plan (and sections, if any) should also accompany the petition for comparison with the copy, and when returned by the Minister of Health should be re-deposited in accordance with Instruction 3 (b).

(c) The deposited plan (and sections, if any) and the copy thereof, if not in book form, should be mounted on linen.

5. (a) A statutory declaration specifying the manner in which the notices under section 176 were served upon the owners, lessees, and occupiers, and the names of the persons served, should be made by the person who served them, and the service must be effected in one of the modes prescribed by section 267 of the Act. The service should be effected by a responsible person. In the event of difficulty arising in ascertaining the actual interests of several owners, lessees, or occupiers where the boundaries between lands are not well or clearly defined, and the interests may overlap, it would be well to describe the lands as belonging to all the parties who claim or who are believed to have an interest in the lands, and to serve the notices accordingly, so as to avoid possible objection to the lands being taken on the ground of want of due notice.

(b) A statutory declaration should also be made by the clerk to the local authority, showing that the other requirements of section 176 and of these instructions have been duly complied with, and the following exhibits should be annexed, viz.:—(1) Copies of the newspapers containing the advertisements; and (2) a copy of the form of notice served upon owners, lessees, and occupiers; and of the form of reply (if any).

6. In the case of land required for widening a street, the fact that the street is repairable by the inhabitants at large should be stated in the petition.

7. (a) * * * * * *

8. Where the taking of the land will not involve the acquisition of any house or houses occupied, either wholly or partially, by thirty or more persons of the working class, whether as tenants or lodgers, this fact should be stated in the affidavit, so as to show that the Standing Order does not apply.

9. Every statutory declaration and affidavit must be made or sworn before a Justice of the Peace or a Commissioner for Oaths, and must be stamped with a half-crown impressed stamp; and each exhibit to a statutory declaration or affidavit must be marked by the declarant or deponent and by the Justice of the Peace or Commissioner for Oaths, as the case may be, in the usual way.

10. Two or more local authorities cannot jointly petition for a Provisional Order to enable them to put in force the compulsory powers of the Lands Clauses Acts. Either each local authority must present a separate petition in respect of the particular lands which they require, or, if the several local authorities are combining under section 285 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for the execution of a scheme, a petition must be presented by one of them with regard to all the land required. In the latter case a copy of the agreement should accompany the application.

11. If the scheme for which it is proposed to take lands compulsorily involves works of sewerage or the laying of water mains outside the district of the local authority, they will probably find it convenient to satisfy the requirements of section 32 or section 54 of the Public Health Act when they are taking the necessary proceedings for the Provisional Order: but the advertisements and notices under those sections should be distinct from the advertisements, notices and proofs under section 176 of the Act. If this course is adopted it may have the effect of preventing delay at a subsequent stage of the proceedings in cases where advertisements and notices under section 32 or section 54 have to be issued before the works for which the land is required can be commenced. Section 53 should also be complied with, where it is intended to construct a reservoir to hold more than 100,000 gallons of water.

Applications for Provisional Orders under Section 279 for the Constitution of United Districts (b).

1. It is desirable that the local authority of each of the districts proposed to be formed into a united district should concur by resolution in the application. The resolution should specify the purposes for which the united district is to be constituted and the basis upon which the representation on the joint board and the contributions to the common fund by the constituent authorities are proposed to be settled. A copy of the resolution, certified by the clerk, should be forwarded to the Minister of Health, together with a copy of any agreement to combine which may have been executed.

2. The application should be made not later than the 18th December next, and it is desirable that it should be sent in before that date if possible.

PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS B.

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO APPLICATIONS TO THE MINISTER OF HEALTH FOR PROVISIONAL ORDERS UNDER SECTIONS 297 AND 303 OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1875 (d).

Repeal, alteration, or amendment of Local Acts or Confirming Acts.

1. The application should be made by a resolution of the local authority, asking the Minister in general terms to repeal, alter, or amend the Act, wholly or partially,

(a) This relates to plans, books of reference, etc., and is substantially similar to the corresponding provisions of Instructions B, post.

(b) 13 Halsbury's Statutes 741. Repealed; see now ss. 2, 6 and 8 of the P. H. A., 1936, ante, pp. 5, 10, 13.

PRO-VISIONAL ORDERS

as the case may require, and setting out the objects desired to be attained, and a copy of the resolution, certified by the clerk, should be forwarded to the Ministry of Health. The resolution should be sufficiently wide in its terms to cover any provisions incidental to or consequential upon the main objects of the application which may, in the course of the consideration of the case by the Ministry, prove to be required. It is suggested that the resolution might, as a general rule, be in a form to the following effect:

Resolved that the make application to the Minister of Health for the issue of a Provisional Order under sections 297 and 303 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to partially repeal, alter or amend the Act so as:—

(2) To

(3) For the several purposes of this application, or for purposes connected with, incidental to or consequent on those purposes to make any such alteration or amendment of the said local Act or of any other local Act, or of any Act confirming a Provisional Order made in pursuance of any of the sanitary Acts or of the Public Health Act, 1875, and in force in the said [borough] [district] as may be necessary or desirable.

2. The application must be received by the Ministry not later than the 15th November next, and it is very desirable that it should be sent in before the 1st October next.

3. The application should be accompanied by a King's Printers' copy of the Act, and by a statement showing the particular provisions which it is proposed should be repealed, altered or amended, the precise alterations desired, and any provisions which will require consequential alteration; and in the event of the local Act having been previously altered by Provisional Order or local Act, a reference to such Order or Act should be given. The statement should also show clearly the grounds upon which each of the proposed amendments is desired.

4. In any case in which powers are sought which deviate from, are in extension of, or are repugnant to the general law, the statement should show the circumstances peculiar to the locality which are alleged to justify the grant of the powers, and should contain a reference to any recent precedents for the grant of such powers.

5. If the powers sought can be obtained under a general Act, the reasons for not proceeding under the provisions of the general law should be fully set out in the statement.

6. If additional borrowing powers are sought, the purposes for which the powers are required should be stated, and in cases in which actual works have been decided on for which a loan will be required, estimates should be furnished, showing as far as practicable the amounts required for each purpose, together with plans and sections of the works. References should also be given to the provisions of the Acts under which the local authority claim to have power to carry out the purposes for which the borrowing powers are sought.

7. As regards gas undertakings attention is directed to the provisions of the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, and it is suggested that if a local authority desire further powers in regard to such an undertaking they should in the first instance place their proposals before the Board of Trade and ascertain whether that department could by means of a special order confer on the local authority the powers they desire.

8. If the application proposes to confer the power to acquire any land or relates to an area which is described by reference to a map or plan, the map or plan must be on a scale of not less than six inches to the mile and must accompany the application.

9. In all cases in which plans, etc., are deposited, Standing Order 49 of the House of Commons and Standing Order 47 of the House of Lords respectively must be complied with.

10. In the case of any proposal to acquire land, Standing Order 48 of the House of Commons must also be complied with, and an affidavit must be supplied for production to the examiner of Standing Orders, in proof that the requirements of those Standing Orders have been complied with, or that Standing Order 48 does not apply, as the case may be. This affidavit must be sworn before a Justice of the Peace or a Commissioner for Oaths, and stamped with a half-crown impressed stamp, and must state definitely that the plans, sections, books of reference or maps deposited at the Private Bill office and at the office of the Clerk of the Parliaments respectively, in compliance with the Standing Orders above referred to, are, in accordance with those Orders, duplicates of those deposited at the Ministry of Health.

Extracts from Standing Orders.

STANDING ORDER 48 (HOUSE OF COMMONS)

"Where any Bill contains or revives or extends power to take compulsorily or by agreement any land in any local area as defined for the purposes of this Order, and such taking involves or may involve the taking in that area of any house or houses occupied either wholly or partially by thirty or more persons of the working class, whether as tenants or lodgers, the promoters shall deposit in the Private Bill office and at the office of the central authority, on or before the 21st day of December, a statement giving the description and postal address of each of such houses, its number on the deposited plans, and the number (so far as can be ascertained) of persons of the working class residing in it, and also a copy of so much of the deposited plans (if any) as relates thereto.

"This Order shall not apply where a statement in pursuance of this Order was deposited in respect of the Act, the powers of which are proposed to be revived or extended.

"For the purposes of this Order the expression 'local area' means—as respects London, the administrative county of London, as respects England and Wales (outside London) any borough, or other urban district, and elsewhere than in a borough or other urban district, any parish; . . .

"The expression 'house' means any house or part of a house occupied as a separate dwelling.

"The expression 'working class' means mechanics, artisans, labourers, and others working for wages, hawkers, costermongers, persons not working for wages but working at some trade or handicraft without employing others except members of their own family, and persons, other than domestic servants, whose income in any case does not exceed an average of thirty shillings a week, and the families of any of such persons who may be residing with them.

"The expression 'central authority' means, as regards England and Wales, the Local Government Board (a) . . .

"The expression 'Bill' includes a Bill confirming a Provisional Order."

STANDING ORDER 49 (HOUSE OF COMMONS).

"Whenever plans, sections, books of reference or maps are deposited in the case of a Provisional Order . . . proposed to be made by any public department . . . . duplicates of the said documents shall also be deposited in the Private Bill office (b): provided that with regard to such deposits as are so made at any public department . . . after the prorogation of Parliament, and before the 30th day of November in any year, such duplicates shall be so deposited on before the 30th day of November."

N.B.—It is particularly requested that the petition, declaration, affidavit, notices, and other documents may be on foolscap paper of the usual size, and that whenever more than two copies of any of these documents are required for use, such documents may be printed, so as to facilitate examination.

"The same fees are charged to applicants and opponents at the Committee "stage in the case of opposed Confirmation Bills as in the case of Local Bills.

"No other fees are charged."

2. A standing Order was made by the House of Commons on the 30th November, 1922, as follows:

"Fees to be Paid by the Applicants for a Provisional Order.

"On the second reading of a provisional Order Bill, other than a Bill to con- "firm an Order under the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1899 "[now 1936] the applicants for each Provisional Order included in the Bill shall "be charged a fee of £15.

ADDENDUM A.

ADDENDUM TO PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS B.

EXTENSION OF TIME LIMITED BY A LOCAL ACT FOR THE COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LANDS.

If the purpose of an application for a Provisional Order is the extension of an unexpired time limit in a local Act for the compulsory purchase of lands, individual notices of the application should be served upon the owners, lessees and occupiers of the lands affected by the application. The same requirements should be observed, in regard to these notices, as would be observed under Standing Orders if the extension of time were sought in a Private Bill. In addition, the notices should state that the application will form the subject of a local inquiry, of which further notice will be given.

Where the local inquiry has already been arranged at the time of service, the notices can, of course, contain the particulars of the inquiry. There will, therefore, be advantage in communicating with the Minister before the first notices are issued.

A statutory declaration or an affidavit, specifying the manner in which the notices were served and the names and descriptions of the persons upon whom they were served, should be made in due course by each person who served them and forwarded to the Minister.

PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS C.

ALTERATIONS OF BOROUGH BOUNDARIES.

(LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1933, SECTIONS 140 AND 285.)

PROVISIONAL ORDER INSTRUCTIONS (a) FOR TOWN COUNCILS.

PART I.

Procedure.

1. Form of Application.

(i) The application, called in the Act proposals should be in the form of a memorial of the Council under the corporate seal.

(ii) It should be either printed or neostyled and in foolscap size.

(iii) For facility of reference, the information in the memorial should be arranged strictly in the order and manner set out in Part II of these Instructions.

2. Maps.

The following maps should accompany the memorial:

(i) A key map, on a scale of 1 inch to the mile (Map A) showing the main outlines of the proposals and the whole of any district of which part is scheduled for inclusion, and showing as much of the adjoining districts not so scheduled as can be conveniently shown.

(ii) An ordnance map on a scale of 6 inch to the mile (Map B) mounted on linen and folded to about 12 inch by 9 inch, showing clearly the proposed alterations of boundary. The colouring and notation defined in Appendix A, should be employed, and the items should, in so far as applicable, be clearly indicated.

(iii) If the proposals involve the constitution or alteration of wards the proposals can probably be readily indicated on Map B. If not, a separate map on a scale of 6 inch to the mile (Map C) will be required which need not include the particulars shown on Map B.

(iv) A map on a scale of 1 inch to the mile (Map D) showing the existing county electoral divisions and petty sessional divisions affected by the proposals, and the alterations proposed.

(v) A small scale diagram in distinctive colours showing the Borough and each of the areas which it is proposed to include. This diagram should be bound with or otherwise incorporated in the memorial.

3. Presentation of the Memorial.

In the consideration and making of Provisional Orders time is an essential factor. Intervals must be allowed for the notification of possible objections, the publication of notice of the local inquiry by an inspector, the proceedings at the inquiry, the preparation by the inspector of his report, the consideration of the report at the Ministry, and the drafting of the Order. The time at which the confirmation Bill must be introduced is regulated by the Standing Orders of Parliament.

It is accordingly very desirable that the department should be informed at as early a date as possible of any intended application for an Order and that the application itself should be submitted in good time before the commencement of the Parliamentary Session. The early submission of an application may also allow of an unopposed extension order being brought into operation in April of the following year instead of six or twelve months later.

4. Deposit and Distribution of Documents.

Simultaneously with the transmission of the memorial and maps to the Ministry, a duplicate of the map or maps should be deposited in:

(i) The Town Clerk's Office, and be open to inspection without payment at all reasonable hours by all local authorities or persons affected.

(a) In the case of county boroughs, these instructions apply subject to the provisions of s. 140 (3) of the Local Government Act, 1933, ante, p. 934. A county borough can proceed by way of a Provisional Order only if no objecton to that procedure is made by any local authority concerned.

PRO-
ISIONAL
RDERS

(ii) Further copies of the memorial and maps should be distributed as follows :

Ministry of Health . . .	14 copies of memorial.
Home Office	1 copy of memorial, list of Electoral Divisions and Maps A (B) * (C) * and D.
Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries	1 copy of memorial and Map B.
County Council(s)	1 copy of memorial and Map B.
All other local authorities affected .	1 copy of memorial.

Note.—The lists and documents referred to in sections 15 and 16 below (a) must accompany the copy of the memorial to the Ministry of Health but need not be furnished with the other copies, except that the Home Office should be furnished with a copy of the list of Electoral Divisions.

5. Advertisement, Notice, Objections, etc.

(i) The purport of the application and the deposit of the maps in the Town Clerk's office should be advertised in the London Gazette and in one or more local newspapers circulating in the areas affected. The advertisement in the local newspaper(s) should appear within seven days after the date of the deposit. A model form of advertisement is given in Appendix B.

(ii) Notice in writing of the deposit of the maps should be given to each local authority affected at the time when the memorial is forwarded to them.

(iii) Each local authority should at the same time be informed that, if they intend to put forward objections to the proposals, they must notify the Ministry and the Town Council within two weeks and forward a full statement of their objections to the Ministry and the Town Council within a further period of four weeks.

6. Certificate.

The Town Clerk should furnish the Ministry with a certificate in the form given in Appendix C, as soon as practicable after the deposit of the maps and the advertisement referred to in paragraph 5 (i) above.

7. Parliamentary Fees.

The following fees are charged on Provisional Order Confirmation Bills.

(i) On the second reading in the House of Lords, a fee of £15 to be paid on demand to the Accountant, House of Lords, S.W.1, direct or through Parliamentary Agents. Cheques to be made payable to the "House of Lords Fee Fund" and be crossed "Bank of England, Western Branch."

(ii) On the second reading in the House of Commons of a Bill for the confirmation of a Provisional Order a fee of £15 is charged to the applicants in respect of each Provisional Order, to be paid on demand to the Clerk of the Fees, House of Commons, S.W.1, direct or through Parliamentary Agents. Cheques to be made payable to the "Clerk of the Fees," and crossed.

In addition, in the case of an unopposed Provisional Order a fee of £5 is payable in respect of each day on which the unopposed Bills Committee of the House of Commons is occupied in considering the confirming bills, this fee also is payable to the Clerk of the Fees, House of Commons, S.W.1.

No other Parliamentary fees are charged in the case of unopposed Provisional Orders.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
LONDON, S.W.1.
3rd November, 1936.

PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1936.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to the above Act which passed into law in July last and comes into operation on October 1st, 1937.

The Act re-enacts in one statute the law relating to the chief subjects dealt with in the Public Health Acts and allied statutes.* It consolidates in some 350 sections the provisions of over 600 sections contained in some 60 existing Acts. At the same time opportunity has been taken to amend and simplify the law in many respects and to make generally available for local authorities certain powers which have been commonly obtained in local legislation and have been found to be advantageous. It is hoped ultimately to consolidate in further Acts the whole of the law relating to public health.

The Minister does not propose to issue a detailed memorandum explanatory of so large a measure. Like the Local Government Act, 1933, it was based upon a Draft Bill and Report prepared by a Departmental Committee; and most of the substantial amendments of the present law which are contained in the Act will be found to be dealt with quite fully in the Committee's Report.† A table giving for convenience of reference the numbers of the sections in the new Act corresponding to those of the Draft Bill is appended to this Circular (b).

Local authorities will be well advised to study the new Act in the light of the Report and to review closely what will be its effects in relation to their own areas. Attention is drawn below only to some among the more important changes and to matters which call for early consideration.

General Application of Provisions previously Adoptive.—The Act largely abandons the practice of the adoption by local authorities of public health provisions. With certain exceptions mentioned below, the provisions requiring adoption or other procedure of this kind which were contained in the Public Health Acts of 1890, 1907 and 1925, and several other Acts relating to public health, are now re-enacted as provisions of general application. The exceptions are to be found in sections 41, 46, 79, 80, 107, 108, 263 and 264. These are expressed as urban powers and, under section 13, may be conferred upon a rural district council by order of the Minister.

Liability for Sewers.—The law with regard to the respective obligations of owners and local authorities for the maintenance and repair of sewers and drains has been wholly re-written, and, as a consequence, provisions in local Acts with regard to combined drains and single private drains are repealed. With certain exceptions mentioned in section 20, sewers constructed after the commencement of the Act will not vest in a local authority until formally taken over by them in accordance with machinery provided in section 17. The maintenance and repair of sewers already vested in the local authority, and of combined drains constructed before the commencement of the Act, will be the responsibility of the local authority, subject to certain rights of recovery of the expenses in the circumstances set out in section 24. These amendments are fully discussed in the Committee's report (paragraphs 32–44). The powers possessed by a number of local authorities under local Acts to require new buildings to be drained by combined drains is now replaced by section 38, a provision which was not contained in the Draft Bill.

* These subjects (following generally the headings in the Act) are:

Port Health Authorities, Joint Boards, etc.; Sanitation and Buildings; Nuisances and Offensive Trades; Water Supply; Prevention, Notification and Treatment of Disease; Hospitals, Nursing Homes, etc.; Notification of Births, Maternity and Child Welfare, and Child Life Protection; Baths, Washhouses, and Bathing Places; Common Lodging Houses; Canal Boats; and certain miscellaneous provisions.

Building Byelaws.—Important changes which the Act makes in regard to building byelaws will be found detailed in the Committee's Report (paragraphs 64–75 and the notes in the Appendix on clauses 60–67). Existing byelaws will cease to have effect on the expiration of three years from the passing of the Act, and in future all building byelaws will call for periodical revision under the provision that they shall cease to have effect upon the expiration of ten years from the date on which they were made (section 68).

As explained in the paragraphs of the Committee's Report referred to above, the scope of building byelaws has been widened in accordance with provisions in local legislation. The Minister is taking steps to revise the existing codes of model byelaws and has set up an Advisory Committee, representative of local authorities and other bodies chiefly concerned, to assist him in this task. It is hoped that the revised code will be ready for publication by May or June of next year. Those local authorities who have building byelaws operating throughout their areas will, no doubt, await the issue of the revised codes. As already pointed out, their existing byelaws will continue in operation until July 31st, 1939, and, though an early reconsideration of these byelaws in the light of the new Act and of present day conditions is highly desirable, the matter is not one of immediate urgency.

There are, however, in the Minister's knowledge, a number of local authorities who have no building byelaws and others whose building byelaws apply to parts only of their districts. In these cases the position is somewhat different. Under the new Act many of the requirements which local authorities are empowered to make, as e.g., that new buildings shall be provided with the necessary drains, will now be made at the stage when building plans are submitted to them in accordance with the byelaws. The provisions concerned are those in sections 25, 37 and 38, 43, 53, 54, 55, 59 and 137. Since the working of these sections is dependent on the existence of building byelaws, it is of the first importance that such byelaws should be in operation in these areas on October 1st, 1937. Two alternative courses are open. Either the local authorities may proceed to make byelaws under the existing law, or they may await the issue of the revised codes of model byelaws and proceed to make byelaws based upon the appropriate code.

If they adopt the former course, the byelaws which they make would run for a period of three years from the passing of the Act, and this would leave them ample time for consideration of the code to be adopted under the new law. In the meantime, they could set up their organisation for the working of an interim series of byelaws, which need not be of an elaborate character. It would, in fact, be sufficient if they embodied clauses 3–5 of the rural model, containing a few essential provisions with respect to the construction of walls and the foundation of buildings, and clause 26 with regard to notices and plans.

On the other hand, the advantage of postponing the matter until the revised code of model byelaws is ready is that only one step and not two would be necessary. The question is one for local authorities themselves to decide in the light of the circumstances of their own districts. In their case the Minister's officers will be glad to render any assistance which the local authorities may find desirable.

Temporary buildings and moveable dwellings.—Section 27 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, enabling local authorities to license temporary buildings, is a provision which has given rise to much difficulty. It is replaced partly by section 53 of the Act, which is discussed in paragraphs 71 to 75 of the Report, and partly by section 269, referred to in the next paragraph. Provision is made in section 344 with regard to buildings already licensed.

Important new provisions (section 269) were foreshadowed in the note on clause 267 in the Appendix to the Committee's Report, and were added to the Bill during its passage through Parliament, for the control of moveable dwellings. The new provisions empower local authorities to grant licences authorising persons to allow land occupied by them within the district to be used as sites for moveable dwellings; and licences authorising persons to erect or station, and use, such dwellings within the district. A further circular as to these provisions will be addressed to local authorities.

Control over private swimming baths and bathing pools.—Much public attention has in recent years been directed to the question of conditions in swimming baths and bathing pools. Section 233 is a new provision in the general law enabling a local authority to control by byelaws conditions in swimming baths and bathing pools under private management where the public are admitted on charge.

Provisions for appeals.—The Act substitutes for the varying provisions under earlier Acts a single code governing future appeals against the requirements of a local authority (sections 290 and 300–302). With some few exceptions, appeal is in the first instance to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction, with a further right of appeal to Quarter Sessions. These provisions are reviewed in paragraph 18 of the Committee's Report.

Paragraphs 61 to 63 of the Report deal with the new provisions as to notices of local authorities requiring the execution of works (section 290).

Protection for statutory undertakers and similar bodies.—All the existing provisions for the protection of statutory undertakers and similar bodies have been reviewed, and certain amendments made which merit the careful attention of local authorities. The power of control in certain directions formerly enjoyed by canal and dock authorities has been qualified by the provision that consent shall not be unreasonably withheld (section 333). This protection has for the first time been extended to railway undertakers. Protection is also given to land drainage authorities and the right to refer a dispute to arbitration (sections 15, 119, 330 and 334).

The varying powers under existing statutes to break open streets have been reviewed and a uniform code is now substituted in section 279.

Joint boards.—Joint boards operating under the Public Health Acts will need carefully to examine their position in the light of the Act. Section 314 enables them to apply to the Minister for an order amending their existing powers. They should, however, review the need for such an application without delay, for unless these orders are made within two years after the commencement of the Act they will be provisional only and require confirmation by Parliament.

A further circular will be addressed shortly to local authorities with regard to the provisions in the Act relating to Port Sanitary Authorities, Joint Hospital Boards and Isolation Hospital Committees, and with regard to certain provisions in Parts V, VI, and VII of the Act.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,

PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1936.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Circular No. 1576, dated November 3rd, 1936, in which it was stated that a further circular would be addressed to local authorities with regard to the provisions in the above Act relating to Port Sanitary Authorities, Joint Hospital Boards and Isolation Hospital Committees, and with regard to certain provisions in Parts V, VI, and VII of the Act.

An explanation of the amendments which the Act makes in the law affecting these matters will be found in the Second Interim Report of the Local Government and Public Health Consolidation Committee (Cmd. 5059), but the Minister thinks it desirable to call attention to the following more important provisions:

1. Port Sanitary Authorities.—It will be observed that the Act refers throughout to port health districts and port health authorities, and not to port sanitary districts and authorities. This change was, as the Consolidation Committee's report indicates, suggested by the Association of Port Sanitary Authorities, and the new designation better indicates the activities of these bodies.

Section 2, while substantially reproducing the present law relating to port sanitary districts, effects certain changes (referred to on page 80 of the Committee's report), the most important of which are the requirement that notice shall be given to the riparian authorities concerned of any proposal to make an Order constituting a port health district, so that they are afforded an opportunity of objecting before the form of the Order is finally settled, and a provision in terms for the incorporation of a joint board formed in pursuance of the Section. This provision assimilates the position of such boards to joint boards constituted under Section 6.

A further change is made by the provision in the First Schedule that regulations made by the Minister regarding the qualifications, etc., of Medical Officers of Health of port health districts, shall be laid before Parliament. This requirement is in accordance with Section 108 (5) of the Local Government Act, 1933, which relates to regulations prescribing the qualifications of Medical Officers of Health of boroughs and of urban and rural districts.

2. Joint Hospital Boards.—The existing statutory provisions regarding joint boards, including joint hospital boards, have been largely reproduced in the Act, but some important alterations have been made, and attention is directed particularly to the following:

(a) Under Section 6, if a county council undertakes to make annaul contributions towards the expenses of a joint board, provision may be made by the Order constituting the board for the board to include representatives of the county council;

(b) Section 8 provides that, for the purpose of facilitating co-operation between county councils and county borough councils, joint boards may be established through which those councils may discharge such of their functions under the Act as may be specified in the Orders constituting the boards;

(c) By virtue of Section 6 (4), it will not be necessary for an Order constituting a joint board to be confirmed by Parliament unless, after the prescribed notice of his proposal to make the Order has been given by the Minister to any local authorities concerned and to the county council, notice of objection to the Order is given within 28 days and not withdrawn. Similar provision is made by Section 9 (2) as regards the amendment or revocation of Orders constituting joint boards, whether or not those Orders were confirmed by Parliament;

PUBLIC HEALTH

(d) The Act repeals Section 282 and the second half of Schedule I of the Publi Health Act, 1875. Rules for the procedure of joint boards will in future b included in the Orders constituting the boards (the necessary power to make suc rules is conferred by Section 293 of the Local Government Act, 1933, whic enables the provisions of that Act to be applied to joint boards with any neces sary modifications).

3. Circular No. 1576 has already drawn attention to Section 314 of the Act whic is important to joint hospital boards and port health authorities. It follows th same lines as Section 293 of the Local Government Act, 1933, and enables the Ministe to substitute provisions of the new Act for the corresponding repealed provision applied by Orders constituting such joint boards and authorities. As indicated i that Circular, joint hospital boards and port health authorities should without delay consider the question of applying to the Minister for an Order under Section 314, a unless such Orders are made within two years after the commencement of the Ac they will require confirmation by Parliament.

4. Isolation Hospital Committees.—The Consolidation Committee in pages 61 to 6 of their report discussed the question of the provision to be made regarding isolatio hospital committees constituted under the Isolation Hospitals Acts, 1893 and 1901 and recommended their conversion into joint hospital boards or in certain cases thei dissolution. Section 315 of the Act generally follows the Committee's recommenda tion and provides that, before the expiration of two years from the commencement of the Act, the Minister shall dissolve such committees and transfer their property an liabilities (i) if a committee consists wholly of representatives of a single authority to that authority, and (ii) if (and this is the more usual arrangement) a committe consists wholly of representatives of two or more local areas, or partly of such repre sentatives and partly of representatives of a county council, to a joint board acting for the same local areas and consisting of representatives of the same authorities a the committee. These requirements are, however, subject to the proviso that on th request of a committee the Minister may in lieu of the foregoing procedure orde the property of the committee to be disposed of, and, if the committee represents mor than one authority, apportion the proceeds of such disposal and the committee' liabilities between the constituent authorities. The Minister is at present considering the arrangements for carrying out his duties under this Section.

5. Infectious Disease.—The Consolidation Committee, in pages 59 and 60 of thei report, drew attention to the large number of expressions denoting infectious disease throughout the Public Health statutes, and recommended a substantial simplificatio by the use in the new Act of two expressions only, namely (1) " infectious disease " which, as in the Public Health Act, 1875, would be left undefined, and (2) " notifiable disease " which would denote the particular diseases specified in the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act, 1889, and any other disease which is for the time being compulsorily notifiable under those provisions of the Act reproducing Section 7 of the Act of 1889. This change has been effected by the new Act, and attention is drawn to the definition of " notifiable disease " in Section 343 and to Section 147. It wil further be observed that Section 143 provides that any regulations made under that Section may apply to any disease to which the regulations relate any enactment (including any provisions of the Act) relating to the notification of disease or t notifiable diseases.

As recommended by the Committee, the terms " continued fever " and " puerpera fever " have been omitted from the definition of " notifiable disease " in Section 343 The effect of the omission of " puerperal fever " will be that from October 1st next so much of the Public Health (Notification of Puerperal Fever and Puerpera Pyrexia) Regulations, 1926, as relates to puerperal fever will cease to have effec outside the county of London, and that the obligation imposed by Part III of the Regulations to notify cases of puerperal pyrexia will include the obligation to notify conditions at present notifiable as puerperal fever under the Infectious Disease (Notification) Acts. It will be desirable that the councils whose Medical Officers o Health receive the notifications made under the Regulations should, at a sufficient interval before October 1st next, draw the attention of medical practitioners practis ing in their districts to this change.

6. Section 143, while it reproduces the substance of Section 130 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and Section 1 of the Public Health Act, 1896, effects certain changes in the existing statutory provisions, the details of which will be found in page 103 of the Consolidation Committee's report. The most important of the changes are—

(i) The Section enables the Minister to take steps to prevent the spread of disease by aircraft as well as by ships, and thus to give effect to the International Sanitary Convention for Aerial Navigation which came into force in 1935. Regulations for this purpose are at present under consideration, and will become operative when the Act comes into force ;

(ii) Paragraph (c) of sub-section (1) provides for the making of regulations to prevent the spread of infection by means of any vessel or aircraft leaving this country, so far as may be necessary or expedient for the purpose of carrying out any treaty or other arrangement or engagement with any other country, in addition to the power conferred by paragraph (b) of making regulations for preventing danger to the public health from vessels or aircraft arriving at any place in this country ;

(iii) Regulations made under the section must be laid before Parliament.

7. For the reasons described in pages 106 and 107 of the Consolidation Committee's report, Section 170 amends Section 12 of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, by (a) providing that the justice of the peace making an order directing the detention in hospital of a patient suffering from infectious disease must be a justice acting " in and for the place " in which the hospital is situated, and (b) placing the financial responsibility on the authority applying for the order, subject to the reservation that any contractual arrangements subsisting between two authorities are not to be disturbed.

8. Tuberculosis.—The existing law in regard to the duty of county and county borough councils to make adequate arrangements for the institutional treatment of persons in their areas who are suffering from tuberculosis has been re-enacted in a shorter and simpler form. The general supplementary power which county councils and local sanitary authorities possessed under Section 3 of the Public Health (Prevention and Treatment of Disease) Act, 1913, of making arrangements for the treatment of tuberculosis is re-enacted in sub-section (1) of Section 173 of the new Act, but the requirement of the Minister's sanction contained in the Act of 1913 is omitted.

The power of county and county borough councils to make arrangements for the after-care of persons who have suffered from tuberculosis is re-enacted in sub-section (2) of Section 173.

It has not been necessary to re-enact those provisions of the Public Health (Tuberculosis) Act, 1921, enabling (1) a county or county borough council to exercise their powers in relation to the treatment of tuberculosis through a committee or sub-committee, and (2) the Minister to make an order, with the consent of the councils concerned, for the constitution of joint committees or otherwise, for the joint exercise by the councils of counties and county boroughs of all or any of their powers in relation to the treatment of tuberculosis. These objectives are attained, as to (1), by Section 85 of the Local Government Act, 1933, and, as to (2), by Section 8 of the new Act.

As regards the compulsory removal to hospital in certain circumstances of persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, it may be noted that the power of a county council or local authority under Section 172 to apply to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order of compulsory removal is limited to persons suffering from tuberculosis of the respiratory tract who are in an infectious state, and that, where an order is made, the county council or local authority are given, in the absence of any direction by the court, a discretion, not only in the matter of making a contribution towards the maintenance of the patient's dependants, but also as to whether they will bear the whole or part of the cost of removing and maintaining the patient in the hospital or institution to which he has been removed.

The compulsory notification of tuberculosis is the subject of special regulations which will continue in force by virtue of proviso (c) to Section 346 until such time as they may be varied. Those provisions of Part V of the Act which relate to " notifiable disease " do not, therefore, apply to tuberculosis.

PUBLIC HEALTH

9. Subscriptions to Nursing Associations.—Section 178 will enable county councils and local authorities to make annual subscriptions in their capacity as Public Health Authorities towards the support and maintenance of Nursing Associations. The new power will supersede that at present possessed only by county and county borough councils under Section 67 (c) of the Poor Law Act, 1930. It will be noted that, as from October 1st, 1937, paragraph (c) of Section 67 of the Poor Law Act, 1930, is repealed in so far as it relates to Associations for providing nurses.

10. Hospitals.—An explanation of the modifications contained in Section 181, as compared with the existing law, will be found on pages 108 and 109 of the Consolidation Committee's report. The reference in subsection (1) to "persons in their district" instead of "the inhabitants of their district," and the express power given in the Section to provide clinics, dispensaries and out-patient departments, will be noted.

Section 182 requires a county council or local authority when making provision under the Act for hospital accommodation (other than hospital accommodation for persons suffering from an infectious disease) to consult with the committee or body representing the governing bodies and the medical and surgical staffs of the voluntary hospitals which provide services in, or for the benefit of, their county or district. Previously this duty was, as a matter of statutory requirement, limited to cases where a county or county borough council was providing hospital accommodation in pursuance of the Poor Law functions transferred to them by the Local Government Act, 1929.

11. Section 184 combines the provisions of Section 132 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which gave powers of recovery by local authorities of the cost of maintaining patients in hospitals, with those of Section 16 of the Local Government Act, 1929, which imposes a duty to recover the cost of maintaining patients in hospitals, maternity homes and other institutions provided under the Public Health Acts and the Maternity and Child Welfare Act, 1918, except where the patient has become an inmate of an institution for the purpose of receiving treatment for infectious disease. Section 132 of the Act of 1875 is amended in some important respects by the new Section. These matters are dealt with in some detail on pages 63 and 64 of the Consolidation Committee's report, but attention may be directed to the following:

(a) The Section gives power to recover the cost of maintenance in cases of infectious disease to county councils, as well as to those categories of local authorities who previously possessed this power;

(b) The Section empowers local authorities to recover not only from the person suffering from infectious disease but also from his relatives;

(c) The Section authorises recovery from the estate of a person who has died after leaving hospital and not only, as provided by the Public Health Act, 1875, from the estate of a person whose death occurred in hospital;

(d) The time limit for commencement of proceedings for recovery is extended from six months, as prescribed in the Public Health Act, 1875, to twelve months.

In comparison with Section 16 of the Local Government Act, 1929, it will be seen that the right of recovery from the patient's estate if the patient has died is a feature for which Section 16 did not provide, as also is the time limit for commencement of proceedings for recovery. The power of including in the expenses to be recovered a reasonable charge for the patient's removal to or from hospital will also be noted.

12. Laboratories, Ambulances, Mortuaries, etc.—Section 196 of the Act enables a county council or a local authority to provide a laboratory for purposes connected with the diagnosis and treatment of diseases, etc. Previously there has been no statutory provision expressly empowering local authorities to provide laboratories for general purposes, and the section fills a need by removing doubts as to the powers of local authorities in the matter.

13. It will be observed that Section 197, in addition to consolidating in the form of a general power the various powers previously possessed by local authorities to provide ambulances, also extends this power specifically to county councils.

14. Section 198 makes certain alterations in the law regarding the provision by local authorities of mortuaries and post-mortem rooms. Of these alterations, which are described in detail in pages 110 and 111 of the Consolidation Committee's report, the most important is the omission of the words " otherwise than at a workhouse or mortuary " in Section 143 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The effect of this omission is that, in future, post-mortem rooms may be provided at mortuaries. Attention is drawn to the comment of the Committee that the most convenient place for such a room is at a mortuary, and that if the room is properly separated from the rest of the mortuary there appears to be no good reason why it should not form part of the same building.

15. Notification of Births, Maternity and Child Welfare and Child Life Protection : General.—The effect of Section 200 is to provide that in every district there shall be one and the same Authority responsible for these three services. This Authority (in the Act referred to as the " Welfare Authority ") is to be (i) in a county borough, the council of the borough, and (ii) in a county district, whichever of two authorities, namely the county council and the district council, was, immediately before the commencement of the new Act, the local authority in that district for the purposes of the Notification of Births Acts, 1907 and 1915.

The object of this provision is explained on pages 65 and 66 of the Consolidation Committee's report. In general, the conduct of the principal services provided under the powers conferred by the Notification of Births Acts, the Maternity and Child Welfare Act, 1918, and the statutory provisions relating to Child Life Protection is already at present undertaken in each district by the authority who are the local authority for the purposes of the Notification of Births Acts. There are, however, occasional instances in which an authority who are not the local authority in a particular district for the purposes of the Notification of Births Acts have in the past undertaken some particular Maternity and Child Welfare service or services in that district with the Minister's sanction and continue to maintain it. In such cases it will no longer be competent to such an authority to maintain the service or services in question after October 1st next, and any such authority should take steps at an early date to approach the Welfare Authority for the district, as defined by the new Act, with a view to the transfer of responsibility to the latter Authority as from October 1st, 1937.

Further, by virtue of Section 202 the area of charge for expenses incurred by a county council under Part VII of the Act will after October 1st next be the area for which the county council are the Welfare Authority, excluding autonomous districts, and the expenses are to be charged as expenses for special county purposes. The proviso to Section 3 of the Maternity and Child Welfare Act, 1918, with regard to the levy of such expenses as expenses for general county purposes, with a refund to district councils providing a similar service, is repealed ; and the attention of those county councils whose expenses on account of Maternity and Child Welfare services have hitherto been levied on the last mentioned system is especially directed to the provisions of Section 202.

16. Notification of Births.—By virtue of Section 203 it will be the duty of every Medical Officer of Health of a county district to whom notifications of births are made by reason of the council of the district being a Welfare Authority to send duplicates of all such notifications to the County Medical Officer of Health, except in cases where the council of the district in addition to being the Welfare Authority is also the local supervising authority under the Midwives Acts, 1902 to 1936. Previously this duty was not imposed upon Medical Officers of Health of those county districts where the Notification of Births Act, 1907, had been voluntarily adopted by the council of the district prior to the coming into operation of the Notification of Births (Extension) Act, 1915.

17. Maternity and Child Welfare.—Section 204 replaces by one provision Section 2 (1) of the Notification of Births (Extension) Act, 1915, and Section 1 of the Maternity and Child Welfare Act, 1918. The slight modifications contained in subsection (1) of Section 204, as compared with the original provisions, are explained on page 112 of the Consolidation Committee's report. Welfare Authorities are reminded of the general approval of extensions of Maternity and Child Welfare services which was given by the Minister in paragraph 5 of Circular No. 1072 of February 12th, 1930.

Section 205, which replaces Section 61 of the Factory and Workshops Act, 1901, is included in the present Act as being more appropriate for public health than factory legislation. The Minister has no reason to suppose that offences against the prohibition imposed by the Section are otherwise than rare. The Welfare Authority, however, as the public authority whose Health Visitors are in touch with mothers immediately after confinement, are in a favourable position to learn of any breaches of the prohibition which may occur in their district: and by virtue of Section 201 (1), Welfare Authorities will, on the present Act coming into operation, be responsible for the enforcement of the provisions of Section 205. In regard to the prosecution of offences, reference should be made to Sections 296 and 298 of the Act.

18. Child Life Protection.—The principal changes which are introduced by the provisions of the new Act under this head are in relation to exemptions (Section 219). Attention may be directed to the following points:

(i) The inclusion in subsection (1) of the word "school" before the words "hospital, convalescent home," etc., will make it clear that the Welfare Authority have power to grant a certificate of exemption from the provisions of this Part of the Act, where they think it desirable, to a boarding school—a point which, when governed by the provisions of Section 69 of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1932, has been in some doubt;

(ii) Under the provisions of Section 69 of the Act of 1932, voluntary homes within the meaning of Part III of that Act (subsequently Part V of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933), were exempted as a whole from the provisions of Part I of the Children Act, 1908 (as amended by the Act of 1932), relating to Infant Life Protection. As is explained in the Consolidation Committee's report, instances have occurred in which this general grant of exemption to any home which could bring itself within the category of a home wholly or partly supported by voluntary contributions has not proved satisfactory. In future it will be necessary for the authorities of any such home, unless it should be a home falling under paragraphs (a) or (c) of subsection (1) of Section 219, to apply to the Welfare Authority for a certificate of exemption if they desire that the home should be exempted from the Child Life Protection provisions of the Act. It is suggested, therefore, that each Welfare Authority should take suitable steps to bring the requirements of Section 219 to the attention of the authorities of any such voluntary homes which may exist in their district and which do not fall within the terms of paragraphs (a) or (c) of subsection (1) of Section 219;

(iii) It will be seen that provision is made that the part of the Act relating to Child Life Protection shall not apply to any person who undertakes the nursing or maintenance of a child under any Act for the relief of the poor or any order made under that Act, or undertakes the nursing and maintenance of a child boarded out under subsection (3) of Section 84 of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933;

(iv) The provision at the end of subsection (1), corresponding to subsection (3) of Section 69 of the Act of 1932, has been slightly amended to meet the point that under Section 51 of the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913, one mental defective may be under care elsewhere than in an institution, etc., without the consent of the Board of Control;

(v) Provision has been made enabling the Welfare Authority to exempt persons, who take children for short holidays from bona fide charitable organisations, from giving notice in respect of each individual child on condition that notice is given in respect of the first child received in each year. The remaining children are, however, to be considered as foster children for the purposes of this Part of the Act even though the person receiving them is exempted from the duty of giving notice in respect of them.

Amongst some minor changes of the existing law which will be effected by the provisions of the new Act under the head of Child Life Protection, the following may be noted:

(a) In Section 215 it will be seen that the words "under nine years of age" are not included after the word "child." It was found that these words, which were included in Section 68 of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1932, afforded a means by which the objects of that Section could be evaded by the publication of advertisements in which the age of the child or children to be received was not mentioned;

(b) Section 218 confers upon the Welfare Authority a new power of defraying the expenses of maintenance of a child in a place of safety to which he is removed under this Part of the Act.

A copy of this circular is being sent to all Medical Officers of Health, and an additional copy is enclosed for the use of the Financial Officer of the authority. Further copies may be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below, or through any bookseller.

A further circular will be issued shortly dealing with moveable buildings and also with the regulation of offices.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
22nd April, 1938.

PUBLIC HEALTH (AIRCRAFT) REGULATIONS, 1938.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Authority a copy of the Public Health (Aircraft) Regulations, 1938, which will come into force on July 1st, 1938.

GENERAL.

2. These Regulations have been made by the Minister under Section 143 of the Public Health Act, 1936. They are designed to prevent the introduction of infectious diseases into this country through the medium of air-borne traffic, and they resemble in their general scope the Port Sanitary Regulations, 1933, which were made to secure a similar object in regard to water-borne traffic. The Regulations have been made in conformity with the International Sanitary Convention for Aerial Navigation which was signed at The Hague on April 12th, 1933, and ratified by His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom on September 15th, 1934. For this reason the Regulations include provisions relating to sanitary measures to be taken in certain circumstances in regard to outgoing as well as incoming aircraft.

3. The authority responsible for the execution of the Regulations may be a County Council (only as respects an aerodrome maintained by them), a Port Health Authority, or a Local Authority (i.e. the Common Council of the City of London, or the Council of a Metropolitan Borough, Municipal Borough or Urban or Rural District as the case may be). Regulation 2 (3) provides that the Responsible Authority as respects an aerodrome maintained by a Local Authority shall be the maintaining authority; and that otherwise it shall be the Port Health Authority if the aerodrome is situated in a Port Health District, and the Local Authority if the aerodrome is situated elsewhere. Regulation 3 (2) contains provisions to enable functions to be transferred in certain circumstances from one authority to another or to be distributed amongst more than one authority.

4. It is the duty of the Authority responsible for the administration of the Regulations as respects any aerodrome to appoint the staff and provide or arrange for the provision of the premises, apparatus and equipment, etc., necessary for enabling the provisions of the Regulations to be complied with (Regulation 14).

5. The Regulations deal principally with the measures to be taken at a "customs aerodrome," i.e., an aerodrome for the time being approved by the Secretary of State as an aerodrome on which foreign-going aircraft may land or from which they may depart.

SANITARY AERODROMES.

Recognition of Customs Aerodromes as Sanitary Aerodromes.

6. The Regulations empower the Minister, on being satisfied that a customs aerodrome is properly organised and equipped for the purpose, to recognise it as a "sanitary aerodrome" in accordance with the terms of the International Sanitary Convention of 1933. The facilities which are required to be provided in order that an aerodrome may be so recognised are prescribed in Regulation 2 (4). The practical difference between a sanitary aerodrome and any other customs aerodrome is that it is only at the former that provision need be made for carrying out all the sanitary measures prescribed by the Regulations. Arrangements for the medical inspection of persons arriving or departing on foreign-going aircraft will be necessary at all customs aerodromes, and in addition there must be provided for a sanitary aerodrome (i) apparatus or means for the cleansing, disinfection and disinsecting of aircraft, persons and clothing and other articles, and the deratisation of aircraft, and (ii) equipment and facilities for the examination of suspected material in a laboratory. It is also necessary that one or more assistant officers shall be appointed for a sanitary aerodrome. It will probably be found convenient that at every aerodrome at which there is a regular foreign-going air service the sanitary organisation and equipment should be such that it can be recognised by the Minister as a sanitary aerodrome, as otherwise it may be found necessary on occasion to direct an incoming aircraft to proceed to some other aerodrome which has been so recognised in order that appropriate sanitary measures may be applied to the aircraft or the passengers or crew (Regulation 17).

Staff.

7. It will be seen that the Regulations confer and impose certain specific powers and duties on the "Medical Officer" who is defined as "the Medical Officer of Health of a responsible authority or a registered medical practitioner acting under the direction of such an authority, whether in place of or as an assistant to the Medical Officer of Health or otherwise, for the purpose of executing these regulations or any of them," and Regulation 14 (a) empowers the Authority to appoint one or more duly qualified medical practitioners in addition to the Medical Officer of Health for the purpose of performing or of assisting the Medical Officer of Health in the performance of all or any of the duties assigned to the Medical Officer by the Regulations. The Authority should consider, having regard to the circumstances of the aerodrome and the amount of foreign-going traffic, the number of medical and other officers who will be required for the purposes of the Regulations. It will probably be found that the present amount of traffic at some aerodromes will not necessitate any increase in the number of medical or other officers employed by the Authority, and that by some re-arrangement of duties, the work involved in the execution of the Regulations can be carried out by the existing staff.

8. In the case of an aerodrome approved by the Secretary of State for the purposes of the Aliens Order, the Minister will be prepared to consider, in suitable cases, the appointment as Medical Inspector of Aliens of the officer appointed by the Authority as medical officer for the purposes of the Regulations.

PUBLIC HEALTH

9. The Responsible Authority for a sanitary aerodrome is required to appoint in addition to the medical officer at least one assistant officer to act under his direction. It is contemplated that this officer will normally be a Sanitary Inspector. His services will be available for the performance of such duties under the Regulations as do not require medical qualifications, e.g. inspecting aircraft in certain circumstances or carrying out or superintending disinfection, deratisation, etc.

Right of Entry.

10. By section 143 (4) of the Public Health Act, 1936, authorised officers of Local Authorities have power to enter any premises or aircraft for the purpose of executing or superintending the execution of the Regulations. In view of the definition of the expression "authorised officer" in section 343 (1) of the Act, any officer, other than the Medical Officer of Health or Sanitary Inspector, who is appointed by the Responsible Authority for the purpose of executing the Regulations should be authorised in writing so to do.

11. The necessity for the appointment of additional authorised officers to assist during periods of exceptionally heavy traffic at the aerodrome, or during the absence of the regular officers on holiday or sick leave should be borne in mind.

Premises and Equipment.

12. It is not necessary that all of the premises, equipment and other facilities which are required to be available at a sanitary aerodrome should be provided actually on the site of the aerodrome, though they must be readily accessible thereto. It is important that in all cases there should be on the aerodrome or in the immediate vicinity a place for medical inspection where satisfactory lighting and water supply are available, a room in which persons suffering from infectious disease may be temporarily accommodated pending removal to hospital, and separate lavatories for the two sexes. The extent and character of the accommodation to be provided will depend upon the amount of traffic making use of the aerodrome, and, where such traffic is not extensive, may be of a simple character. It may be possible in some instances for the Responsible Authority to arrange with the authorities of the aerodrome for suitable accommodation to be placed at their disposal.

13. It is contemplated that persons arriving at an aerodrome who are required in pursuance of the Regulations to be removed to hospital will normally be accommodated in the isolation hospital provided under the Local Authority's arrangements for the treatment of infectious disease, and that it will be necessary only in exceptional circumstances for special hospital accommodation to be provided for the purposes of the Regulations. It will be necessary for the Responsible Authority to make definite arrangements to ensure that an ambulance is readily available when required to convey persons from the aerodrome to the hospital.

14. The Authority will probably be able to arrange that any cleansing of persons and the cleansing or disinfection of articles of bedding, clothing, merchandise, etc., which may be necessary in pursuance of the Regulations shall be carried out at the place or places in the district where such operations are usually carried out, but it will be necessary for arrangements to be made for any sanitary measures which need to be applied to an aircraft to be carried out at the aerodrome.

15. In the case of an aerodrome situated in a Port Health District, it will probably be found that the premises and equipment provided by the Authority for the purposes of their duties in relation to ships can be used for their duties under these Regulations.

CUSTOMS AERODROMES OTHER THAN SANITARY AERODROMES.

16. The observations in the foregoing paragraphs of this Circular in regard to sanitary aerodromes are applicable generally to other customs aerodromes, except that it is not obligatory for facilities to be available for such sanitary measures as disinfection, deratisation, etc., or for an assistant officer to be appointed.

PUBLIC HEALTH

LIST OF INFECTED LOCALITIES.

17. For the purpose of assisting the Medical Officers of districts comprising a customs aerodrome in preparing the list of infected localities which they are required to keep in pursuance of Regulation 4, the Minister proposes to extend to all such Medical Officers the issue of the " Weekly Record of Infectious Diseases at Ports, etc., at Home and Abroad " (in a modified form) which has hitherto been sent each week to the Medical Officers of Health of Port Health Districts. The information contained in the " Weekly Record " will form the basis of the list of infected localities, but the Medical Officer should also have regard to any other relevant information of which he may be cognisant.

INFECTED AIRCRAFT OR AIRCRAFT COMING FROM AN INFECTED LOCALITY.

18. Regulation 7 provides that an infected aircraft or an aircraft coming from an infected locality shall, if yellow fever is the cause of infection, be subjected to such of the measures prescribed or permitted in relation to that disease by the International Sanitary Convention for Aerial Navigation as the Medical Officer considers necessary. As the United Kingdom is a territory where the conditions do not permit of the development of yellow fever, the provisions of Articles 50 and 51 of the Convention are applicable, that is to say, aircraft may land at a sanitary aerodrome and the measures which may be taken on arrival are (1) inspection of the aircraft and cargo to ensure that they do not contain mosquitoes, and, if necessary, disinsectisation ; (2) medical inspection of passengers and crew.

19. The measures which may be taken if the cause of infection is plague, cholera, typhus fever or smallpox are prescribed in the Schedule to the Regulations.

INFECTED AIRCRAFT LANDING ELSEWHERE THAN AT A CUSTOMS AERODROME.

20. The attention of every Local Authority, whether or not its district comprises a customs aerodrome, is drawn to Regulation 21 (2) which relates to an infected aircraft or an aircraft coming from a locality infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever or a locality where typhus fever or smallpox is epidemic which may land elsewhere than at a customs aerodrome. This Regulation is designed primarily to meet the case of forced landings, and it will be observed that the commander is required to notify the Local Authority, the Customs Officer or a police officer, to comply with any reasonable directions which may be given to him by the Authority or officer, and to proceed, if possible, to a sanitary aerodrome. The Regulation does not prescribe the action to be taken by the Authority or officer on receipt of any such notification, as it has not been found practicable to prescribe a course of action which would be appropriate in all the varying conditions in which a forced landing may occur. The Authority or officer should give such reasonable directions as appear to be appropriate in the particular circumstances, having regard to the purposes of the Regulations to prevent the spread of infection, and, whenever possible, the commander of the aircraft should be directed to proceed to a sanitary aerodrome. If the aircraft is unable to proceed to a sanitary aerodrome, advantage should be taken of the power conferred on the Local Authority or officer in paragraph (c) to require passengers and members of the crew to state their names and intended destinations.

DETENTION OF AIRCRAFT AND PERSONS THEREIN.

21. Regulations 8 to 10 relate to the detention in certain circumstances of an aircraft arriving at an aerodrome from a foreign place and the passengers and crew thereof for the purpose of medical inspection and such sanitary measures as may be necessary.

22. The Customs Officer will normally be the first officer to visit an incoming aircraft, and for this reason he is required by Regulation 8 to direct that an aircraft and the passengers and crew shall be detained if certain conditions obtain which are prescribed in that Regulation, and to report the matter forthwith to the Medical Officer. It will be observed that the Customs Officer is required to detain the aircraft and its occupants, if, inter alia, there has been during the voyage a case of illness caused by disease of an infectious nature (Regulation 8 (1) (a)).

23. The period during which the Customs Officer is empowered to detain an aircraft is limited to three hours (Regulation 9), and it is, therefore, essential that within that period the Medical Officer should either (1) inspect the aircraft or cause it to be inspected, or (2) notify the Customs Officer that he does not propose to do so. Under Regulation 10 it is obligatory on the Medical Officer to inspect an aircraft or cause it to be inspected if it has come from or called at any foreign locality included in the medical Officer's list of infected localities and to inspect it if there has been during the voyage a case or suspected case of cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever, smallpox or plague. In other cases it is within the discretion of the Medical Officer, having regard to all the circumstances, whether the aircraft should be inspected, but if he decides that inspection is unnecessary he should ensure that the Customs Officer is notified accordingly without delay.

24. The Medical Officer may himself direct that an aircraft shall be detained for medical inspection and may deliver a notice to that effect to the Customs Officer who will in turn deliver it to the commander of the aircraft if he visits the aircraft before the Medical Officer (Regulation 8 (4)). The person in charge of the aerodrome must be informed of any detention of an aircraft directed by the Medical Officer.

25. If it appears to the Medical Officer, after the inspection of an aircraft, that the aircraft is liable to be subjected to further measures under the Regulations, he may direct that it shall be detained for the purpose for a further period, giving notice in writing accordingly to the commander of the aircraft (Regulation 10).

26. The Medical Officer is required to give notice in writing to the Customs Officer, the commander of the aircraft and the person in charge of the aerodrome when he releases an aircraft from detention under the Regulations (Regulation 20 (2)).

AIRCRAFT DEPARTING.

27. The measures to be applied in respect of outgoing air traffic are prescribed in Part III of the Regulations. It will be observed that they relate only to plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus and smallpox. Regulation 11 empowers the Medical Officer in certain circumstances to prohibit the embarkation of persons liable to transmit infection. Regulation 12 contains certain additional provisions which will come into operation in any locality which has been declared to be infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever or in which typhus fever or smallpox has been declared to exist in an epidemic form, by notice published by the Minister in the London Gazette.

CO-OPERATION WITH AIRCRAFT COMMANDERS AND AERODROME AUTHORITIES.

28. It is of course desirable to enlist the co-operation of the commander of an aircraft in order to secure the carrying out of any measures necessary under the Regulations in respect of the aircraft or the persons or articles on board it. Regulation 15 (e) authorises the Medical Officer to require the commander to take or assist in taking such steps as, in the opinion of the Medical Officer, are reasonably necessary for preventing the spread of infection by any person arriving by the aircraft; and also such steps as are necessary for the removal of conditions on the aircraft likely to convey infection, including conditions the existence of which might facilitate the harbouring of vermin. Regulation 21 (c) requires the commander to comply with any directions or requirements given to or made of him in pursuance of the Regulations.

29. Where any action (including any measures of disinfection or disinsecting) have been taken in regard to an aircraft under the Regulations, the commander if he so requests is entitled to receive free of charge a statement in writing recording the particulars of any such action and the reasons why the action was taken.

30. Regulations 5, 18 (2), and 21 relate to duties to be carried out by commanders of aircraft.

PUBLIC HEALTH

31. The co-operation of the person in charge of an aerodrome is also necessary to the satisfactory execution of the Regulations and for these reasons the Regulations require that he shall be supplied with copies of the list of infected localities prepared by the Medical Officer and that certain of the notices or directions given under the Regulations shall be communicated to him. Regulation 6 requires him in certain circumstances to notify the Medical Officer and the Customs Officer of cases of illness on incoming aircraft.

AVOIDANCE OF DELAY IN ADMINISTRATION OF REGULATIONS.

32. In formulating their proposals for carrying out their duties under these Regulations, the Local Authority should bear in mind the importance of making such arrangements as will involve as little delay as possible to aircraft and passengers at the aerodrome.

INFORMATION OF PROPOSED ARRANGEMENTS TO BE GIVEN TO MINISTER.

33. It is requested that every Local Authority and Port Health Authority which is the Responsible Authority as respects any customs aerodrome will inform the Minister not later than May 31st, 1938, of the arrangements proposed for carrying out their duties under the Regulations.

34. A copy of this Circular and a copy of the Regulations are being sent to the Medical Officer of Health.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. N. BECKETT.
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk of the Authority.

S. R. & O., 1938, No. 299.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (AIRCRAFT) REGULATIONS, 1938, DATED APRIL 7TH, 1938, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH, AFTER CONSULTATION WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND WITH THE CONSENT OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF CUSTOMS AND EXCISE, UNDER THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT, 1936.

Every such recognition and designation shall have effect until it is withdrawn by the Minister and notice of every such recognition, designation and withdrawal shall be published in the London Gazette.

Execution of regulations.

3.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2) of this regulation every responsible authority shall through the medical officer and any other officers whom they may appoint for the purpose enforce and execute these regulations throughout their area and shall make such inquiries and take such other steps as may seem to them to be necessary for securing the due observance of these regulations or any of them.

(2) Where—

(a) an aerodrome is situate in the areas of more than one responsible authority or is maintained by more than one such authority, or

(b) an aerodrome maintained by one responsible authority is situated in the district of another such authority, the authorities may agree, on such terms and conditions as they think fit, and with the approval of the Minister, that one of them shall undertake the execution of, and appoint the officers for executing, the whole or specified provisions of these regulations at that aerodrome.

In any case to which (a) of this paragraph applies, the Minister may, in the absence of agreement between the authorities, determine which of the said authorities shall undertake any such functions or the terms and conditions subject to which they shall do so.

Any aerodrome to which any such agreement as approved by the Minister or any such determination of the Minister applies shall be deemed to be in the area of the authority by which such functions are undertaken in accordance therewith, and that authority shall be deemed to be the responsible authority for the purposes of these regulations.

List of infected localities.

4. The medical officer of a district comprising a customs aerodrome shall from time to time prepare and keep up to date a list of localities both in the United Kingdom and elsewhere which are infected or believed to be infected with plague (human or rodent), cholera or yellow fever, or in which typhus fever or smallpox is believed to be epidemic, and shall supply copies of every such list and any amendment thereof to the customs officers employed in the aerodrome and to the person in charge of the aerodrome. In the preparation and amendment of such list, the medical officer shall take into account all information sent to him from time to time by the Minister.

PART II.—AIRCRAFT ARRIVING.

Notification of illness.

5. If during the voyage of an aircraft which arrives at an aerodrome from a foreign place there has been on board either a death otherwise than as the result of an accident, or a case or suspected case of infectious disease, and the commander of the aircraft has not already informed the customs officer or medical officer of that fact by wireless or otherwise, the commander shall so inform the customs officer or medical officer, whichever shall first visit the aircraft after its arrival.

The customs officer or medical officer on being informed as aforesaid shall make such inquiries of the commander as appear to him to be necessary.

6. The person in charge of the aerodrome, upon receipt of information that a person on board an aircraft approaching or arriving at the aerodrome has symptoms which may be indicative of infectious disease other than tuberculosis, or that there are circumstances in relation to any such aircraft requiring the attention of the medical officer, shall forthwith notify the medical officer and the customs officer to that effect.

Infected aircraft or aircraft coming from an infected locality.

7.—(1) If an infected aircraft or an aircraft coming from an infected locality arrives at an aerodrome the appropriate measures set out in the schedule to these regulations in relation to plague, cholera, typhus fever or smallpox as the case may be shall be carried out, or if yellow fever is the cause of infection the aircraft shall be subjected to such of the measures prescribed or permitted in relation to that disease by the Convention as the medical officer considers necessary.

(2) Any aircraft which has become subject to the provisions of paragraph (1) of this regulation shall remain subject to control under these regulations until it has been examined by the medical officer and until any measures which may be required to be carried out in pursuance of that paragraph (other than measures in relation to any person who has disembarked from the aircraft) have been completed.

Detention of aircraft and persons therein.

8.—(1) Where an aircraft arrives at an aerodrome from a foreign place and it appears to the customs officer from information given to him by the commander or from answers to inquiries made by him or otherwise—

(a) that during the voyage there has been on the aircraft a death otherwise than as a result of an accident, or a case of illness caused or suspected to be caused by disease of an infectious nature; or

(b) that the aircraft has come from or has called at a locality included in the list referred to in regulation 4; or

(c) that during the voyage death not attributable to poison or other measures for destruction has occurred amongst rats or mice on the aircraft;

he shall direct that the aircraft and the passengers and crew shall be detained and he shall report the matter forthwith to the person in charge of the aerodrome and to the medical officer.

(2) The medical officer may require any person who has been so detained before he leaves the aerodrome to state his name and his intended destination and address, and to give any other information which the medical officer may think necessary for transmission to the local authority of the district within which the intended place of destination of the person is situate.

(3) If a person having been required to state his intended destination and address before being permitted to leave an aerodrome, either is unable to do so or arrives, within a period not exceeding fourteen days after landing to be specified to him by the medical officer, at a place other than that which he has so stated, he shall immediately after his arrival forward particulars of his actual place of arrival and his address to the medical officer of the area in which he left the aircraft.

(4) The medical officer may direct that an aircraft arriving from a foreign place shall be detained for medical inspection and may deliver a notice in writing to that effect to the customs officer who, if he visits the aircraft before the medical officer, shall cause the notice to be delivered to the commander. The medical officer shall inform the person in charge of the aerodrome of any directions given by him under this paragraph.

9. The detention of an aircraft by a customs officer under these regulations shall cease as soon as the medical officer has duly inspected the aircraft or caused it to be inspected or has given notice to the customs officer that he does not propose to do so, or, if the inspection has not been begun within three hours after the customs officer gave the direction for its detention, on the expiration of that period :

Provided that nothing in this regulation shall affect the exercise of any powers of the medical officer in regard to the detention of aircraft.

10. The medical officer shall—

(a) inspect or cause to be inspected, on its arrival, any aircraft which has come from or called at any foreign locality which is included in the list prepared pursuant to the provisions of regulation 4 and shall inspect any other aircraft which has come from or called at a foreign locality and on which there has occurred during the voyage any case of illness which was or may have been plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox, or on which rodent plague has occurred or been suspected during the voyage ;

(b) as soon as possible, and in any case within three hours after a customs officer has given a direction for the detention of an aircraft, inspect the aircraft, or cause it to be inspected, or give notice to the customs officer that he does not propose to do so ; if the aircraft is liable to be subjected to further measures under these regulations he shall give notice in writing to the commander directing that the aircraft shall be detained for a further period.

PART III.—AIRCRAFT DEPARTING.

11.—(1) The medical officer may examine any person proposing to embark on an aircraft whom he suspects to be suffering from plague, cholera, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox, and if, after examination, he is of opinion that the person shows symptoms of any of these diseases he may prohibit his embarkation. He may also prohibit the embarkation of any person who has been in such close relation with persons showing symptoms of any of these diseases as to render him liable to transmit infection.

(2) If severe smallpox (variola major) exists in any part of Great Britain the medical officer may prohibit any person coming from such part, who has been in such contact with any person suffering from the disease as to render him liable to transmit infection, from embarking on any aircraft going beyond Great Britain, Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man :

Provided that no person shall be so prohibited if he satisfies the medical officer that he has been vaccinated within a period of three years excluding the last twelve days thereof, or that he has had a previous attack of smallpox, or if he shows local signs of early reaction attesting an adequate immunity.

Infected localities.

12. Where the Minister has, by notice published in the London Gazette, declared that a locality is infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever, or that typhus fever or smallpox exists therein in an epidemic form, the following provisions shall operate in that locality until the notice is revoked by a subsequent notice published in the London Gazette:

(a) The medical officer may, and within three hours after receiving a request from the commander so to do shall, medically examine any person who proposes to embark on or is on board an aircraft;

(b) The medical officer, or other authorised officer of the responsible authority may, and on the request of the commander shall, inspect any clothing, bedding or other article of personal use which belongs to or is in use or is intended for use by the commander or a member of the crew or any person who proposes to embark on or is on board an aircraft and which, in the opinion of the medical officer or other authorised officer as aforesaid may have been exposed to infection, and he may require the disinfection or destruction of any such clothing, bedding or article of personal use;

(c) The medical officer, or other officer as aforesaid may require any parts of an aircraft which, in his opinion, may be infected to be cleansed and disinfected to his satisfaction;

(d) No person shall take or cause to be taken on board an aircraft any body linen, clothing or bedding or any article whatsoever which, in the opinion of the medical officer, or other officer as aforesaid, is capable of carrying infection, unless that officer is satisfied that it has been efficiently disinfected;

(e) If the locality is declared to be infected with plague, the medical officer may, and shall if so required by the Minister, take steps to secure the deratisation of any aircraft on which he has reason to believe that there are rats;

(f) If typhus fever is declared to exist in an epidemic form in the locality, the medical officer may require any person who proposes to embark on or is on board an aircraft and who in his opinion is likely to convey infection, and any article on or proposed to be carried on the aircraft likely to convey infection, to be deloused.

PART IV.—GENERAL.

Appointment and duties of officers and provision of services by local authority.

13. Nothing in this part of these regulations shall affect any power conferred or duty imposed on any person by any other provision in these regulations.

14. For the purposes of these regulations, the responsible authority may, and if so required by the Minister shall,—

(a) appoint in addition to the medical officer of health one or more duly qualified medical practitioners for the purpose of performing or of assisting the medical officer of health in the exercise of all or any of the functions assigned to the medical officer by these regulations, and give directions from time to time as to which of the said duties are to be or may be performed by any such medical practitioner;

(b) appoint for a sanitary aerodrome one or more assistant officers to act under the direction of the medical officer in the execution of these regulations;

(c) at or in connection with a customs aerodrome provide or arrange for the provision of—

(i) premises and waiting rooms for medical inspections and examinations;

(ii) means of transport;

(iii) premises for the temporary isolation of persons for whom such accommodation is required for the purposes of these regulations;

(iv) hospital accommodation for persons to whom these regulations are applicable;

PUBLIC HEALTH

(d) at or in connection with a sanitary aerodrome provide or arrange for the provision of—

(i) apparatus or means for the cleaning, disinfection and disinsecting of aircraft, persons and clothing and other articles, and the deratisation of aircraft;

(ii) equipment and facilities for the examination of suspected material in a laboratory;

(e) do all such other things as in the opinion of the responsible authority or of the Minister as the case may be, are necessary for the purpose of enabling the provisions of these regulations to be complied with.

Powers and duties of medical officer.

15.—(1) The medical officer may, and if so required by the responsible authority or by the Minister shall,—

(a) examine any person arriving by an aircraft who is suffering from infectious disease;

(b) examine any person arriving by an aircraft, where there are reasonable grounds for believing or suspecting that infectious disease is or may be present on the aircraft or that persons on board the aircraft have been exposed to infection from infectious disease during the voyage of the aircraft or during a period of three weeks immediately preceding the arrival of the aircraft;

(c) detain for the purpose of examination any person whom he is empowered or required under this regulation to examine;

(d) take steps with a view to the isolation of any such person if in exceptional circumstances he thinks it necessary, or prohibit him from leaving the aerodrome save upon such specified conditions as appear to the medical officer to be reasonably necessary to prevent the spread of infection;

(e) require the commander to take or assist in taking such steps as, in the opinion of the medical officer, are reasonably necessary for preventing the spread of infection by any such person, for the destruction of insects or vermin, and for the removal of conditions on the aircraft likely to convey infection, including conditions the existence of which might facilitate the harbouring of vermin.

(2) At a sanitary aerodrome the medical officer may examine any person arriving by an aircraft who is reasonably believed to be verminous and may cause any such person and the clothing of or other articles belonging to such person to be cleansed and disinfected.

(3) The medical officer shall forthwith communicate to the responsible authority any directions given to him by the Minister under this regulation.

16. The medical officer may cause any person arriving by an aircraft who appears to be suffering from infectious disease other than tuberculosis to be removed to some hospital or other suitable place approved for that purpose by the responsible authority.

17. If an aircraft arrives at a customs aerodrome other than a sanitary aerodrome, and the medical officer considers that such sanitary measures should be applied to the aircraft or the passengers or crew as can be applied only at a sanitary aerodrome, he may direct that the aircraft shall proceed to a sanitary aerodrome, and he shall give the commander notice in writing of such direction and of the reasons for the direction.

18.—(1) The medical officer shall enter in the journey log-book of an aircraft under the heading "Observations"—

(i) if the aircraft leaves the aerodrome within a period of fifteen days from the date on which the medical officer becomes aware of the appearance in the United Kingdom of plague, cholera or yellow fever, or of typhus fever or smallpox in an epidemic form, a statement as to such appearance as aforesaid;

(ii) a statement as to any person embarking on or continuing his voyage in the aircraft who in the view of the medical officer should be placed under surveillance.

(2) The commander shall as soon as practicable enter in the journey log-book under the heading " Observations " a statement of any facts relevant to public health which have arisen on the aircraft in the course of the voyage, and a statement of any sanitary measures prescribed or permitted by the Convention which have been applied to the aircraft before the commencement of or during the course of the voyage. If the commander so requests the medical officer shall verify and certify any entry relating to measures applied by him or at his direction.

19.—(1) In deciding whether any and if so what sanitary measures should be applied to an aircraft or the passengers and crew, the medical officer shall take into account any sanitary measures which have been applied at another aerodrome whether in England and Wales or elsewhere, as noted in the journey log-book of the aircraft, and shall not require the application of any sanitary measures if since their previous application no incident has occurred calling for their renewed application and the aircraft has not visited, except for the purpose of refuelling, a locality infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever, or a locality where typhus fever or smallpox is epidemic.

(2) In applying sanitary measures to an aircraft or the passengers or crew, the medical officer shall have regard to the need for detaining the aircraft for as short a time as possible.

20.—(1) The medical officer shall forthwith inform the customs officer of any measures taken with reference to an aircraft or its cargo, stores or equipment, or the passengers or crew, in pursuance of these regulations.

(2) The medical officer when he releases an aircraft from detention shall give notice in writing to the customs officer, to the commander of the aircraft, and to the person in charge of the aerodrome that, so far as control under these regulations is concerned, the aircraft is free to proceed at or after a date and time stated in the notice.

Duties of commander.

21.—(1) The commander of an aircraft shall—

(a) answer all questions as to the health conditions on board which may be put to him by a customs officer or medical officer, or other authorised officer of the responsible authority, produce to those officers the journey log-book of the aircraft if they so require, and furnish them with all such information and assistance as they may reasonably require for the purposes of these regulations;

(b) notify forthwith the medical officer of any death caused otherwise than by accident or any case or suspected case of infectious disease on the aircraft, and of any circumstances on board which are likely to lead to infection or the spread of infectious disease; and

(c) comply with these regulations and any directions or requirements given to or made of him in pursuance of these regulations.

(2) If an infected aircraft or an aircraft coming from a locality infected with plague, cholera or yellow fever, or a locality where typhus fever or smallpox is epidemic lands elsewhere than at a customs aerodrome—

(a) the commander shall forthwith notify the responsible authority or the customs officer or a police officer. He shall comply with any reasonable directions which any such authority or officer as the case may be may give, and shall, if possible, proceed to a sanitary aerodrome;

(b) no cargo shall be unloaded from the aircraft without the permission of the customs officer;

(c) before any passenger or member of the crew leaves the vicinity of the aircraft the responsible authority or the customs officer or a police officer may require him to state his name and his intended destination and address. If a person having been required so to state his intended destination and address either is unable to do so or arrives within the succeeding fourteen days at a place other than that which he has so stated, he shall immediately after his arrival forward particulars of his actual place of arrival and his address to the responsible authority of the place in which he left the aircraft;

PUBLIC HEALTH

Charges for services.

23.—(1) Where the commander of an aircraft is required by or in pursuance of these regulations to carry out any measures with a view to reducing the danger or preventing the spread of infection, the responsible authority may themselves at the request of the commander, and, if they think fit, at his cost, cause any such requirement to be complied with instead of enforcing the requirement against the commander. When the responsible authority cause any such requirement to be complied with at the cost of the commander they may, if they think fit, require the amount of the charge for the work or a part thereof to be paid to or deposited with them before the work is undertaken.

(2) The amount of the charge for any work so to be undertaken by the responsible authority shall be such reasonable sum as represents the actual or estimated cost to be incurred in undertaking the work excluding any charge or claim in respect of profit, so, however, that it shall not exceed the sum of ten pounds unless notice of the proposed charge has been given to the commander before the work is undertaken.

(3) Where any action (including any measures of disinfection or disinsectisation) has been taken in regard to an aircraft in pursuance of these regulations, the responsible authority or the medical officer shall, on the request of the commander or any other interested person, furnish the commander or such other person free of charge with a statement in writing recording the particulars of any such action and the reasons why the action was taken.

(4) The medical officer shall on the request of any person arriving by an aircraft on which there has been a case of plague, yellow fever, typhus fever or smallpox, or a case presenting clinical signs of cholera, furnish such person free of charge with a statement in writing showing the date of arrival and any sanitary measures to which he or any articles in his possession have been subjected.

Recovery of fees and charges.

24. Every charge authorised by regulation 23 shall be recoverable by the responsible authority as if it were a sum which the local authority are entitled to recover under section 293 of the Public Health Act, 1936, and that section shall apply accordingly.

25. Subject to the provisions of regulation 23 any expenses incurred by a county council a local authority or a port health authority in the execution of the regulations shall be defrayed in the same manner as the expenses incurred by them in the execution and discharge of their existing powers and duties.

Saving for mails.

26. Save as is provided in regulation 27 (2) or in Parts A and B of the schedule to these regulations, nothing in these regulations shall render liable to detention, disinfection or destruction any article forming part of any mail conveyed under the authority of the Postmaster-General, or of the postal administration of any other Government, or shall prejudicially affect the receipt on board and delivery in due course at the place of destination of any such mail in accordance with the provisions of the Post Office Acts.

Saving for aircraft continuing voyage.

27.—(1) If the commander of an aircraft which has landed at an aerodrome or other place in England and Wales which is not its final destination does not desire to submit to any requirements of these regulations which may be applicable and notifies the medical officer of his intention, he shall be at liberty to continue the voyage without such submission:

Provided that if the aircraft has on board a case of yellow fever, or comes from a locality infected with yellow fever, the medical officer may require that it shall be subjected to such of the measures prescribed or permitted by the Convention in relation to that disease as he considers necessary.

(2) Where the commander notifies the medical officer as aforesaid he shall not land goods or disembark passengers except subject to such conditions as the medical officer may impose in conformity with the provisions of Article 57 of the Convention.

MEMORANDUM $\frac{2}{\text{Med.}}$ (a).

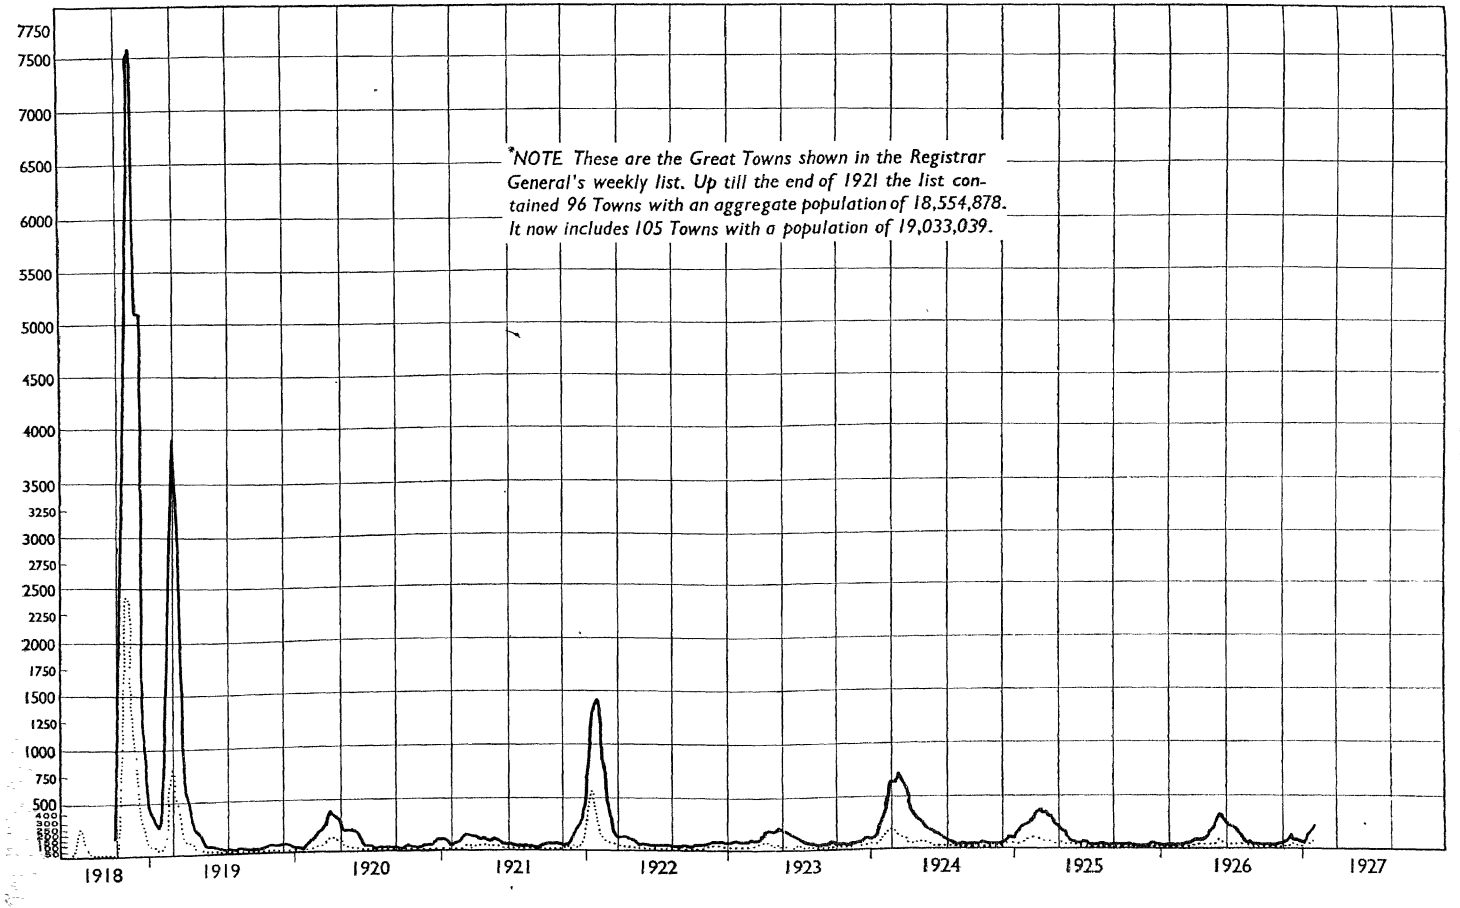
MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

MEMORANDUM ON INFLUENZA.

I.—INTRODUCTION.

Recent revival of interest in the elusive and baffling disease appropriately named "influenza" dates from the terrible pandemic of 1918–19. Previous pandemics had occurred in 1803, 1833, 1837, 1847 and 1890, but none of these was so devastating in its effects as that of 1918. The disease first made its appearance in this country in June and July of that year, and was followed after a short interval by a second wave of prevalence during October, November and December. A third wave of considerable magnitude occurred in the following February and March.



In the summer epidemic the civilian population escaped comparatively lightly, although in the aggregate the death roll was considerable. In the seven weeks from June 22nd to August 10th, 1918, the number of deaths from influenza in the ninety-six Great Towns (population 18,554,878) numbered 4,894, or 29·3 per 100,000 population. The second and third waves were characterised by a much more severe type of illness with marked tendency to pulmonary complications and a consequently heavier mortality. From October 12th to December 28th, 1918, the deaths in the ninety-six Great Towns registered as due to influenza were 44,537, i.e., 269 per 100,000 population. Higher rates, over 400 per 100,000, occurred during this period in some of these great towns. In the winter epidemic the corresponding figures for the period February 1st to April 5th, 1919, were 17,219, or 104 per 100,000 population.

The 1918–19 epidemic was world-wide and caused more deaths and disablement than the Great War. In India alone it is estimated that more than six million persons died from the disease. In England and Wales the deaths during the forty-six weeks June 23rd, 1918, to May 10th, 1919, numbered 151,446, including 140,989 civilians—equivalent to an annual civilian death-rate of 4,774 per million population. No such mortality as this has ever before been recorded for any epidemic in this country since registration commenced. The only outbreak approaching it in severity was the cholera epidemic of 1849, when the mortality from that cause reached 3,033 per million population.

Apart from its severity, the most noteworthy feature of the pandemic was the change in the age incidence of the deaths from the extremes to the middle years of life. Young adults were specially affected, not only in this country, but also in France and in America. The largest proportion of deaths occurred in persons under forty-five years of age. This characteristic has been absent in subsequent outbreaks.

The history of influenza in England and Wales since 1919 is graphically shown in the accompanying chart of the deaths from that disease week by week in London and the Great Towns (which has appeared annually in the official report On the State of the Public Health). It will be observed that considerable outbreaks occurred in 1922 and 1924, with minor recrudescences in other years.

It should be understood that the deaths attributed to influenza are generally due to pulmonary or cardiac complications, and not to influenza itself; influenza if uncomplicated, produces a short, sharp illness, from which recovery is usually rapid. In severe and fatal cases the intervention of some microbe not specifically associated with influenza has usually been demonstrated. This invasion has doubtless been facilitated by a lowering of resistance produced by the specific virus. The occurrence of pneumonia is one of the commonest effects of such an invasion, particularly in the autumn and in the spring.

Infection passes very rapidly through a community. In any particular locality affected during epidemic prevalence the period during which the disease spreads acutely and swiftly is usually some four or five weeks, being longer than this in the case of large towns, and shorter in that of smaller compact communities.

Broadly speaking, all parts of the country usually participate in an epidemic, but the date of onset varies in different areas. For example, in the autumn epidemic of 1918, a sort of halting progress could be traced from the south and west upwards towards the north-eastern counties. In the 1919 epidemic, there appeared to be reversal of this order, and the northern towns were among the first to be attacked. Various methods of forecasting the period when influenza is likely to become epidemic have been suggested. The two best known, that of Dr. Brownlee postulating a recrudescence at intervals of thirty-three weeks and that of Mr. Spear which assumes that epidemics tend to occur at equal intervals before and after the thirty-fifth week of the year, have been considered to give fairly satisfactory results, especially perhaps the latter. But, from the nature of things, having regard to the fact that no such rules could throw any light upon the severity of an epidemic, it must be admitted that our present knowledge of the epidemiology of influenza is insufficient to enable a central authority to give timely warning of the oncoming of a serious epidemic.

Epidemic periods usually end by the waves of prevalence becoming less intense and more widely spaced out. The existence of influenza in these later periods becomes more and more confused with that of ordinary colds and acute catarrhs, which come to be regarded as "influenza" on comparatively slight evidence. Various ailments, such a neuritis, which may owe their origin to a variety of causes, are also somewhat loosely attributed to influenza, as a result of the fact that such ailments, during the main epidemic period, frequently complicate influenza. Thus, by degrees, Acute Epidemic Influenza ceases to be thought of, but "influenza" remains a term which is applied generally to many catarrhal and indeterminate febrile conditions of which is invoked as a probable explanation of the occurrence of symptoms which are known to follow influenza. The consequent difficulty in securing a continuous record of the occurrence of true influenza is one of the factors which makes it impossible to forecast with any confidence the arrival of a new epidemic wave.

Research into the causation of influenza, into its spread in epidemic form, into its pathology, and into its remedy, is being continuously pursued by many workers of our own and other countries. Steps have been taken by the Ministry to keep as fully informed as possible of its general results and to participate in epidemiological inquiries. The Report on Influenza * published by the Ministry in 1920 reviewed and brought up to date our knowledge of the epidemiology of the disease. Since then other investigations have been initiated under the auspices of the Ministry, and at present a comprehensive study is being made of the flora of the nose and throat with particular reference to the organisms associated with the complications of influenza and the possibility of correlating changes in their distribution with the occurrence of epidemics. Such investigations, however keenly pursued, and however many the workers, require time and patience if trustworthy results are to be obtained. As yet we do not know the nature of the living virus to which influenza is due. The laboratory has not yet given us a specific form of treatment of influenza or of protection against it.

At present, therefore, the fact must be accepted that in a period of world-wide prevalence most members of the community who go about their ordinary avocations must expect to be exposed to infection and many to have the illness in some form or other, all scientific investigations notwithstanding. Nevertheless, it is the duty of the individual not only to do the best for himself in case of attack, but, as much depends on the intensity and dose of the infection, to do his best also to protect others. It is likewise the duty of public health authorities to take any practicable steps, during a wave of epidemic prevalence, (a) to lessen the opportunities of infection, (b) to assist in the treatment and nursing of individual cases, and (c) to help to mitigate the hardships and risks which often result when several members of a household are simultaneously attacked.

In these circumstances it will be convenient here, first, to restate for public information some of the principal known facts regarding influenza, and, secondly, to review some of the experience which has been gained by local authorities in their attempts to deal with outbreaks of this disease.

II.—General Observations on Influenza, and the Individual Action Required when the Disease is Prevalent.

No sure means are yet available for distinguishing the "common or influenzal cold" from true influenza, nor is it yet certain that they are distinct clinical entities. The autumn and winter outbreaks of "influenzal catarrh" are, except in severity, clinically indistinguishable either in themselves or in their complications, including pneumonia, from the disease which wrought such world-wide havoc during the pandemics of 1918 and 1890. The disproportionate occurrence of a special symptom, a well-recognised phenomenon in the case of epidemics, does not invalidate this statement.

The Bacteriology of Influenza.

No conspicuous advance has been made recently in our knowledge of the bacteriology of influenza. Opinion is still divided between adherents of Pfeiffer's theory and those who believe that the true causal agent is some other organism—probably a filter-passer. Recent reports on the isolation of a filter-passer, while not lacking conviction on the part of their authors, recognise that the work has not yet advanced to the stage which would entitle this theory to general acceptance. And, on the other hand, the claims for Pfeiffer's bacillus are now put forward in a somewhat temperate fashion, with the admission that they are not fully substantiated. Work is still being done on the filter-passer which Olitsky and Gates have called Bacterium pneumosintes. But though some confirmatory results of their work have been announced, the general attitude of the profession remains one of scepticism.

* Reports on Public Health and Medical Subjects No. 4.

PUBLIC HEALTH

Whilst maintaining that the causal relationship of his bacillus is still the be explanation which is available, Pfeiffer admits that the influenza problem has n yet been conclusively solved. He recognises that no explanation is forthcoming f the remarkable increase in the virulence of the bacillus which must be assumed occur at the onset of an epidemic. Attempts to associate the bacillus with the disea by serological methods have not proved satisfactory.

The present outlook as to the primary causation, therefore, is not particular hopeful. It seems likely that the Pfeiffer school will continue for an indefinite peri to point to the absence of a better claim and to ask that judgment should be award to them by default; and the opposite side have in all probability a long task befo them if they are to accumulate sufficient evidence to carry conviction.

This unsatisfactory aspect of the influenza problem naturally gives rise to t question why bacteriological progress is so slow. Probably one reason is that t nature of the work, in dealing with the diseases which are now sub judice, presen greater difficulties than those which were overcome by the brilliant bacteriologic discoveries of last century. For example, in anthrax, tuberculosis and plagu absolute proof was readily attainable. The discovered bacillus was always found the particular disease and in no other; it could be grown without difficulty in pu culture outside the body; and, by means of such cultures, the same disease cou easily be reproduced experimentally and the bacterium could be recovered from t lesions. But there is a scientific consciousness at the present day that these thr postulates cannot always be fulfilled in respect of all diseases which are undoubted of microbic origin. It is possible for one bacterial species to produce more than o kind of "disease." It is not true that the same bacteria (not artificially attenuate regularly produce disease when the conditions of their environment are the sam With some species of bacteria, capacity for virulence is highly irregular and variabl the same strain may produce acute infection or chronic disease, or it may fail cause any lesions; and a strain which has previously behaved as a harmless sapr phyte may suddenly acquire unanticipated virulence in vivo. The reasons for the changes in bacterial capacity and power are highly obscure and form one of the mo important problems in the study of bacterial infection. Their elucidation w possibly help to solve the influenza problem.

In regard to the means of spread of the disease, experience has provided, howev more certain ground of fact. Infection is conveyed from the sick to the healthy the secretions of the respiratory surfaces. In coughing, sneezing, and even in lo talking, these are transmitted through the air for considerable distances, in the fo of a fine spray. There is a special danger of receiving a massive infection from person talking loudly within four feet, or coughing or sneezing, without interposing a screen, within ten feet. A lesser danger is incurred when finer infective particles a carried longer distances by draughts or air convection currents. The channels reception are normally the nose and throat, and there is evidence that infection c be received through the eyes. Only a brief exposure appears to be necessary order to contract infection.

It is manifest that the closer the contact, the more readily will transmission infection occur; hence the paramount importance of avoiding overcrowding a thronging of every sort, whether in places of public resort, public conveyanc factories, camps, dwelling-rooms or dormitories. Special danger of spread of sec dary infections, with consequent increase in the number of severe cases, is incur when many persons are aggregated in the same sleeping quarters, with insufficie space between head and head.

Infection can also be carried to the mouth by hands which have been soiled secretions from the nose or throat of an infected person; for example, by a soi pocket handkerchief. The evidence available makes it appear probable that, everyday life, acute and temporary overcrowding in trains, trams, omnibuses a places of entertainment is a more important factor in the spread of epidemic influe than is overcrowding in the home. No regular increase of the attack r with increase of the number of persons per room in urban tenements has b proved.

Incubation.

The sum of available evidence favours the belief that the period of incubation is bout forty-eight hours, or even somewhat less.

Immunity after attack.

Persons attacked by influenza in the summer of 1918 suffered less than the rest f the population in the following autumn epidemic. Relatively, there were also ewer severe and fatal cases in the autumn among those who had previously been ffected in the summer. Thus there is evidence that an attack of influenza may, for few months at least, confer some degree of immunity against a second attack, nd also may diminish the severity of a second illness should it occur. This rule has, owever, been subject to a sufficient number of individual exceptions to make it robable that some strains of the infecting organism do not protect against second ttacks. In particular, there is little evidence that attacks in the autumn of 1918 onferred substantial immunity from infection in the following winter.

Measures of Personal Protection.

The dangers of influenza are gravely increased by the complications, and much an be done to avoid or to mitigate these. Such complications may develop without revious signs of severe illness.

Carefulness does undoubtedly decrease, and carelessness increase, both sickness nd death ; it is important, therefore, that the public should have a clear idea of such practicable measures of personal protection as are available against infection. The ndividual must be taught to realise and acquiesce in his duty to the community.

Ventilation.—Well-ventilated airy rooms promote physical well-being, and to hat extent, at any rate, are inimical to infection. Fresh air dilutes and dissipates nfective material. Draughts are due to unskilful ventilation, and are harmful; chilling of the body surface should be avoided.

Nutrition.—Good nourishing food is desirable. A memorandum issued in 1919 by the Royal College of Physicians states that " alcoholic excess invites disaster ; within the limits of moderation each person will be wise to maintain unaltered whatever habit experience has proved to be most agreeable to his own health." Cod-liver oil is often a valuable supplement to the dietary.

Gargles for the throat.—Throat gargling night and morning, or more frequently during an epidemic, has been recommended as a preventive measure, though its importance should not be overrated. It may be employed with special advantage on returning home after exposure to infection in a crowd or close contact with an infected person. Various antiseptics have been recommended for this purpose, but probably the most effective, as well as the most popular, is thymol in one or other of its combinations. A simple and agreeable mouth wash for ordinary use is made by adding a full tablespoonful of compound glycerine of thymol to a tumbler of warm water. A cheaper form of gargle and probably as effective, is made by adding permanganate of potash to a tumbler of warm water, enough to give the liquid a pink colour (1 part of permanganate in 5,000).

Face Masks.—On present knowledge the public is not advised to make use of face masks during a period of influenza prevalence. By hindering the free circulation of air through the nasal passages they cause turgescence and œdema of the mucous membrane and probably induce greater liability to attack by any germs which may be present. Temporary use of masks by those in attendance on the sick may, however, be occasionally desirable.

Protection by Vaccines.—The chief dangers of influenza lie in its complications. Until the causal organism of influenza has been isolated with certainty and cultivated, we cannot hope to prepare a vaccine which can be guaranteed to ward off an attack of the disease, but there is presumptive evidence that something can be done by the use of vaccines of suitable composition to lessen the risk of the attack being complicated by secondary infections. For example, there is still doubt as to the ætiological significance of the bacillus isolated and described by Pfeiffer. It may or may not prove to be the essential infecting agent. There is no question, however, as to its almost constant association with influenza and of its being a factor of primary importance in the production of the fatal sequelæ. On the other secondary invaders, the pneumococcus and streptococcus are the most important.

It is mainly with the intention of mitigating or preventing the sequelæ of influenza that vaccines have hitherto been employed. Most of those which have been tried consist of killed emulsions of the above-named organisms, either singly or in combination. Vaccines of this description have been widely used both at home and abroad since 1918. Such direct evidence as the Ministry has been able to collect does not encourage an optimistic view of their value. On the other hand, we have the testimony of individual observers which seems to show that they may be of service in certain cases in diminishing the severity of the attack.

Protection by drugs.—No drug has yet been proved to have any specific influence as a preventive of influenza.

Needless exposure.—During influenza prevalence, those who are able to do so will diminish their chances of contracting the disease by keeping away from all places of public resort or social gatherings. Most persons are able to avoid at least some occasions of forming part of a crowd or assembly without prejudice to their necessary occupations, and should do so.

PRECAUTIONS WHEN ATTACKED.

Continuing at work after the first symptoms appear is bad for the patient, and may be dangerous to others. Workers obviously ill should at once be sent or taken home. Where influenza is prevalent no person should in any way be penalised for staying away from work bona fide, for even a slight attack of influenza or any form of feverish cold. On the contrary, he should be expected and required so to do.

At the first feeling of illness or rise of temperature the patient should go to bed, keep warm, and seek medical treatment. The doctor, if called in immediately at onset, is afforded the opportunity of giving advice or treatment which may in many cases ward off the more dangerous complications. Relapses and complications are much less likely to occur if the patient goes to bed at once and remains there till all fever has gone for two or three days; much harm may be done by getting about too early. Chill and over-exertion during convalescence are fruitful of evil consequences.

The early stages of an attack are the most infectious, but infection may persist throughout the illness, and isolation should be maintained at least till the temperature is normal. If the patient cannot occupy a separate room, the head of the bed should, if possible, be screened off from the rest of the apartment.

The virus of influenza is easily destroyed, and extensive measures of disinfection are not called for. Expectoration should be received when possible in a suitable receptacle in which is a solution of chloride of lime or other distinfectant. Discarded handkerchiefs should be immediately placed in disinfectant or, if of paper, burnt.

The liability of the immediate attendants to infection may be materially diminished by avoiding inhalation of the patient's breath, and particularly when he is coughing, sneezing or talking. A handkerchief or other screen should be held before the mouth, and the head turned aside during coughing and sneezing. The risk of conveyance of infection by the fingers must be constantly guarded against, and the hands should be washed at once after contact with the patient or with mucus from the nose or throat.

Each case should be treated under the direction of the medical attendant. No drug has as yet been proved to have any specific curative effect on influenza, though some may be useful in guiding its course and mitigating its symptoms. The patient's recovery should be fully established before he returns to work.

III.—ACTION BY SANITARY AUTHORITIES TO COMBAT INFLUENZA OUTBREAKS.

Quarantine.—The question of the prevention by quarantine of the importation of influenza from abroad has been considered and may be dismissed as impracticable.

Education.—Health authorities should endeavour to inform the public, by means of leaflets, posters, notices in the Press, lectures in the schools, etc., as to the nature and gravity of the malady, how to prevent infection, and the precautions to be observed in case of attack. The leaflets should advise ordinary prudence in diet and general mode of life, the avoidance of crowded gatherings, the importance of free ventilation, early isolation of the sick, cleanliness, the disinfection of discharges from the nose and mouth, and other precautions calculated to maintain the health and resistance of the individual and to diminish the opportunities of infection.

In this connection it is particularly desirable that authorities should make widely known full and exact information respecting the local facilities which have been provided in the district. Thus:

How to apply for nursing assistance.
Special arrangements, if any, for the provision of domiciliary medical attendance.
How to apply for "home help" for an influenza-stricken household.
Special arrangements made during an epidemic at public kitchens, crèches, etc.
Hospitals available for sudden or severe cases.
Ambulance service or first aid available.
Or other necessary local information.

Notification.—On a balance of the considerations involved, the Ministry have decided that it is not advisable to make influenza a disease which is compulsorily notifiable throughout the country. Better prevention of this disease cannot be expected as a result of its notification; while the notification of all "influenza" does not help local authorities to the knowledge of those cases where assistance to the individual patient or his household is most needed.

Moreover, regarded merely from the statistical standpoint, the value of influenza notification returns is limited, both on account of the numberless unnotified cases not seen by a doctor and of the uncertainties often attaching to the significance of the term "influenza."

Notification of severe cases.—In some places it may, however, be possible to make a useful arrangement with local practitioners whereby all cases in which the assistance of the local authority is required, in the form of nursing, home help, or institutional treatment, are notified voluntarily to the Medical Officer of Health. Elsewhere, health visitors may be employed to obtain knowledge of all such cases in the ordinary course of their district visiting. Under the Public Health (Pneumonia, Malaria, Dysentery, etc.) Regulations, Acute Primary Pneumonia and Acute Influenzal Pneumonia are now compulsorily notifiable in all districts in England and Wales.

Efforts to lessen the opportunities for infection.—Notwithstanding the wide distribution of advice, the importance of isolation of the patient and of protection of those in attendance on him appears to be only imperfectly realised. One of the most tragic features of the last pandemic was the high mortality in hospital staffs. It is possible that some of this might have been prevented by the observance of the precautions ordinarily adopted in nursing acute infectious diseases.

Closure of Schools.—This measure may sometimes be employed with advantage, particularly in rural and small urban districts where the excluded children have few opportunities of coming in contact with each other outside the school; the measure is of little utility in densely populated urban areas. Where the closure of day schools is resolved upon, the Sunday schools should also be closed. Children showing symptoms of influenza should be excluded from school during the period of attack, and should not be re-admitted until a careful medical examination of the heart and lungs has been made to eliminate possible latent complications and sequelæ.

Public places of entertainment are justifiably regarded as important foci of the spread of the disease. By the terms of their licence, the proprietors of many cinema theatres are compelled, under certain circumstances, to exclude from their performances children of school age, and to provide intervals for the efficient perflation and ventilation of the building. Regulations issued by the Local Government Board in November, 1918, made these conditions apply to all places of public entertainment throughout the country. These emergency regulations, which were admittedly incomplete in certain respects, were withdrawn in May, 1919, with the subsidence of the winter wave, and no sufficient justification has yet been advanced for their re-issue.

Other centres of overcrowding.—The overcrowding of trains and trams was held largely responsible for the spread of the disease in 1918, and in the light of further experience, the Ministry are disposed to endorse this opinion; it must be remembered that the intensity of such congestion is usually greater than in even grossly overcrowded tenements. The fact that it is only endured for short continuous periods is not a barrier to successful passage of a highly infective virus from person to person. As regards 'buses and trams, permanent through ventilation should be generally advocated and adopted.

Disinfection.—The routine disinfection of premises and articles after use by influenza patients is not called for, but a thorough washing and cleansing of rooms and their contents and of washable articles, bedding or apparel is desirable. The practice of spraying halls and places of public resort with a disinfectant fluid is of doubtful utility, and only tends to create a false sense of security.

Organisation of domiciliary medical and nursing service and division of district into areas for this purpose.—Where, in serious epidemics, difficulty is experienced in securing early and adequate professional treatment of the cases as they arise there is sometimes advantage in forming a "pool" of unattached medical men whose services can be placed at the disposal of practitioners as required. In the larger areas part of such a "pool" may be formed by the use of the health authorities' own medical staff.

Shortage of nurses is often a more serious problem, but much may be accomplished by subdividing the districts into small areas and using one or more nurses in each area as a nucleus round which a service of voluntary helpers can be gathered. In extreme emergencies it may even be advisable for a local authority to suspend temporarily its maternity and child welfare work and to liberate its health visitors for domiciliary nursing. The co-operation of the local district nursing association, if such exists, should be enlisted in carrying out any scheme of nursing which may be decided upon. Much can also be done in the way of providing home assistance. All cases coming to the notice of the health visitors may be carefully investigated, note being made as to the amount and kind of assistance needed. In certain districts it may be found desirable, during a period of special stress, that emergency kitchens should be improvised for the supply of food to affected households; it is often advisable to establish crèches for the reception of children from households where the patients are stricken with the disease.

Provision of institutional treatment.—Often a local authority will find it helpful to use one or more wards of the Isolation Hospital to supplement the accommodation provided by the General Hospitals and Poor Law Infirmaries, but care is required in the selection of cases for removal to hospital. It should be remembered that, as a rule, patients with pulmonary complications bear removal badly, and, therefore, it should only be attempted with the concurrence and under the supervision of the medical practitioner in attendance. In hospital, the patient should be isolated by screening or otherwise, and ambulance and nursing attendants should observe all precautions usual in treating an acutely infectious respiratory disease.

The importance of rest, warmth, and free ventilation in the treatment of influenza should always be emphasised. By the establishment of emergency hospitals in schools, halls and large unoccupied private houses, the supply of doctors and nurses—particularly the latter—may be considerably economised.

Drugs, etc.—Attempts to induce an increased resistance to infection by administration of commercially advertised medicinal remedies appear to have been justly deprecated or actually discountenanced as likely to do more harm than good.

IV.—SUMMARY AS TO LOCAL ACTION.

It is evident that in some directions local authorities can do much good by energetic action during a wave of epidemic prevalence. Measures can be taken which in the aggregate may reduce the opportunities of exposure to infection, and by thus helping to space out the epidemic something is done to prevent the serious dislocation of the ordinary life of the community which it produces—a dislocation which itself increases the danger by making proper care of the sick difficult. The most important services which can be rendered, however, consist in the organisation of the available nursing service and the provision of assistance to influenza-stricken households.

DIPHTHERIA PROPHYLAXIS.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose for the information of the Authority a copy of a revised edition of the Memorandum on the Production of Artificial Immunity against Diphtheria (Memo. 170/Med.), the original edition of which was issued in November, 1932.

2. It is hoped that this brief statement will simplify the task of Local Authorities and Medical Officers of Health in districts in which the question of immunisation is under consideration; and that it will be useful to medical practitioners generally.

3. It is also believed that, in view of the present emergency, the Memorandum will be of particular interest to Authorities in Reception Areas.

4. The Minister is prepared, on the application of a Local Authority, to approve, under Section 177 (1) of the Public Health Act, 1936, or Section 277 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1936, the gratuitous provision of the necessary facilities. In cases of County Councils which are also Welfare Authorities, approval would be given under Section 204 of the Public Health Act, 1936, to the provision of facilities for immunisation as a part of the Maternity and Child Welfare Service.

5. The Authority will, of course, appreciate the necessity of obtaining in advance the written consent of the parents or guardians of all children whom it is proposed to test or immunise.

6. Copies of this letter and of the Memorandum are being sent to the Medical Officer of Health. Further copies of the Memorandum can be purchased from His Majesty's Stationery Office or through any bookseller. (Price 1*d.* net, by post 1½*d.*)

I am, Sir,
Your obedient, Servant,
J. N. BECKETT,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk of the Authority.

MEMORANDUM 170/MED. (a)

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

THE PRODUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL IMMUNITY AGAINST DIPHTHERIA.

I.—GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS.

1. Diphtheria is a disease due to invasion of the upper respiratory passages by a bacillus, Corynebacterium diphtheriæ, which grows and multiplies on the mucous membrances. The results of this growth are twofold; (1) there is local damage to the mucous surfaces with the formation of an inflammatory exudate; this may cover only a small portion of the tonsils or palate or may be very extensive, spreading into the larynx and trachea so as to cause suffocation: primary attack on the nose, larynx and trachea also occurs; (2) the production locally of a potent toxin which is absorbed into the blood stream and damages such important organs as the heart, liver and nerves. Death is most commonly due to these toxic effects.

2. Diphtheria is essentially a disease of children under fifteen years of age. About 60,000 cases are notified annually in England and Wales and the average annual number of deaths is approximately 3,000. It occupies the seventh place in order of magnitude amongst the causes of mortality during the first two years of life, and at four it becomes and remains for six or seven years the principal cause of death. Diphtheria is therefore the most common sole cause of death in children of school age; no abatement of incidence or permanent reduction of mortality has taken place since the early years of the century. The annual reports of the Registrar-General show that in 1910 the incidence per 100,000 of the population was 133 and the mortality under fifteen years of age was 38·4; in 1920 the corresponding figures were 186 and 51; in 1930 184 and 34; in 1937 149 and 31.

3. Attempts to control the spread of Diphtheria by compulsory notification, removal to hospital and the disinfection of rooms, bedding, clothes, etc., have long ago reached the limit of their usefulness. The reason for this is that diphtheria is most commonly conveyed by direct transmission from an infective person of droplets of moisture discharged into the air during coughing, sneezing, laughing or even during talking and deep breathing. Infective persons are not necessarily, or even most commonly, those obviously suffering from the disease or in the incubation stage of it; the chief source of infection is the apparently healthy "carrier," i.e., the person who shows no sign of illness but whose throat or nose is harbouring virulent diphtheria bacilli. In districts where diphtheria is endemic the infection is gradually disseminated in this way with the result that a large proportion of the population become immunised to the disease before the end of school life, but the cost of this (natural) process is heavy—in mortality, in sickness and in permanent disability.

4. Artificial immunisation on the other hand when carried out with proper precautions involves no risk to the individual or the community. The experience of the United States of America and of Canada shows that if three-quarters of the number of children at each year below fifteen were immune and this level be maintained year by year it will practically abolish the disease. The immunisation of children of school age will not suffice to reduce the incidence of Diphtheria in a community. This can only be accomplished if the majority of children of pre-school age are also immunised.

It is obviously desirable that the advantages of this form of protection should be brought to the notice of parents and guardians of children of over one year of age and that where practicable the necessary facilities should be offered to them.

II.—THE BASIS OF ACQUIRED IMMUNITY.

1. In early infancy, apart from the first few months of life when a variable degree of passive immunity may exist, there is no defence against diphtheria except the feeble resistance that the cells of the mucous membranes may offer to the implantation and growth of the organism. As the child grows up in a community in which diphtheria is endemic it will be found to develop in its blood a protective substance, antitoxin, which can combine with and render harmless the specific toxin of diphtheria. This antitoxin can be measured with considerable accuracy. It varies in amount from fractions of a unit to several units per 1 ml. of blood. When present to the extent of 0·01 of a unit or more per 1 ml., it confers on the child (or adult) complete or almost complete protection from recognisable or severe diphtheria.

2. This protection can be demonstrated directly by the Schick Test in which a minute amount of diphtheria toxin is injected into the skin: if no antitoxin exists in the blood (or less than 0·01 of a unit per 1 ml.) a local inflammation results, the "positive Schick," whereas in the immune person who possesses greater amounts of antitoxin no effect on the skin is produced.

3. This development of specific antitoxin during childhood and adolescence is to be explained by "subinfection," i.e., by infection of the throat or nose with strains of diphtheria bacilli which, though capable of producing their specific toxin and exciting antitoxin production, are not sufficiently virulent to produce recognisable clinical diphtheria. Such subinfections are naturally more common in crowded communities and in these it is observable that the children develop natural immunity, as shown by the Schick test, at much younger ages and in much greater proportion than in other communities where opportunities of infection are less numerous. As many as 90 per cent. of children in densely populated urban districts may be found immune whereas among children in rural districts there may be less than 10 per cent.

4. A single injection of diphtheria toxin or toxoid in small amount may not be followed by the appearance of an appreciable quantity of antitoxin in the blood but experiments show that an important effect has nevertheless been produced, namely a sensitisation of the body so that a second similar injection induces a much more rapid and abundant antitoxin response. It is this establishment of a basal immunity usually accompanied by the production of small amounts of circulating antitoxin and the increased capacity to respond to the stimulus of a fresh infection that constitutes effective immunity.

III.—Artificial Immunity.

1. Although most cases of Diphtheria occur during school life, the disease is very common and the case mortality highest in the pre-school years. Approximately one in four of all cases under four years of age dies and one out of every two at two years of age. Artificial immunisation should therefore be applied as early in life as is practicable and should form an integral part of the work of child welfare centres. Adults require to be immunised only in exceptional circumstances: nurses and other members of the staff of fever hospitals, who are particularly exposed to infection, are now protected in this manner with excellent results.

2. Artificial immunity requires several weeks or months to develop but, once established, persists for years and perhaps for life, though exceptionally a person may lose his immunity and again give a Schick-positive reaction. Children immunised in infancy should be given a further dose of the prophylactic when they attain school age to ensure adequate protection during the early years of school life.

IV.—Practical Recommendations.

1. Various forms of Diphtheria prophylactic are available for use in different circumstances but all must satisfy the requirements of the Therapeutic Substances Regulations as regards immunising potency and freedom from toxicity. Those mainly used are:

A.P.T. (Alum Precipitated Toxoid) which usually forms a small painless and temporary nodule at the site of injection from which the toxoid is gradually liberated.

F.T. (Formol-Toxoid).

T.A.F. (Toxoid Antitoxin Floccules, the suspended precipitate resulting from mixtures of toxoid and antitoxin). This is the least likely of all prophylactics to cause a local tissue reaction.

T.A.M. (Toxoid Antitoxin Mixture).

2. It is now generally agreed that in routine immunisation a preliminary Schick test need not be done. If F.T. or A.P.T. is used then in order that any undue sensitiveness may be detected * the first dose should not exceed 0·1 or 0·2 c.c. If there is undue reaction the initial dose should be repeated; if there is not, then a relatively large dose, say, 0·5 c.c. should be given.

Of T.A.M., T.A.F. or F.T. it is customary to give three doses at two to three weekly intervals, though attempts have been made to reduce the number in order to secure a readier acceptance of immunisation. For some time much was claimed for the efficacy of one injection of 0·5 c.c. of A.P.T. It has been conclusively shown, however, that in children under eight years of age a dose of 0·1 c.c. followed in four weeks by one of 0·5 c.c. gives much better results. It will be observed that owing to its relative insolubility and slower rate of absorption a somewhat longer interval is advocated for A.P.T., and it has been suggested that better results would be obtained by increasing the interval between the injections of the other prophylactics also to four weeks. For older children and adults, the first dose of 0·1 c.c. serves to detect an unusually sensitive person. Such a person should be given two further

* This procedure dispenses with the necessity for employing the Moloney test for hypersensitiveness. The Moloney test consists of the intradermal injection of 0·1 c.c. of 1–100 diluted formol toxoid. A positive reaction (redness, induration) within 24–48 hours indicates special susceptibility and the necessity for reduced dosage or the employment of T.A.F. instead of F.T. or A.P.T.

similar doses at intervals of two to three weeks or he may be given two doses each of 1 c.c. of T.A.F. If the person is not unduly sensitive, the same procedure as advocated for younger children should be followed. In this country and in the United States of America the present practice is to use two doses of 0·2 c.c. and 0·5 c.c. respectively of A.P.T. particularly for young people, though the first dose need not exceed 0·1 c.c., while for adults, three doses of 1 c.c., 1 c.c. and 1·5 c.c. of T.A.F. are commonly employed.

In the ordinary routine of immunisation of children probably A.P.T. will be the prophylactic preferred.

In France and Canada F.T. is used almost exclusively, and where protection is urgently required and the necessary tests can be carried out, F.T. is the prophylactic of choice; where, on the other hand, no preliminary testing can be done, where the demands on the Medical Officer's time must be reduced to a minimum and reactions must be avoided even at the cost of somewhat lower immunity less quickly attained, T.A.M. or T.A.F. should be chosen. For nurses and busy adults, T.A.F. should be employed as being less likely to produce local reactions.

3. In all cases the Schick test should be done not less than two months after the last injection. It will usually be found that a few of those who have been given the ordinary course, the number varying from 1 to 10 or 15 per cent., are still susceptible. Such cases should be subjected to a second similar course and again tested not less than four weeks later.

4. The testing and immunising preparations are not supplied by the Ministry of Health but can be obtained through ordinary commercial channels. At the present date manufacturing licences in respect of them are held by the Wellcome Foundation Ltd., the Director of the Inoculation Department of St. Mary's Hospital (Agents: Messrs. Parke, Davis & Co.) and the Director of the Lister Institute of Preventive Medicine (Agents: Messrs. Allen and Hanbury), The British Drug Houses Ltd. and Messrs. Evans, Sons, Lescher and Webb Ltd.: import licences are held by Messrs. Parke, Davis & Co., Sharp and Dohme, Ltd., and Eli Lilly & Co., Ltd., and, for prophylactic preparations only, Chas. F. MEASURES FOR DEALING WITH LOUSINESS AND ITCH.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to transmit, for the information of the Local Authority, the enclosed copy of a memorandum on the Louse (Memo. 230/Med.) and a memorandum on Scabies (Memo. 229/Med.) which revise the information brought to the notice of Local Authorities by Circular $\frac{\text{P.H.3}}{1919}$ on February 27th, 1919.

2. The memoranda briefly summarise the principal facts regarding pediculosis and scabies, and contain advice which will aid Local Authorities in making provision for preventing and curing these conditions and for securing the treatment and disinfestation of the members of households among whom pediculosis or scabies has been found to exist. It is particularly important that during the war Sanitary Authorities should actively pursue both the above lines of preventive action.

MEMORANDUM 229/Med.

MEMORANDUM ON SCABIES AND HOW TO DEAL WITH IT.

Scabies or "The Itch" is a superficial inflammation of the skin caused by infestation with the itch mite (Sarcoptes scabiei, var. hominis). It is marked by great irritation and is frequently accompanied by secondary infections.

LIFE HISTORY AND HABITS.

"Itch-mites" are minute acarine parasites in which the female, considerably larger than the male, reaches a length of 330 to 450 μ, i.e. about 1/70th of an inch and just visible to the naked eye. She burrows in the horny layer of the skin, laying eggs at intervals as she advances, and unless the gallery is broken open she remains in the same burrow throughout her adult life which may last as long as five weeks. During this time she lays up to 50 eggs and the effect of her activities on the host is to cause an intense irritation of the skin.

The eggs hatch in about seventy-two to seventy-eight hours after being laid and six-legged larvæ emerge. These either bore more deeply in the floor of the parent gallery or migrate to a fresh site where they burrow into the hair follicles, giving rise to urticarial papules. The larval stage last two to three days and when it moults there emerges an eight-legged nymph. In the female there are two nymphal stages, lasting about two and three days respectively, and during the second period mating occurs. The adult female emerges from the second nymph and restarts the life-cycle which thus lasts about a fortnight.

The females usually select certain well defined body regions for burrowing and oviposition. The female mite may be removed from the end of her burrow with a dissecting needle under a lens of about 3 × magnification, and examined on a slide in a mixture of glycerine and water. A convenient method is to use a watch-maker's glass so as to leave both hands free. A 100 × magnification is ample for identification.

SYMPTOMS.*

The eruption of scabies is of two kinds—the acarine burrows and the follicular papular eruption. The burrows occupy the following sites: The genitals, the fronts of the wrists, the webs and sides of the fingers, the ulnar border of the hand, the backs of the elbows, the anterior axillary folds, the nipples in women, the umbilicus, the sides of the gluteal cleft and lower part of buttocks, the front of the knees, the ankles and the dorsum of the feet. In infants the palms and soles are also frequently affected. They are seen most clearly on the hands, where they usually form thin, sinuous lines, from a millimetre up to a centimetre in length and occasionally even longer. The burrow is generally easily seen, as dirt accumulates in it, but quite often it can only be recognised by a lens. The oldest part of the burrow has a splay mouth, while at the other end the small white body of the acarus, with a black spot in its fore part, can be easily seen with a lens and often with the naked eye. Frequently a clear vesicle or vesicles are seen beneath the burrow, but as a rule on the hands no redness is present unless secondary infection has occurred. When blisters are present, secondary infection is frequent, and pustular, weeping and crusted areas are produced. In other sites vesicles are not common, but a large pea-sized papule usually underlies the burrow, and the burrow itself and its acarus are not so easily seen; these lesions are frequently seen on the penis, scrotum and anterior axillary folds, and are usually diagnostic.

The follicular papular eruption is arranged in smaller or larger circles round the areas where the burrows occur. The main distribution is on the anterior aspect of the body, from the nipples to the knees, and in a semi-circle around the anterior axillary fold. The back is free, except in severe cases, down to the top of the gluteal cleft, but scratch lesions occur on the lower part of the buttocks, where ecthyma is often a complication, and on the back and inner parts of the thighs. On the limbs the eruption occupies both front and back of the forearms, up to about the centre of the arm, and also occurs around the ankles. The lesions are first pinkish or whitish elevations of scattered hair follicles, but soon they become covered with blood-stained crusts from scratching. Linear scratch marks are rare in scabies.

In old-standing cases almost the whole body may be affected, though the face and scalp are practically never attacked in adults; but in small children even these areas may suffer.

COMPLICATIONS.

A high percentage of cases of scabies are complicated either by impetigo contagiosa or eczema. In impetigo the primary lesion is small vesicles or blisters, which rupture and become covered with crusts. In scabies these are particularly common about the hands, and spread chiefly to the exposed parts such as the face, neck, and knees in children. Eczema is generally the result of scratching and occurs mainly on the limbs and trunk, particularly in the flexures. It is characterised by the presence of red, moist, weeping or crusted areas.

In cases which have been treated with sulphur, dermatitis may arise from the use of this drug. The lesions produced are dry, red scaly areas chiefly affecting the flexures of the limbs and the trunk. The eruption is associated with itching.

DIFFERENTIAL DIAGNOSIS.

Scabies has to be differentiated from the lesions of pediculosis and, in children, from papular urticaria.

Pediculosis capitis which occurs chiefly in children is mainly characterised by itching of the scalp, with the development of impetigo lesions in this region, and these may spread down the neck on to the upper part of the trunk.

In pediculosis corporis the difficulties of diagnosis are greater. The condition is most liable to occur in people who wear their underclothing continuously night and day of several days on end. For this reason it becomes a serious problem in the case of Armies on active service. The distribution of the rash and the character of the lesions is different from that of scabies. The initial lesions are tiny red papules about the size of a pin's head, covered by a small blood-stained crust, but these are mixed up with linear scratches and excoriations. The areas affected are those in which the clothes come into closest contact with the body such as the shoulders, round the waist, hips and buttocks, and in the case of the soldier the area from the knees to the ankle, if puttees are worn. In the more severe cases the scratch eruption is complicated by boils and linear ulcers, caused by severe scratching. These are particularly well seen on the legs, thighs and buttocks.

Pediculosis pubis is not likely to be confused with scabies, as the itching and scratching is limited to the hairy parts affected, mostly the pubic area sometimes extending up the body into the armpits. The presence of small purplish stains in these areas also assists in the diagnosis.

In children, papular urticaria is sometimes confused with scabies. The eruption is confined mostly to the lower limbs, buttocks and forearms, though other parts may be affected. It consists of a more or less symmetrical eruption of urticarial papules, from a pin's head to a lentil in size, which become covered in blood-stained crusts as a result of scratching. It particularly tends to occur in hot weather, and is often recurrent.

METHODS OF SPREAD AND PREVENTION.

Infection by contact is the most usual method of acquiring scabies. The disease often has a venereal origin. Infested clothing will remain infective for at least eleven days.

When dealing with larger collections of people living together in the restricted circumstances one finds in war time, prevention of scabies is best attained by unceasing vigilance and emphasis on the importance of early diagnosis. In the last war it was often found that soldiers with scabies did not report sick for what they considered a trivial ailment, and it was not until complications arose that the Medical Officer saw the case. In the Army the practice is to have regular weekly medical inspections, regular weekly baths and changes of underclothes wherever possible, and disinfestation of clothing and blankets by dry heat or steam.

The early stages of scabies may exist for some time without giving rise to much complaint, which means that the close associates of the patient are frequently infected before the disease is recognised. When the patient is a school child it is probable that other members of the family are infested and health authorities will find it useful to arrange for the whole family to be treated for scabies simultaneously under proper supervision, and to have their belongings disinfested at the same time. In such cases it is also necessary to deal with the bedding and clothing in the home.

TREATMENT.

Scabies does not yield to palliative or half measures and the use of these should never be considered.

On diagnosis the case should be isolated, and the treatment carried out under supervision to ensure that it is not scamped. The patient should be immersed up to the neck, for ten to fifteen minutes, in a hot bath. The whole body is then rubbed with soft soap, the hands, feet and elbows scrubbed with a nail brush and the rest of the body well rubbed with a rough flannel. The purpose is to open up the burrows so that the subsequent treatment may reach the parasites. After drying, the patient can sit in front of the fire and apply sulphur ointment, 2/3 B.P. strength, particular attention being paid to the backs of the hands and webs of the fingers as these are often neglected by the patient. It is important that an adequate supply of ointment be provided but for an average adult 2 ozs. should suffice for a single complete application. The application requires about 20 minutes to complete. Alternatively, liquor calcis sulphuratæ should be applied with a piece of lint to the whole body except the head and neck (2 ozs. for a child and 3 ozs. to 5 ozs. for an adult). The liquid should be allowed to dry on the skin. The resulting yellow staining is temporary. Some authorities use a mixture of equal parts liq. calc. sulph. and linseed oil as being less irritating. After either treatment the patient should dress in clean clothes, or in his original clothes if they have been disinfested in the meantime, but it should be remembered that sulphur ointment soils clothing.

Three treatments with sulphur ointment or two with liquor calcis sulphuratæ, if thoroughly applied, on successive days usually clear up the condition. The baths should not be repeated every day but a hot bath must be taken on the day following the last application. Before the patient can be passed as no longer contagious careful search must be made with a lens for mites and for unopened burrows. If any are found the treatment must be repeated, remembering, however, the danger of setting up of sulphur dermatitis. If subjected to over treatment the patient's last state will be worse than his first. The patient should be warned that the itching may persist for a day or two following the complete suppression of the parasite. Should the itching return after an interval of a few days during which the patient has had complete relief it will be due in the majority of cases to a recrudescence. The occurrence of small clear vesicles on the hands often persisting for a week or two is usually the result of sulphur, especially in children. If these are the only symptoms, further sulphur therapy should be avoided unless burrows are seen.

It may be advisable to prescribe some bland application for a day or two. In cases specially sensitive to sulphur, or in which sulphur has failed, or in which it is desirable to hide the exact nature of the disease from the patient, beta-naphthol ointment (5–10 per cent.) may be used. This preparation is also specially useful in children in whom pustulation is usually severe, for the beta-naphthol is soothing to eczematous complications instead of irritating them as is the case with sulphur.

Another application which has been found effective is 25 per cent. balsam of Peru in glycerine.

A rapid method of treatment which is used by one local authority for cleansing children employs ung. pot. polysulphidi B.P.C. often known as Marcussen's or "Danish ointment." After the usual preliminary bath the patient is dried and the ointment is rubbed lightly all over the body except over open sores. The patient stands near a fire for about ten minutes and a lint dressing or vest is applied to the body with dressings or white stockings on the limbs. The patient is instructed to go home to bed, not to remove the dressings and to attend the bathing centre in twenty-four hours' time bringing a clean shirt. On re-attending he is given a plain soap and water bath. Clothing and bedding are disinfected.

Another method adopted for treating children employs a mixture of equal parts soft soap, benzyl benzoate and rectified spirit. The child is scrubbed with soft soap in a hot bath and then soaked for a further ten minutes. The whole body is brushed with the solution, and the child is allowed to dry partially in a warm room. He is then brushed all over again with the solution. He attends for a bath the following day. This method is cleaner than sulphur or Marcussen's ointments and the duration of treatment is shorter. Canadian experience has shown that time lost from school averaged three days when this treatment was used, while with the sulphur ointment and Marcussen's ointment treatments the average time lost was three weeks and ten days respectively.

Impetigo and septic sores are a common accompaniment of scabies and may require treatment. The crusts can be removed by boracic fomentations, and dressings of 1 in 1,000 acriflavine lotion of past. hydrarg. oxid. flav. applied.

MEMORANDUM 230/MED.

MEMORANDUM ON THE LOUSE AND HOW TO DEAL WITH IT.

Three kinds of lice infest man: the body louse (Pediculus humanus corporis) the head louse (Pediculus humanus humanus, often known as capitis) and the crab louse (Phthirus pubis).

Body lice and head lice are natural vectors of typhus fever, trench fever and relapsing fever. These diseases are transmitted either by the bite of the insect or by crushed infected lice or their excretions being rubbed or scratched into the skin. The crab louse has not been incriminated as the carrier of any specific disease, although febrile symptoms may result from infestation.

The irritation produced by louse bites causes the victim to scratch the affected areas vigorously producing excoriations of the skin. Skin organisms commonly gain entry to the lesions and may give rise to "louse rash," impetigo, furunculosis, eczematous inflammation and adenitis.

I.—THE LIFE HISTORY AND HABITS OF THE LOUSE.

Lice live on or close to the body of their human host, piercing the skin to suck blood and laying eggs—nits—on the head or body hair, or on the fibres of the clothing.

Body Lice.—The average life span of the body louse from the egg to the death of the adult does not exceed two months. The females begin to lay their eggs within a day or two of reaching maturity, and lay between 200 and 300 at the rate of about ten a day The eggs hatch in seven or eight days, the growth of the larvæ through three stages to maturity occupies sixteen to seventeen days under optimum conditions, and the adult life lasts from three to five weeks

The eggs or nits are laid on the underclothing and in the seams of the outer clothing, and are also found on the body hairs of their hosts. The nits are cemented to the fibres of clothing or to the hairs by a chitinous cement which, like the egg-shell, is resistant to chemical reagents. The period of hatching depends on the temperature and is shortest at about 32°–35° C., but at low temperatures may be delayed for as long as thirty-five days.

Lice begin to suck blood immediately they are hatched and discharge their fæces while they feed. They bite freely at all times but most frequently when their host is at rest—especially at night. The bites are usually followed by severe and prolonged itching which, with that due to the lice crawling over the body, causes great distress and loss of sleep.

Lice multiply rapidly in favourable conditions such as are furnished by persons who do not wash themselves or remove their clothes, and especially by those who from tolerance or weakness do not attempt to rid themselves of parasites.

Lice thrive best at temperatures within a few degrees of 30° C. (86° F.), such as ordinarily exist between the body and clothing of their human host. An increase in warmth, as when a number of persons are sleeping closely packed together, renders lice very active, and they may then wander from one person to another.

Lice quickly desert dead bodies, clothing when no longer worn, and persons suffering from high fever. Should lice not obtain human blood, they soon become inactive and die of starvation in about a fortnight or less.

Under adverse conditions lice are sometimes rendered immobile but are not killed and may recover if placed under favourable conditions. They live longer at low than at high temperatures. Lice when dead shrivel, become brittle and the colour changes. If killed with dry heat they turn a brownish black colour, if with steam dull white, while insecticides may colour them a dull reddish brown.

Head lice resemble body lice in general appearance, but the females are more slender, more active and less fecund. It seems probable that body lice and head lice are varieties of the same species and experimental evidence shows that head lice can adapt themselves to the conditions of body lice and by crossing the two varieties, hybrid forms have been produced which have developed through several generations.

The eggs are laid near the roots of the hairs on the head, chiefly of the occiput. The eggs, like those of the body louse, are minute oval bodies, at first opalescent but becoming yellowish as the larvæ develop. The empty egg shells which are collapsed, pale brown and have lost their lids may adhere to the head or clothing for some time. Eggs are not laid nor do they hatch below a temperature of 22° C. (71·6° F.) although they retain vitality for several weeks at a much lower temperature and will even hatch after having been frozen.

Crab lice are found less commonly and infestation is usually confined to the pubic and peri-anal region, but may extend to any hairy part of the body where the hairs are not straight, even to the beard and eye-brows. The adult stage of this species is smaller than that of Pediculus and much less active in its habits, remaining attached to the hairs by its strong front claws and feeding for a long time in the same spot. The bites leave a characteristic bluish-black macula. The females are less fecund than those of Pediculus. When the active lice are removed from man they quickly die.

II.—METHODS OF SPREAD.

Lousiness is usually the result of close contact with verminous persons or their clothing. Lice crawl actively and move easily on hairs and on rough materials, but cannot cling to smooth surfaces. Their wanderings rarely exceed a few feet and infestation is especially likely to occur when people are sleeping closely packed together.

Children and old people are more likely to be severely infested with lice than others, probably because they are less able to protect themselves. Head lice are found more frequently upon females and body lice upon males. In Britain infestation with body lice is more prevalent in winter than in summer, owing probably to less frequent washing of the person and clothing in cold weather. When, however, as in conditions of warfare, maintenance of cleanliness of the person and clothing is impossible, males and females of all ages are liable to be infested with lice at all seasons of the year.

PUBLIC HEALTH

Some people, as a result of personal peculiarity or of long habit, appear to be almost insensitive to louse bites. These persons may harbour an abundance of parasites, and readily infect those with whom they come in contact. Other common opportunities for the direct spread of lice are afforded by the association of children with verminous schoolfellows, especially during play; by attendance upon verminous patients; and by handling verminous articles. Lice may readily be picked up from infested blankets, clothing, caps, brushes, etc. The lice are chiefly found attached to the inner side of underclothing, vests, shirts, drawers and also in jackets and trousers, especially in seams, inside the linings, and in the fork of trousers. Shirts are favourite places for both lice and nits, especially the seams of the armpits.

Both the nits and active stages of the crab louse cling tenaciously to the hairs of the body and may be spread when these hairs are shed as the result of scratching. The curled hairs are easily picked up on clothing and infestation is spread in this way in sleeping quarters, or probably even more by closet seats, unless the latter are scrubbed daily and kept scrupulously clean.

III.—METHODS OF PROTECTION.

General.

Cleanliness, both of the person and of the clothing, affords the surest safeguard against lousiness, and under normal conditions the habits of cleanliness commonly observed in this country afford sufficient protection against accidental infestation with lice or against their multiplication should this occur.

Wearing the hair short is a great protection against head lice, and the hair of the scalp should be cut as short as possible at the occiput and sides as these are the sites most favoured by lice. Women especially exposed to risk of infestation should plait their hair and wear it close to the head. Some protection against lice is afforded by wearing overalls of smooth materials, such as oilskin, while silk or cotton undergarments are less liable to be infested than wool or flannelette.

When associating with verminous persons it is a useful protection to wear overalls, and to enclose the head in a close-fitting cap of smooth material, such as a bathing cap. Overalls, such as are worn by surgeons and nurses, afford considerable protecton against lice; but when there is danger of contracting some louse-borne disease it is advisable to wear overalls of smooth material consisting of a single garment with the openings tightly fastened. Rubber gloves, overlapping the sleeves, and wellington boots complete the outfit. Spraying such garments with carbolic acid solution, creosote, or light wood oil affords additional protection. This is important for those having to deal with typhus-infected quarters and clothing, or who have to bathe patients suffering from louse-borne diseases on their admission to hospital.

Repellents.

Numerous substances have been used to repel lice, but experience and experiments have shown that few of them are effective under conditions permitting their application to the body or to the clothing when worn. Their use has the disadvantage of creating a false sense of security, with the consequent danger of relaxation of those efforts to maintain cleanliness which afford the best protection against lousiness.

Repellents, therefore, should only be used under conditions involving both exposure to considerable risk of infestation and great difficulty in the maintenance of personal cleanliness. With proper care their use should be rarely necessary in this country. Of the many substances which have been used in this way, experience gained during the last war has shown crude unwhizzed naphthaline to be the most useful. It is best applied in the form of a paste consisting of crude unwhizzed naphthaline, 90 per cent. and potash soap, 10 per cent.

In preparing the paste the naphthaline should be powdered and passed through a fine sieve to remove foreign particles. It is then mixed with the soft soap and the mixture melted and thoroughly stirred until cold. The paste is rubbed into the seams of clothing, and at the fork of the trousers it should be placed under the fold of the cloth so as to prevent direct contact with the skin. Since naphthaline evaporates it requires renewal at least every week. The paste gradually loses its efficacy on exposure to the air, and should therefore be kept in small air-tight receptacles Crude unwhizzed naphthaline powder is cheaper and as effective as N.C.I. powder (naphthaline 96 per cent., creosote 2 per cent., iodoform 2 per cent.) and may be dusted on the outside of the shirt, or vest, renewing the application twice weekly. On account of the smell N.C.I. powder may not be suitable for general use.

IV.—How to deal with Pediculosis.

The treatment of pediculosis resolves itself into cleansing the infested person, so as to remove all lice and nits, and thorough disinfestation of the clothing, blankets, etc.

For body lice apply an emulsion of three parts of paraffin in seven parts of olive oil, smearing on thickly and rubbing in well, especially on the hairy parts. Alternatively a mixture of cresol 1½ ounces, soft soap 1½ pounds, water 10 gallons, may be used. The application should be followed by a hot bath and clean clothing.

In severe infestation remove all body hair, with number 0 or number 1 clippers, and shave with a razor. After removal, lice, nits and hair should be burned or put into boiling water or strong disinfectant.

For head lice affecting men and boys, wet the hair thoroughly with a mixture of equal parts of paraffin and olive oil and tie up in a handkerchief for about twelve hours. Then wash thoroughly with soap and warm water. The nits are removed by a fine-toothed steel comb and it is essential that an efficient comb be used. If necessary repeat the treatment in a few days. In the case of women and girls shingling or bobbing the hair greatly facilitates treatment.

For school children the adoption of the fine-toothed steel comb method has greatly simplified the treatment of head infestation, and in this country it is hardly ever necessary for the cleansing authority to cut a child's hair, which should only be carried out in cases of severe infestation after every other method has been fully considered and found wanting.

> Comb the hair with an ordinary steel dressing comb; apply olive oil with a piece of wool or lint, especially where nits are thickest. Shampoo the hair with a mixture consisting of a tablespoonful of solution of formaldehyde with soap (B.P.C.) in a pint of hot water (soft soap 8 ozs., alcohol (90 per cent.) 6 fl. ozs., solution of formaldehyde 4 fl. ozs., distilled water to 20 fl. ozs. Alcohol (90 per cent.) may be replaced by Industrial Methylated Spirit diluted so as to be of equivalent alcoholic strength). Leave the hair stiff with white suds, then twist the hair in a towel for twenty minutes and rinse in plain water. While the hair is still dripping wet, comb with a fine steel comb, a few strands of hair only should be combed at a time and the comb should be cleansed with a piece of wool after passing through each strand of hair. Under domestic conditions, when formaldehyde soap solution may not be readily available, green soft soap or ordinary brown soap may be used, although it cannot be regarded as so efficient.

Another satisfactory method used by a Local Education Authority is the application of "Tar Oil Compound" followed by washing with soft soap and borax. Tar oil compound consists of cotton-seed oil 20 per cent., tar oil 5 per cent., paraffin oil 74 per cent., and oil of lemon grass 1 per cent. This is rubbed on the scalp and left for a few minutes when a fine-toothed comb is used. The hair is then washed with the soap borax mixture composed of soft soap (2 lbs.), borax (4 ozs.) and water to 1 gallon. After five or six minutes the hair is rinsed sufficiently to allow the use of a fine-toothed metal comb, and this is followed by thorough rinsing.

For crab lice shave the pubic, peri-anal and other hair that shows nits, as in the absence of hair crab lice cannot exist on man. The peri-anal hair is commonly not removed and this is one of the main causes why the old-fashioned mercurial treatment was kept up for a week. In any case, shaving greatly facilitates treatment with insecticides if these are used. Blue ointment should not be applied. Calomel pomade (Hg Cl, one part; vaseline, twenty parts) may be applied where scratches are present. Where shaving is not practised crab lice may be effectively removed by the application to the affected parts of cedarwood or clove oil. This treatment must be carried out with care, for in quantity these oils are irritant. A few minims on a small pledget of cotton wool smeared into the roots of the hair is sufficient, followed by a second application in thirty-six or forty-eight hours to make sure that no nits have escaped. Drawers should be worn during the treatment and the second application followed by a hot bath. When crab lice and their nits occur on the eyebrows inunct the parts with balsam of Peru and pick off with fine forceps.

To allay the irritation due to louse bites, calamine lotion (40 grains in 1 ounce of water) may be used.

For the disinfectation of clothing and bedding, etc., the best way to kill nits and the active stages of lice is by exposure to dry or moist heat in disinfestation chambers.

In general, lice and their nits are killed by an exposure of one minute to a dry heat of 65°–70° C., and of ten minutes to 55°–60° C. They are also killed in five to ten seconds by water at 80° C., and in ten minutes by water at 55° C. Such temperatures do not injure clothing. Nits exposed to a current of steam (100° C.) are killed instantly, but in the numerous contrivances for disinfestation of clothing by steam it is necessary to allow about fifteen minutes to permit the steam penetrating the folds of the clothing. When circulating dry hot air is used even longer time must be allowed and satisfactory circulation of the hot air ensured, while the temperature must be high enough to be effective, but not so great as to injure the clothing. In actual practice the temperature of a hot air disinfestation chamber should register 88° C., and the garments should be exposed for thirty minutes.

Recently it has been found that Heavy Coal Tar Naphtha to B.S.I Standard Specification No. 479 kills lice immediately on contact. It is readily available at a reasonable price. Clothes can, therefore, be treated by this method. If the clothes have to be worn immediately after treatment, naphtha should only be applied or sprayed on outer clothing. Experiments have shown that lice are killed by exposure to the vapour for one hour. It is probable, though this is not yet proven, that if naphtha is applied to the outer clothing lice will either be killed or leave the person whose clothes have been so treated. Eggs are killed by contact and may be killed by the vapour, but further experiments are necessary on the latter point. As heavy naphtha is inflammable, naked lights and smoking must be prohibited when it is being handled.

Although one hour's exposure to the vapour is necessary to kill mature and immature lice, a much shorter exposure will stupefy them and they can then be readily brushed out of clothing. Naphtha has a somewhat pungent smell, which will persist for a time. The use of Heavy Coal Tar Naphtha is an alternative method when heat or steam are not readily available.

It is worth remembering that lice can be got rid of by dry storage alone. If a temperature of 23° C. (73° F.) or over can be depended on, all the lice present on garments will be dead and the eggs either hatched or shrivelled up within ten to fourteen days. With the ordinary fluctuations of temperature and humidity occurring in this country, however, stored clothing should not be regarded as above suspicion until after four weeks, and it is essential that the clothing should be isolated during storage.

V.—DOMESTIC DISINFESTATION.

A convenient method for the domestic disinfestation of louse-infested articles is to immerse them in cold water and bring this momentarily to the boil. Woollen articles which might be injured by soaking in water may be disinfected by ironing or baking in an oven. The ironing should be done slowly with a hot iron, careful attention being given to the creases, pockets and the seams of clothing. After ironing, the garments should be thoroughly brushed. If baking is adopted, the articles should be wrapped in brown paper to protect them from being scorched. The parcel should be placed in a hot oven when the fire is going down and left there for half an hour.

Lice and their eggs are killed when immersed for five minutes in an emulsion of 2 per cent. cresol with 5 per cent. soap. It is a satisfactory method for disinfesting leather or other articles.

VI.—INSTITUTIONAL AND INDUSTRIAL ACTION.

As for individuals, so for groups of persons in institutions, schools, hostels, common lodging houses, workshops, factories, etc., the maintenance of cleanliness is the one essential measure in preventing lousiness. All possible facilities to this end should be provided.

In such places, also, special vigilance should be exercised with regard to unclean individuals, temporary exclusion or segregation being resorted to when necessary. Clothes-racks and cloak-rooms should be so arranged as to prevent contact between the belongings of different persons.

VII.—School Children.

Under the Education Acts, 1921–1937, the Local Education Authority for elementary education may arrange for the examination of children in any public elementary school.

Infestation of the hair with lice or nits is still too common a condition in children, even though such infestation is slight in most cases. To-day head lice would probably be found in children at least fifty times as commonly as body lice. Despite the improvement which has taken place in the last twenty-five years, in 1938 no less than 444,967 elementary school children were found by school nurses to be infested, but it may be noted that the finding of one nit is recorded as infestation. The distribution of infested children in areas is uneven. In almost every large urban area there are schools which show a heavy incidence.

The school nurse (or other authorised person) should inspect each child as soon as can be arranged after admission, and every public elementary school child should be inspected by a school nurse at least once a term, preferably at the beginning of the term. All children who have been found infested and have been cleansed should be re-examined at intervals of not more than a week. The home should be visited, and the mother instructed as to the cleansing of the child.

Pediculosis capitis, like pediculosis corporis, is a family disease, and the continued freedom of a cleansed child is dependent on the condition of other members of the family, and on the freedom of the child's bed and bedding from lice.

If the person or clothing of any child is found to be verminous, the Local Education Authority may give notice in writing to the parent requiring him to cleanse the child within twenty-four hours. The notice must be accompanied by instructions describing the manner in which cleansing may be best effected. In default a person provided with a written authority from the Medical Officer may remove the child from school and have the cleansing done in some suitable place, and in that case, if the parent allows the child to become verminous again, he is liable to a fine. Girls must be examined and cleansed either by a medical practitioner or by a specially authorised woman.

VIII.—Powers of, and Action by, Local Authorities.

It is important that every sanitary authority should be in a position to offer disinfestation of persons and articles.

Under the Public Health Act, 1936 (sections 83–86) (a) and the Public Health (London) Act, 1936 (sections 122–127), Local Authorities have power to deal with verminous premises, articles and persons and may provide such cleansing stations as may be necessary for the discharge of their functions.

When steam disinfectors are already available these may be employed for the disinfestation of verminous clothing and bedding. Under special circumstances resort may be had to steam disinfestation huts. The huts should have double walls to prevent loss of heat and be fitted with racks and hooks for the convenient disposition of the articles to be disinfested. Steam, preferably from an existing source, is forced into the hut where it is allowed to escape from small holes in steam pipes suitably arranged in the interior of the hut.

Where no special apparatus is available and when only small numbers of articles have to be disinfested the principle of the "Serbian Barrel" may be adopted. Briefly this consists of a barrel or other receptacle with a lid and a perforated bottom fitting tightly over a boiler. The articles to be disinfested are packed loosely in the barrel which is ready for use as soon as steam is issuing freely from beneath the lid. The clothing should be left for half an hour and then removed and shaken when it will readily dry. If necessary, the boiler which is found in most wash-houses or sculleries may be used as the source of steam. On the top a barrel or metal dustbin, with perforations in the bottom, can be fitted to receive the articles to be disinfested.

Local Sanitary Authorities, if they possess or have the right to use premises for cleansing, must allow such premises to be used by the Education Authority.

Finally it must be remembered that, whatever method is employed for dealing with the louse, thoroughness is essential to success.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT (RETURNS) RULES, 1926, DATED 30TH JUNE 1926, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 58 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR PRESCRIBING THE FORM OF NOTICES REQUIRING RETURNS TO BE MADE BY OCCUPIERS, OWNERS AND LESSEES UNDER SECTIONS 40 TO 42 OF THE SAID ACT.

Whereas by sections 40 to 42 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, provision is made with respect to the service by rating authorities and assessment committees of notices requiring occupiers, owners and lessees of hereditaments to make returns containing such particulars as may be reasonably required for the purpose of carrying out the Act:

And whereas by section 58 of the said Act it is provided that the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe the form of any return or other document whatsoever which is required or authorised to be used under or for the purposes of the Act:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultation as is mentioned above, by virtue of the power conferred upon him by the said section 58 and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following rules:—

1. These rules may be cited as the "Rating and Valuation Act (Returns) Rules, 1926," and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

2. Subject to the provisions of the two next succeeding rules, every notice served by a rating authority under section 40 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a), upon the occupier, owner or lessee of any hereditament requiring him to make such a return as is mentioned in the said section shall be in the form shown in Part I. of the Schedule hereto, or in a form substantially to the like effect, and the particulars to be specified on the reverse side thereof shall include questions as to the matters mentioned in Part II. of the said Schedule.

3. A rating authority, if they think fit, may in the case of notices served upon the occupiers, owners or lessees of hereditaments of any particular class omit questions as to any of the matters mentioned in Part II. of the Schedule hereto which appear to them to be inappropriate to hereditaments of that class, and may in any case omit questions as to any of the said matters which appear to them to be inappropriate to a return to be made by an occupier or, as the case may be, by an owner or lessee, not being an occupier (b).

4. A rating authority may, if they think fit, in the case of notices served upon the owners or lessees of hereditaments, not being occupiers, serve one notice only in respect of two or more hereditaments of which the same person is the owner or lessee, and may in such case specify the hereditaments to which the notice relates in a schedule to be attached to the notice and framed in such manner, whether tabular or otherwise, as may appear to them most convenient for recording the required particulars.

THE CENTRAL VALUATION COMMITTEE (CONSTITUTION) SCHEME, 1926, DATED 3RD AUGUST, 1926, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 57 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR THE CONSTITUTION OF A CENTRAL VALUATION COMMITTEE.

Whereas by section 57 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, it is provided that, for the purpose of promoting uniformity of valuation, a Central Valuation Committee consisting of such persons as are mentioned in the said section shall be constituted in accordance with a scheme to be made by the Minister of Health after consultation with local authorities and associations of local authorities and any organisation representing assessment committees appointed under the Union Assessment Acts, 1862 to 1880:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultations as are above referred to, in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 57 and of every other power enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following scheme—

1.—(1) This scheme may be cited as the Central Valuation Committee (Constitution) Scheme, 1926, and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

(2) In this scheme, unless the context otherwise requires—

"the Committee" means the Central Valuation Committee constituted by this scheme;

"constituent association" means an association mentioned in the next succeeding Article;

"the Minister" means the Minister of Health;

"the Act" means the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925.

2. There shall be constituted for the purposes specified in the next succeeding Article a central valuation committee for England and Wales consisting of thirty-two members, who shall be appointed (subject to the variations hereinafter contained with respect to certain original appointments) in accordance with the following provisions—

(i) Twenty-four persons, each of whom shall be a member of a rating authority, an assessment committee or a county valuation committee (or of two or more of such bodies) shall be appointed by the associations, and in the proportions hereinunder mentioned, that is to say—

by the County Councils Association—

seven persons, being members of county valuation committees, of whom two at least shall be members also of rating authorities;

by the Association of Municipal Corporations—eight persons, of whom four at least shall be members of rating authorities, and four at least shall be members of assessment committees;

by the Urban District Councils Association—

two persons, of whom one at least shall be a member of a rating authority and one at least shall be a member of an assessment committee;

by the Rural District Councils Association—

two persons, of whom one at least shall be a member of a rating authority, and one at least shall be a member of an assessment committee; and by the Association of Poor Law Unions in England and Wales—

five persons, being members of assessment committees.

(ii) Eight persons shall be appointed by the Minister of Health, and of such persons three at least shall be officers of rating authorities or assessment committees.

(iii) A person who at the date of his appointment as a member of the committee was duly qualified for appointment shall not become disqualified for acting by reason of the fact that he ceases to be a member of a rating authority, assessment committee or county valuation committee.

3. The purpose for which the committee is constituted is the promotion of uniformity in the principles and practice of valuation throughout England and Wales; and in the furtherance of such purpose it shall be the duty of the committee to take all such steps as may appear to them to be useful or expedient, and in particular—

(a) to consider the operation of the Act and questions connected with the powers and duties imposed by it upon rating authorities, assessment committees, and county valuation committees;

(b) to call for such information as they may deem to be material from rating authorities, assessment committees and county valuation committees;

(c) to consult persons having experience in the law and practice of valuation for the purpose of ascertaining the points (if any) with respect to which the practice is not uniform or leads to inequalities in the system of valuation or with respect to which amendments of the law may appear to be desirable;

(d) to convene, or arrange with a county valuation committee (or with two or more such committees) for the convening of, conferences, either central or regional, for the discussion of questions relating to the valuation of hereditaments in general, or hereditaments of particular classes, with a view more particularly to the formulation of principles for the assistance or guidance of rating authorities, assessment committees and county valuation committees;

(e) from time to time to give to the Minister information with respect to the matters aforesaid, to bring to his notice any conclusions arrived at or recommendations made by the committee, or at any such conference as aforesaid, and to make to him such representations as they may think fit; and

RATING AND VALUATION

4. The first members of the committee shall be appointed as soon as practicable after the making of this scheme; and, in the case of such first appointments, the provisions of Article 2 hereof with respect to the permanent constitution of the committee shall be subject to the following variations—

(a) in any case where a person to be appointed by a constituent association is required by the said Article to be a member of a county valuation committee or of an assessment committee, the association may, in lieu of themselves making an appointment in the first instance, nominate to the Minister a person who is not for the time being duly qualified for appointment by them, and the Minister may appoint such person to be a member of the committee;

(b) a member so appointed by the Minister shall as soon as he becomes duly qualified be deemed to be a member appointed by the association which nominated him: Provided that if he does not become qualified before the 31st day of December, 1926, he shall vacate his appointment.

5.—(1) The normal term of office of a member of the committee shall be five years; provided that one-half of the members shall retire on the 1st January, 1929, and in every fifth year thereafter, and the other half on the 1st January, 1931, and in every fifth year thereafter.

(2) The members to retire in the year 1929 shall be three members appointed by the County Councils Association, four members appointed by the Association of Municipal Corporations, one member appointed by the Urban District Councils Association, one member appointed by the Rural District Councils Association, three members appointed by the Association of Poor Law Unions in England and Wales and four members appointed by the Minister; and each of the constituent associations and the Minister shall determine which of the members appointed by them or by him shall retire on that date.

(3) Any vacancy occurring amongst the members appointed by a constituent association or by the Minister in consequence of death, resignation, expiration of term of office or otherwise shall be filled as soon as possible after its occurrence by the association, or by the Minister as the case may be.

(4) A person appointed to fill a casual vacancy shall not hold office beyond the date on which the member in whose place he is appointed would in the ordinary course have retired.

6.—(1) The committee shall from time to time appoint one of their number to be chairman at all meetings at which he is present, and may from time to time appoint also a vice-chairman.

At any meeting of the committee the chairman or acting chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(2) The quorum, proceedings and (subject as hereinafter mentioned) place of meeting of the committee shall be such as the committee determine, and the committee may transact any business entrusted to it notwithstanding any vacancy among its members or any defect in the appointment or qualification of any member.

(3) The first meeting of the committee shall be held on such date and at such place as may be fixed by the Minister.

7. The committee may make such arrangements for secretarial and other assistance as they may deem necessary; and, if and whenever suitable premises for the transaction of the business of the committee, or the holding of conferences, are not available free of charge, the committee may make such arrangements for the provision of suitable premises as appear to them to be expedient.

8.—(1) For the purpose of meeting any expenses incurred or to be incurred by them in the exercise of their powers or the performance of their duties under this scheme (including the repayment to members of reasonable expenses incurred by them in attending meetings of, and conferences called by or on behalf of, the committee), the committee may invite any rating authority, county valuation committee or assessment committee to make contributions towards such expenses in accordance with a scale to be fixed from time to time by the committee with the approval of the Minister; and it shall be lawful for any such authority or committee, without any further sanction than is herein contained, to make contributions in accordance with such scale.

(2) The committee shall include in their annual report to the Minister a statement of their receipts and payments for the year ending on the 31st day of March in that year.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT (COUNTY VALUATION COMMITTEES) ORDER, 1926, DATED 30TH NOVEMBER, 1926, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 67 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR REMOVING A DIFFICULTY ARISING IN CONNECTION WITH THE APPLICATION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS OF THAT ACT TO AREAS CONSISTING OF AN ADMINISTRATIVE COUNTY AND A COUNTY BOROUGH OR COUNTY BOROUGHS.

Whereas for the purpose of promoting uniformity in the principles and practice of valuation and assisting rating authorities and assessment committees in the performance of their functions under the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, it is provided by section 18 (1) of that Act (a) that there shall be established in every county a committee of the county council (to be called the county valuation committee);

And whereas by section 16 (3) of the said Act (a) it is provided that any two or more councils, whether councils of counties or county boroughs, may make and submit to the Minister of Health a joint scheme for the constitution of assessment areas;

And whereas in certain cases the councils of counties and county boroughs have submitted joint schemes; and in such circumstances a difficulty arises in connection with the representation of the councils of county boroughs on the county valuation committee;

And whereas by section 67 of the said Act (a) it is provided that if any difficulty arises in connection with the application of the Act to any exceptional area, or the preparation of the first valuation list for any area, or otherwise in bringing into operation any of the provisions of the Act, the Minister of Health may by order remove the difficulty, or constitute any assessment committee, or declare any assessment committee to be duly constituted, or make any appointment, or do any other thing, which appears to him necessary or expedient for securing the due preparation of the list, or for bringing the said provisions into operation, and any such order may modify the provisions of the Act so far as may appear to the Minister necessary or expedient for carrying the order into effect;

And whereas application has been made to the Minister of Health by certain councils to remove the difficulty above-mentioned by making such an order as is hereinafter contained:

Now therefore the Minister of Health, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 67, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby orders as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Act (County Valuation Committees) Order, 1926, and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

2. In any case where the councils of a county and of a county borough, or two or more county boroughs, have made and submitted to the Minister of Health a joint scheme for the constitution of assessment areas, and such scheme has been approved by the Minister, the county valuation committee for the county may include such number of persons to be appointed by the council of any county borough which is for the purposes of the Local Government Act, 1888, deemed to be situate in the county, as may be agreed between the councils of the county and of the county borough, and it shall not be necessary that a person so appointed shall be a member of the council of the county.

And whereas sub-section (1) of section 62 of the same Act (a) provides that after the day aforesaid overseers shall cease to be appointed, and that His Majesty may by Order in Council provide, subject to the provisions of the Act, for the transfer as from that day to rating authorities, or such other local authorities or persons as seems expedient, of the powers and duties of and any property vested in overseers, and that any such Order may contain such supplemental and consequential provisions as appear to His Majesty to be necessary or expedient to make in connection with the abolition of the office of overseer:

And whereas sub-section (3) of the said section 62 enacts that any reference in any Act or document to overseers in relation to any of their powers or duties shall be construed as references to the rating authority or to the other persons to whom those powers or duties are transferred by or in pursuance of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925:

Now, therefore, His Majesty, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

S. R. & O., 1927, No. 76.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925 (INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS) RULES, 1927, DATED 15TH FEBRUARY, 1927, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 58 (1) OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR PRESCRIBING THE FEES TO BE DEMANDED UNDER SECTION 60 (1) OF THAT ACT IN RESPECT OF THE INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS MORE THAN TEN YEARS OLD.

Whereas by sub-section (1) of s. 60 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, it is provided that any ratepayer (whether a ratepayer in the rating area to which the documents relate or in some other area) may at all reasonable times, on payment, in the case of a document which is more than ten years old, of such fee as may be prescribed, and, in any other case, without payment, inspect and take copies of and extracts from any rate book or other document in the said sub-section mentioned;

And whereas by sub-section (1) of section 58 of the said Act it is provided that the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe anything which by the said Act is required to be prescribed:

Now, therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultation as is mentioned above, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 58 hereby orders as follows:—

1. The fee herein-under mentioned may be demanded from any ratepayer who, under sub-section (1) of section 60 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a), claims to inspect to take copies of, or extracts from, any document referred to in the said sub-section which is more than ten years old, that is to say, a fee of two shillings and sixpence in respect of each such document which he requires to be produced.

2. Nothing in these rules shall be construed as precluding the authority or person having the custody of any document referred to in the said sub-section from supplying copies thereof or extracts therefrom at the request of any ratepayer upon such terms as to payment as may be agreed.

S. R. & O., 1927, No. 80.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT (TRANSFER OF OFFICERS) ORDER, 1927, DATED 18TH FEBRUARY, 1927, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 67 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR REMOVING DIFFICULTIES ARISING IN CONNECTION WITH THE TRANSFER OF CERTAIN OFFICERS TO ASSESSMENT COMMITTEES AND RATING AUTHORITIES.

Whereas by sub-sections (1) and (2) of section 48 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, provision is made with respect to the transfer of officers employed in the service of union assessment committees to assessment committees constituted under the said Act and with respect to the transfer of officers employed in the performance of duties of overseers to rating authorities;

And whereas it has been represented to the Minister of Health that in certain cases difficulty will arise in arranging for the employment of an officer by the authority in whose service he can most effectively be employed and that in order to remove any such difficulty and for securing the due preparation of valuation lists and otherwise for bringing into operation the provisions of the Act, it is expedient that provision should be made whereby certain officers may with their consent and the consent of the authorities concerned be transferred to one only of the authorities to whom they would by the operation of the recited sub-sections be transferred, or may be transferred to some authority other than the authority or authorities to whom they would be so transferred;

And whereas by s. 67 of the said Act it is provided that if any difficulty arises in connection with the preparation of the first valuation list for any area or otherwise in bringing into operation any of the provisions of the Act the Minister of Health may by order remove the difficulty, or do any other thing which appears to him necessary or expedient for securing the due preparation of the list or for bringing the said provisions into operation, and any such order may modify the provisions of the Act so far as may appear to the Minister necessary or expedient for bringing the order into effect:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 67 and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby orders as follows:—

1.—(1) This order may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Act (Transfer of Officers) Order, 1927, and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

(2) In this Order,—

"the Act" means the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925;

"the appointed day" means the 1st day of April, 1927; and

"authority" means a rating authority or an assessment committee.

2. In any case where the authority, or one of the authorities, to whom an officer would be or has been transferred by s. 48 of the Act (a) does not require the services of such officer, but another authority acting for or within the same or an adjoining assessment area (whether one of the authorities to whom he would be or has been so transferred or not) or the County Valuation Committee require his services, then, at any time before the expiration of three months from the appointed day, and whether the officer's appointment has been determined or not, the first mentioned authority and the authority or committee requiring the officer's services may with his consent in writing, but not otherwise, make and give effect to an agreement whereby the officer shall be deemed to be, or to have been, transferred to the authority or committee requiring his services and shall have as against that authority or committee so far as regards the office in respect of which he would have been or has been transferred to the first mentioned authority all the same rights under sections 48 to 51 of the Act as he would have had or has against the first mentioned authority except in so far as the agreement may modify such rights.

S. R. & O., 1927, No. 90.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT (REPEALS, ETC.) ORDER, 1927, DATED 19TH FEBRUARY, 1927, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 69 (4) OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR FIXING THE DATES UPON WHICH THE SAID SECTION 69 SHALL COME INTO OPERATION FOR DIFFERENT PURPOSES AND IN RELATION TO DIFFERENT AREAS.

Whereas by sub-sections (1), (2), and (3) of section 69 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (b), provision is made for the repeal of certain enactments therein referred to, with respect to the manner in which references in other Acts or documents to certain terms and expressions are to be construed, and with respect to the exercise of certain powers by assessment committees and rating authorities during the period between the appointed day and the date of the first new valuation as defined for the purposes of the said Act;

And whereas by sub-section (4) of the said section it is provided that the section shall come into operation on such date as may be fixed by the Minister of Health, and that the Minister may fix different dates for different purposes, and in relation to different areas:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, in pursuance of the powers given to him by the said section 69 (4) hereby orders as follows:—

"the Act" means the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925;

"Court" in the case of a court of quarter sessions for a county means the committee of the justices of the county constituted in accordance with the provisions of section 32 of the Act (a);

"Clerk" means clerk of the peace;

"party" does not include a person served with a copy of a notice of appeal who has not given notice in accordance with these Rules of his intention to appear as a respondent to the appeal;

"net annual value" means the net annual value of the hereditament to which an appeal relates as appearing in the valuation list, or, in any case where the net annual value of that hereditament does not appear in the valuation list, the rateable value as so appearing.

(2) The Interpretation Act, 1889, shall apply to the interpretation of these Rules as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3.—(1) Every person upon whom a copy of a notice of appeal is served in accordance with the provisions of the Fifth Schedule to the Act shall, if he intends to appear as respondent to the appeal, give notice in writing of his intention so to appear, stating whether he intends to appear separately or jointly with some other person and specifying an address at which documents directed to him may be served.

(2) Such notice shall be given to the clerk and to the appellant before the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the service of the copy of the notice of appeal, or within such extended time as may under these Rules be allowed, and a person omitting to give such notice shall not be heard in opposition to the appeal except upon such terms as the Court may think fit to impose.

(3) A county valuation committee, if they intend to appear as a respondent to an appeal, shall give the like notice of their intention so to appear, provided that in the case of such a committee, the period of fourteen days above mentioned shall be calculated from the date on which a copy of the notice of appeal is served upon the assessment committee.

4. For the purpose of enabling parties to an appeal to make applications with respect to the place and date of hearing, the clerk shall at the request of any party give to him in writing information as to the place at which, and the date on which, such appeal will, subject to any application for a different place or date to be fixed, be in the list of cases for hearing, and also such reasonable information as to the number and nature of the cases awaiting hearing and arrangements for future sittings of the court as he may be able to give.

5.—(1) An application to which this Rule relates shall be made to the clerk in accordance with the provisions of this Rule, and, subject to any general directions given to him by the Court, the clerk shall deal with the application in such manner as he thinks proper, regard being had to the convenience of the parties and the desirability of limiting so far as practicable the costs of appeals, and shall communicate his decision in writing to each party to the appeal.

(2) The application shall be made in writing and shall state briefly the grounds upon which it is made and the names and addresses of all parties to the appeal.

(3) If the application is made with the consent of all parties, it shall be accompanied by consents signed by the parties or their solicitors.

(4) If the application is made with the consent of all parties, then, before it is made, a copy thereof shall be served upon each party, and the application shall state that this requirement has been complied with.

(5) Except where the application is made with the consent of all parties the clerk shall not decide it until the expiration of six days from the receipt thereof, and before deciding it he shall consider any written objections which may have been received by him before the expiration of that period from any other party to the appeal, and, if so required by any party, shall give to all parties an opportunity of appearing before him.

(6) Where an application is made under this Rule, the clerk (whether he grants or refuses such application) shall without any request in that behalf extend the time limited by these Rules for doing any act if he considers that it is reasonable to do so having regard to the delay involved in making and determining the application.

(7) The decision of the clerk upon an application to which this Rule relates shall not be subject to appeal:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed as limiting the power of the Court upon the hearing of the appeal to grant a postponement or extension of time upon such conditions as to costs or otherwise as they may think fit.

(8) The applications to which this Rule relates are applications for—

(a) postponing the hearing of an appeal;

(b) fixing a date for the hearing of an appeal;

(c) fixing or altering the place of hearing; and

(d) extending the time limited by these Rules for giving notice of intention to appear as respondent or for lodging a statement of the party's case, when required by these Rules.

6. An application to the Court under these Rules shall be made in the form of a notice of motion which shall be served upon the clerk and upon each party to the appeal seven clear days at least before the date on which the motion is to be made.

RATING AND VALUATION

7. Where the terms of any Order or judgment for which application is made to the Court have been agreed upon by all parties, particulars of such terms, signed by the parties or their solicitors, shall be sent to the clerk, and at any subsequent sitting of the Court an Order or judgment may be made or entered in accordance with such terms in the absence of the parties unless the Court for any special reason require their attendance.

8. Where the net annual value of the hereditament to which an appeal relates exceeds £200, the following provisions shall have effect—

(a) Before the expiration of fourteen days from the date on which the appellant first receives notice of any person's intention to appear as respondent to the appeal, he shall state in writing his case and the facts to be proved and the points of law (if any) to be argued in support of the case, and shall serve two copies of such statement on the clerk and one copy on each person who has given notice of intention to appear as respondent.

(b) Before the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the service upon him of the appellant's case, each respondent shall state in writing his case and the facts to be proved and the points of law (if any) to be argued in support of the case (including any objection to the sufficiency of the notice of appeal or the service thereof) and shall serve two copies of such statement on the clerk and one copy on the appellant.

(c) Where the appeal is brought to a court of quarter sessions for a county, each party shall before the day fixed for the hearing supply six additional copies of his statement of case for the use of the Court.

(d) If in the opinion of the Court the case presented by any party upon the hearing of the appeal has not been indicated with reasonable particularity in his statement of case, the Court shall make such order in the matter with regard to adjournment, costs or otherwise as may appear to them to be just and equitable.

9. Upon the hearing of an appeal the appellant shall begin; and, if two or more respondents appear separately, they shall be heard in such order as the Court may determine.

10. Costs ordered by the Court, or directed by an arbitrator, to be paid by any party to an appeal shall be taxed by the clerk on such date as he may determine.

11. Upon a taxation of costs the amounts to be allowed as between party and party to counsel, solicitors, expert witnesses, valuers, and arbitrators in respect of the matters mentioned in Part I. of the Schedule hereto shall not exceed the amounts therein specified, unless the Court at the hearing otherwise order or the clerk for special reasons considers such amounts to be inadequate.

12.—(1) Any party dissatisfied with a taxation of costs by the clerk may, within five days, serve on the other party interested therein and on the clerk objections in writing specifying the items objected to and the grounds of his objections and asking for the taxation to be reviewed in respect of such items.

(2) Upon such application the clerk shall reconsider and review his taxation upon such objections (receiving, if he thinks fit, further evidence in respect thereof); and, if so required within five days by either party, he shall state in writing the reasons for his decision thereon and any special facts or circumstances in relation thereto.

(3) Any party dissatisfied with the decision of the clerk as to any item which may have been objected to as aforesaid may within ten days apply to the Court to review the taxation and the Court may thereupon make such Order as they think just, including the payment of the costs of the review of taxation; but the taxation of the clerk shall be final and conclusive as to all matters which shall not have been objected to in manner aforesaid.

(4) The clerk may in any particular case extend any period of time limited by this Rule.

13. The fees specified in Part II. of the Schedule hereto shall be payable in respect of the matters mentioned therein to the clerk.

14.—(1) In any case where the clerk is also an officer of any authority or committee which is a party to an appeal, the chairman of the Court or the recorder, as the case may be, shall appoint some independent person, being a barrister or a solicitor, to act in lieu of the clerk upon the hearing by the Court of such appeal and in all proceedings preliminary or incidental thereto other than applications made with the consent of all parties.

(2) A person appointed in accordance with the provisions of this Rule shall be entitled to receive out of the county fund or the general rate fund of the borough, as the case may be, a fee calculated according to the scale set out in Part III. of the Schedule hereto.

15. The provisions of section 59 of the Act shall apply to documents required or authorised to be served under these Rules.

RATING AND VALUATION

THE PLANT AND MACHINERY (VALUATION FOR RATING) ORDER, 1927, DATED 30TH MAY, 1927, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 24 (5) OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR CONFIRMING WITH MODIFICATIONS THE STATEMENT PREPARED BY THE COMMITTEE CONSTITUTED UNDER SECTION 24 (3) OF THAT ACT.

Whereas by sub-sections (1), (3), (4), and (5) of section 24 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, it is provided as follows:—

"(1) For the purpose of the making or revision of valuation lists under this Part of this Act, the following provisions shall have effect with respect to the valuation of any hereditament other than a hereditament the value of which is ascertained by reference to the accounts, receipts, or profits of the undertaking carried on therein:—

"(a) All such plant or machinery in or on the hereditament as belongs to any of the classes specified in the Third Schedule to this Act shall be deemed to be a part of the hereditament:

"(b) Subject as aforesaid, no account shall be taken of the value of any plant or machinery in or on the hereditament.

"(3) For the purpose of enabling all persons concerned to have precise information as to what machinery and plant falls within the classes specified in the said Third Schedule, there shall be constituted a committee consisting of five persons to be appointed by the Minister, and the said committee shall as soon as may be after the passing of this Act prepare a statement setting out in detail all the machinery and plant which appears to the committee to fall within any of the classes specified in the said Schedule.

"(4) The committee shall as soon as the said statement has been prepared transmit it to the Minister, who shall cause it to be published in such manner as he thinks fit.

"(5) The Minister, after considering the statement and any representations which may be made to him with respect thereto, may, if he thinks fit, make an order confirming it, with or without modifications, and, subject as hereinafter provided, the statement as confirmed by the order shall for all purposes have effect as if it were substituted for the Third Schedule to this Act.

"The order confirming the statement shall as soon as may be after it is made be laid before both Houses of Parliament, and if either House within the next subsequent twenty days on which that House has sat next after the order is laid before it presents an Address to His Majesty against the order, or any part thereof, the order, or that part of the order, shall thenceforth be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done thereunder and without prejudice to the making of a new order."

And whereas a committee, duly appointed by the Minister of Health in accordance with the provisions above recited, have prepared and transmitted to the Minister the Statement which they were required by those provisions to prepare and transmit to him;

And whereas the Minister has caused such statement to be published, and having considered it and all representations made to him with respect thereto, has decided to modify it in certain respects and to confirm it as so modified in the form set out in the Schedule to this Order:

Now therefore the Minister of Health by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 24 (5) hereby orders as follows:—

1.—(1) This Order may be cited as the Plant and Machinery (Valuation for Rating) Order, 1927, and shall come into operation on the date hereof.

(2) In this Order "the Statement" means the statement prepared by the committee appointed under sub-section (3) of section 24 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, and transmitted to the Minister of Health in accordance with sub-section (4) of that section (a).

2. The statement as modified and set out in the Schedule to this Order is hereby confirmed.

(b) in the second case mentioned, to duties in respect of which he was not transferred to any Rating Act Authority.

(3) For the purposes of the preceding paragraph an officer's remuneration shall be apportioned, when necessary, in accordance with the following principles:—

(i) If before the date of transfer he was performing for a board of guardians duties in respect of which he has been transferred to a Rating Act Authority and also other duties, and his remuneration (or any part thereof) was not specifically apportioned between his various duties, such unapportioned remuneration (or part) shall be fairly and equitably apportioned as between the duties in respect of which he was, and the duties in respect of which he was not, transferred.

(ii) In the case of an officer transferred from a board of guardians to two or more Rating Act Authorities—

(a) remuneration in respect of transferred duties which was chargeable to any parish in the Union shall be deemed to be attributable to the duties in respect of which he was transferred to the Rating Act Authority whose area comprises that parish; and

(b) remuneration in respect of transferred duties which was chargeable to the Union as a whole shall be apportioned amongst the Rating Act Authorities in proportion to the rateable values, on the date of transfer, of the portions of the Union comprised in the areas of those authorities respectively.

Contributions Returnable on Loss of Office.

(4) Where a transferred officer ceases to hold office in circumstances which make section 8 of the Act of 1896 operative, the amount payable to him by way of return of contributions (a) by a Rating Act Authority, or (b) by a board of guardians, shall comprise all contributions paid by him to that authority or board after the date of transfer, and all contributions made by him before the date of transfer so far as they were made in respect of remuneration properly attributable—

(a) in the case first mentioned, to duties in respect of which he was transferred to that Rating Act Authority; and

(b) in the second case mentioned, to duties in respect of which he was not transferred to any Rating Act Authority.

(5) For the purposes of the preceding paragraph an officer's remuneration shall be apportioned, when necessary, in accordance with the same principles as are made applicable by this Order to the calculation of a superannuation allowance.

(6) A transferred officer who on relinquishment of office becomes entitled to compensation under the Act of 1925, shall be deemed to lose his office in circumstances which make section 8 of the Act of 1896 operative.

Expenses.

(7) Any expenses incurred by a Rating Act Authority under the Act of 1896 in respect of a transferred officer shall be defrayed in the same manner as if they were expenses incurred under the Act of 1925, and the contributions under the Act of 1896 of any transferred officer shall from and after the date of transfer be applied in aid of the rate out of which such expenses are payable.

Suspension of Superannuation Allowance.

(8) Section 6 of the Act of 1896 shall be modified so as to read as follows:—

"6. Where a person in receipt of a superannuation allowance or superannuation allowances under this Act is appointed to any office or employment under any authority to whom this Act applies or under any rating authority, assessment committee or county valuation committee, such allowance or allowances shall cease to be paid to him so long as he continues to hold such office or employment if the salary or emoluments of such office or employment are equal to or in excess of the amount of such allowance or allowances; if they are not, then only so much of such allowance or allowances shall be paid, so long as he holds such office or employment, as will make up the deficiency, and in such last mentioned case, if the person is entitled to allowances from two or more authorities, such authorities shall contribute to the deficiency in proportion to the amounts of the respective allowances granted by them.

Any such person ceasing to hold such office or employment shall be entitled to revert to and to receive the full amount of his original superannuation allowance or allowances from the authority or authorities who granted it or them."

3. This Order may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Act (Superannuation of Transferred Officers) Order, 1928, and shall have effect as from the 1st day of April, 1927.

Given under the Official Seal of the Minister of Health this Eighth day of August, in the year One thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight.

THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT (ESTIMATES OF RELIEF TO RATES) ORDER, 1929, DATED JUNE 6, 1929, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 69 (2) OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925 (a).

Whereas by section 69 (2) of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (in this order referred to as "the Act of 1925") it is provided that for the purposes of the Agricultural Rates Acts, 1896 and 1923, and the Tithe Rent Charge (Rates) Act, 1899, the rates in respect of which relief is given under those Acts shall in an urban rating area be taken to be such part of the general rate levied for that area as is estimated by the Minister of Health to be levied in substitution for the rates in respect of which such relief was given at the date of the passing of the Act of 1925:

And whereas by an order dated the 4th day of December, 1928, the Minister of Health, in relation to any urban rating area, or part of an urban rating area, for which a percentage deduction had been determined in accordance with the provisions of Part III. of the Second Schedule to the Act of 1925, estimated, subject as in the order provided and to any further or amending estimate which he might thereafter make, the part of the general rate which is levied in substitution for rates in respect of which relief was given as aforesaid at the date of the passing of the Act of 1925:

And whereas it is expedient that further provision should be made as hereinafter mentioned:

(a) For the object of this order, see note to s. 69 (2) of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, ante, p. 2233.

RATING AND VALUATION

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 69, and of all powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following order :—

1. This Order may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Act (Estimates of Relief to Rates) Order, 1929.

2. The above cited Order dated the 4th day of December, 1928, is hereby rescinded.

3. The Minister of Health, subject as hereinafter provided and subject to any further or amending estimate which he may hereafter make, estimates that in any urban rating area, or part of an urban rating area, for which a percentage deduction has been determined in accordance with the provisions of Part III. of the Second Schedule to the Act of 1925,—

(1) the part of the general rate which is levied in substitution for rates in respect of which relief was given under the Agricultural Rates Acts, 1896 and 1923, at the date of the passing of the Act of 1925, is such part of the rate as bears to the whole rate the same proportion as seventy-five reduced by an amount equal to the amount of the percentage deduction determined for the area, or for the part of the area, bears to seventy-five: Provided that this estimate shall not apply for the purposes of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1923, in the case of any rating area or part of a rating area in which a partial consolidation of rates was authorised by a local Act passed before the commencement of the Act of 1925, or for which different percentage deductions have been determined in accordance with the provisions of Part III. of the Second Schedule to the Act of 1925, for different classes of hereditaments: and

(2) the poundage of the part of the general rate which is levied in substitution for rates in respect of which relief was given under the Tithe Rent Charge (Rates) Act, 1899, at the date of the passing of the Act of 1925, is such part of the total poundage of the rate as bears to that total the same proportion as three hundred reduced by an amount equal to four times the amount of the percentage deduction determined for the area, or for the part of the area, bears to three hundred reduced by an amount equal to three times the amount of the percentage deduction determined for the area, or for the part of the area, as the case may be: Provided that in the case of any rating area or part of a rating area for which different percentage deductions have been determined for different classes of hereditaments, the deduction to be taken into account in using the estimate for the purposes of the Tithe Rent Charge (Rates) Act, 1899, shall be the deduction so determined in respect of tithes.

Given under the official seal of the Minister of Health, this Sixth day of June, in the year One thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine.

RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1929.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to state that he has had under consideration the modifications rendered necessary or desirable by the passing of the Local Government Act, 1929, in the form of demand note now in use, and to enclose for the information of the Council copies of new rules which he has made under Section 58 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, after consultation with representative associations of local authorities. The new rules (a) supersede the Rating and Valuation Act (Forms of Demand Note) Rules, 1926, and apply to every demand note of a rating authority in respect of any period beginning on or after the first day of April, 1930.

2. Subject to Section 97 (1) (c) of the Local Government Act, 1929 (b), the whole of the new grants which are payable under Part VI of the Local Government Act, 1929, to a county borough council in respect of any period beginning on or after the first day of April, 1930, are, with the proceeds of the local taxation licence duties levied by them, applicable in relief of the general rate in the county borough. The Act contemplates that the cost of the services of the council of the county borough shall be met out of a "pool" into which shall flow the above-mentioned moneys together with the proceeds of the general rate. In these circumstances it will be impracticable to distinguish between that part of the cost of any particular purpose or service which is met from rates and that part of the cost which is met from the other moneys above mentioned. The new form of demand note now prescribed has been drawn with due regard to these facts, and it will be seen that the statement attached to the form of demand note will show the gross poundage for each of the principal services, after allowance has been made for any income (including any Government Grant) specifically in aid of such service, and the rate payable by the ratepayer will be the total of the gross poundages shown thereon less the equivalent, in terms of a rate in the pound, of the new grants under the Act of 1929 receivable by the council.

3. Apart from the changes referred to in the preceding paragraph, only minor modifications of the rules and forms have been made. The chief modification is in connection with the services which must be specified in the statement appended to the demand note. Hitherto, local authorities have been required to specify only those services for which separate fund accounts or separately balanced accounts were kept, although it was open to them to add other services. There has, however, been a great variety of practice, and in many cases the information available to the ratepayer has been somewhat meagre. It is now provided that each of the more important services, a list of which is given in the prescribed statement, must be shown in every statement appended to a demand note, subject, of course, to the exception that if no expenditure is to be incurred in respect of a particular service that service need not be mentioned. The intention of the statement is to give to the ratepayer a list of the principal rate services in the area on which the council spends money, together with figures which will indicate to him the relative cost of these services. It will be appreciated that the list of services prescribed by the rules contains only those of which information is required to be given; local authorities are empowered to add to this information and to include particulars of such other services as they think desirable.

4. It is not necessary that local authorities should adopt the prescribed forms without any modification whatsoever. The rules provide that forms substantially to the like effect may be used. It would thus be possible, for example—

(a) either to include any adjustments of general credit or debit balances in the item "other services and expenses," or to show such adjustments as a separate item; the poundages shown for the individual services for which by law separate funds must be kept must, however, take account of adjustments of balances in those funds, and, where local authorities do in fact keep separately balanced accounts for other individual services, the same procedure should apply.

(b) to give additional information to ratepayers, e.g. to state the sums of money for each service as well as the rate poundages.

It has also been represented to the Minister that, though the total poundage of the rate may not be increased by reason of the alteration in the system of rating and grant distribution, yet that alteration may result in an apparent increase of poundage in respect of some particular service or services, and that in such a case it should be open to the authority to add to the statement attached to the first demand note under the new rules an explanation to this effect. There is nothing in the rules to prevent this.

5. It will be seen that the demand note is required to be signed by the authorised officer of the authority (see Sections 59 (3) and 68 (1) of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a)). It will suffice if the signature is printed.

6. An additional copy of this Circular and of the rules is enclosed for the information of the responsible accounting officer. The Circular and rules are on sale and copies may be obtained at the addresses shown below.

ANNUAL REPORTS OF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEES.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to remind you that paragraph 7 of the First Schedule to the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, provides for the making of Annual Reports in a prescribed form by Assessment Committees to their Constituent Authorities, to the Minister, and to the Central Valuation Committee, and that section 58 of the Act empowers the Minister to prescribe by Rules anything which by the Act is to be prescribed.

The Minister has been in consultation with the Central Valuation Committee on this matter, and has made the accompanying Rules prescribing the form of Report for the year ending on April 1st, 1930 (b). It will be seen that the Rules prescribe the particulars which are to be included in the Reports, and so leave the Committees free to include therein any additional particulars which they may deem of interest.

THE RATING AND VALUATION (FORMS OF PRECEPT—COUNTY COUNCILS) RULES, 1930,* DATED JUNE 28TH, 1930, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 58 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR PRESCRIBING FORMS OF PRECEPTS TO BE USED BY COUNTY COUNCILS.

Whereas by section 9 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a), provision is made with respect to precepts to be issued to rating authorities by councils of counties in respect of any period beginning on or after the first day of April, 1929; and by subsection (5) of that section such councils are required on issuing any such precept to supply to the rating authority such information as is reasonably necessary for the preparation of demand notes in accordance with the provisions of Part I of the Act:

And whereas by section 58 of the said Act it is provided that the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe the form of any return or other document whatsoever which is required or authorised to be used under or for the purposes of the Act:

And whereas by the Rating and Valuation (Forms of Demand Note) Rules, 1930, made by the Minister of Health under the said section 58, rating authorities are required to include in any demand note a statement giving certain information with respect of services administered by the County Council:

And whereas consequent upon the coming into operation of the Local Government Act, 1929, the changes therein provided for, and the making of the said rules it is expedient to supersede by the rules hereinafter contained the Rating and Valuation Act (Forms of Precept—County Councils) Rules, 1929 (b), made under the said section 58:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultation as is mentioned above, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 58 and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Rules:

1.—(1) These rules may be cited as the Rating and Valuation (Forms of Precept—County Councils) Rules, 1930, and shall be deemed to have had effect as from the 5th day of February, 1930.

(3) In these Rules, "equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound" means in relation to any sum and any area the poundage of the rate which would be levied on that area under precept of the County Council if that sum formed the subject of a separate precept.

2. Every precept issued by a County Council under section 9 (2) of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, in respect of any period beginning on or after the 1st day of April, 1930, shall be in the form set out in the Schedule hereto or in a form substantially to the like effect.

3. Every precept issued by a County Council in accordance with the foregoing Rule shall show:

(i) the rate in the pound which the Council require the rating authority to levy as part of the general rate;

(ii) the rate in the pound which the Council require the rating authority to levy as an additional item of the general rate in respect of each part of the rating area on which any expenses are chargeable separately, indicating the part so charged, and the purpose of the charge;

(iii) in the case of an amount which is not required to be expressed in the precept in terms of a rate in the pound, the amount and purpose of the sum demanded and the area charged.

* These Rules supersede Provisional Regulations which were made on the 5th day of February, 1930, and came into force on that date.

RATING AND VALUATION

4.—(1) There shall be included in every such precept a statement in the form set out in the Schedule hereto, or in a form substantially to the like effect, showing, in the manner for which the form provides,

(a) the equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound of the gross estimated expenditure less any income specifically applicable thereto, in respect of each service specified in the form and in respect of such other of their principal services, if any, as the County Council think fit;

(b) the equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound of the Exchequer Grants payable to the County Council under the Local Government Act, 1929; and distinguishing by an asterisk, in the manner indicated in the form, each such service towards the cost of which a grant payable to the County Council by any Government Department is specifically applicable.

(2) In calculating the amount to be shown for the purposes of any service or group of services, there shall be included any sums required for repayment of, or for interest on, moneys borrowed for that service or group of services.

5. Except as regards any precept issued in respect of any period ending on or before the 31st day of March, 1930, the Rating and Valuation Act (Forms of Precept—County Councils) Rules, 1929, are hereby rescinded.

RATING AND VALUATION

S. R. & O., 1930, No. 542.

THE RATING AND VALUATION (FORMS OF DEMAND NOTE) RULES, 1930, DATED JUNE 28TH, 1930,* MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 58 OF THE RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925, FOR PRESCRIBING THE FORMS OF DEMAND NOTES TO BE USED BY RATING AUTHORITIES.

Whereas by section 7 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a), provision is made with regard to the inclusion of certain information in the demand notes on which general rates and special rates are levied:

And whereas by section 58 of the said Act it is provided that the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe the form of any demand note or other document whatsoever which is required or authorised to be used under or for the purposes of the Act:

And whereas, consequent upon the coming into operation of the Local Government Act, 1929, and the changes therein provided for, it is expedient to supersede by the Rules hereinafter contained the Rating and Valuation Act (Forms of Demand Note) Rules, 1926 (b), made under the said section 58:

Now therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultation as is mentioned above, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said section 58 and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Rules:

1.—(1) These Rules may be cited as the Rating and Valuation (Forms of Demand Note) Rules, 1930, and shall be deemed to have had effect as from the 5th day of February, 1930.

(2) In these Rules:

"demand note" does not include a demand note issued in respect of any rating period beginning before the 1st day of April, 1930;

"the Act" means the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925;

"equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound" means in relation to any sum the poundage of the rate which it would be necessary to levy to produce that sum and for this purpose the product of a rate of a penny in the pound shall be a sum estimated in the manner prescribed by Rule 6 of the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1929 (c).

2.—(1) Every demand note for a general rate shall incorporate form A, form B or form C in the schedule hereto, as the case may be, or a form substantially to the like effect, modified, where necessary, to meet the case of a rate made payable in instalments.

(2) Every demand note for a special rate shall incorporate form D in the schedule hereto, or a form substantially to the like effect, modified, where necessary, to meet the case of a rate made payable in instalments.

(3) Subject to the provisions of Rule 3 the rating authority shall in preparing any demand note enter in the several columns particulars in accordance with the headings thereto.

3.—(1) As regards hereditaments in respect of which an allowance may be claimed under paragraph (a) of subsection (1) or under subsection (2) of section 11 of the Act the rating authority—

(a) in any case where the amount due from an owner in respect of a group of two or more hereditaments is shown as one total in the rate book, shall, in lieu of entering the particulars as specified in form A, form B, form C, or form D (as the case may be) in the columns appearing upon the demand note, enter those particulars in a schedule in respect of each such group to be attached to the demand note and shall enter on the demand note a reference to such schedule and the total amount of rates shown by the schedule to be due, and

(b) in any other case shall, in preparing the demand note, insert on the form prescribed by Rule 2 information with respect to the allowance which may be claimed.

(2) The schedule referred to in paragraph (1) (a) of this Rule shall embody such one of the forms of statement J, K, or L, prescribed in the Rate Accounts (Rural District Councils) Order, 1926 (a), and the Rate Accounts (Borough and Urban District Councils) Order, 1926 (b), as may be appropriate.

(3) The rating authority may, if they see fit, make use of a schedule in the manner provided by paragraph (1) of this Rule in any case where a person undertakes to pay the rates in respect of two or more hereditaments but is not entitled to claim any allowance referred to in the said paragraph.

4. A demand note or the schedule attached thereto in accordance with the provision of Rule 3, as the case may be, shall contain such a brief description of the hereditament or hereditaments to which it relates as may be reasonably necessary for the purposes of identification.

5. A demand note shall also include—

(i) information with regard to the place and mode of payment; and

(ii) in a rating area in which a resolution under section 8 of the Act (as to discount for prompt payment) is in force, information as to the effect of the resolution (including the date after which payment must be made in full).

6. A rating authority may include in a demand note for rates a demand for any water rate, rent or charge, or other rate, rent or charge payable to them, and may combine in one demand note demands for a general rate and for a special rate, provided that such combined demand note shall be so framed as to include all the information which by the Act and these rules would be required to be given to ratepayers if separate demand notes were issued.

7. There shall be included in every demand note a statement in the form set out in the schedule hereto appropriate to that demand note, or in a form substantially to the like effect, showing, in the manner for which that form provides—

(1) the equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound of the gross estimated expenditure less any income specifically applicable thereto, in respect of—

(a) each service or group of services for which a separate fund account is kept by the rating authority,

(c) each of the services specified in the form which is not included under the preceding categories (a) and (b), and in respect of which expenditure is to be incurred, and

(d) the other services of the rating authority, specifying such of them, if any, as they think fit, distinguishing by an asterisk, in the manner indicated in the form, each service towards the cost of which a grant payable to the rating authority or County Council by a Government Department is specifically applicable; and

(2) the equivalent in terms of a rate in the pound of the Exchequer Grants under the Local Government Act, 1929, and, in the case of a rural district council, of any moneys receivable under section 92 of that Act.

8. For the purposes of the last preceding Rule the following provisions shall have effect:

(1) The expression "separate fund account" includes—

(a) in relation to expenses chargeable on part only of a rating area, the separate account or accounts of such expenses,

RATING AND VALUATION

(b) in relation to any service for which by law separate accounts are required to be kept, the separate revenue account kept therefor.

(2) In calculating the amount to be shown for the purposes of any service or group of services, there shall be included any sums required for repayment of, or for interest on, moneys borrowed for that service or group of services.

(3) Where the aggregate amount in the pound which would otherwise have been levied by the rating authority has been varied in order to give effect to any differential rating requirements to which effect has to be given by the rating authority, a note shall be made on the statement showing the extent of, and reason for, such variation.

9. The Rating and Valuation Act (Forms of Demand Note) Rules, 1926 (a), except as regards demand notes for any rate in respect of any rating period beginning before the 1st day of April, 1930, are hereby rescinded.

Rating Authorities and Assessment Committees (in London and outside London), County Valuation Committees, London County Council.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
17th July, 1930.

RAILWAYS (VALUATION FOR RATING) ACT, 1930.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw your attention to the provisions of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act (a), which received Royal Assent on July 10th, 1930.

2. The Act, which was based on negotiations between representatives of Railway Companies and Local Authorities, applies the principle of valuation in cumulo to railway undertakings.

3. The Companies to which the Act in the first instance applies are the Great Western, the London and North Eastern, the London, Midland and Scottish, the Southern and the Metropolitan Railway Companies, but provision is made in the First Schedule for the application of the Act, with any necessary modifications, to the undertakings of other Railway Companies by means of Schemes.

4. The assessment of railway hereditaments will in future be determined by a Railway Assessment Authority, to be constituted under the Act, and not by the Rating Authorities and Assessment Committees.

5. Railway hereditaments are defined to mean hereditaments occupied for the purposes of the undertaking of a railway company, and " undertaking " includes for this purpose, in addition to the company's principal undertaking,

(a) any canal, dock or harbour undertaking carried on by the company ;

(b) any subsidiary or ancillary undertaking carried on by the company, not being a road-transport, sea-transport or air-transport undertaking ; and

(c) the share of the company in any joint undertaking carried on by, or on behalf of, two or more railway companies not being a road-transport, sea-transport or air-transport undertaking.

It is to be noted, however, that " no premises occupied as a dwelling-house, hotel or place of public refreshment, or so let out as to be capable of separate assessment, shall be deemed to be, or to form part of, a railway hereditament."

Such premises will, therefore, fall to be assessed by local Rating Authorities and Assessment Committees.

6. The constitution of the Railway Assessment Authority is laid down in Section 2 of the Act. It is to consist of a paid chairman, who is to be an experienced lawyer appointed by the Lord Chancellor, and nine other members appointed by the Minister. Of these, six are to be appointed on the recommendation of the bodies specified in the Section and three at the Minister's discretion.

In the case of the two Anglo-Scottish railways, the ascertainment of receipts not solely attributable to hereditaments in England and the division thereof between England and Scotland will be made by a Joint Authority consisting of the Chairman of the Railway Assessment Authority, one other person appointed by that Authority and the Assessor of Railways and Canals for Scotland.

The expenses of the Railway Assessment Authority and a proportion of the expenses of the Joint Authority will fall to be defrayed by County and County Borough Councils.

7. It will be the duty of the Railway Assessment Authority to prepare a railway valuation roll containing, in separate parts, the particulars of the railway hereditaments in England occupied by the several companies. The first roll is, subject to the temporary provisions hereafter referred to, to come into operation on the appointed day, viz., in London on April 6th, 1931, and elsewhere on April 1st, 1931, and subsequent rolls are to come into operation at quinquennial intervals.

8. The preparation of the roll will involve—

(i) the determination of the value in cumulo of the undertaking of each railway company (or in the case of the two Anglo-Scottish railways of the undertaking so far as it is carried on in England);

(ii) the apportionment of this valuation in cumulo among the individual railway hereditaments, in accordance with a scheme to be prepared under Section 13 of the Act (referred to later);

(iii) the calculation of the rateable value of each railway hereditament from the net annual value so apportioned to it.

9. The valuation in cumulo is to be ascertained by reference to average net receipts in accordance with the provisions of Sections 4 and 5 of the Act.

10. Provision is made in Section 7 and the Third Schedule for the publication in draft of the determinations of the Joint Authority and the Railway Assessment Authority respectively, and for the making of representations. The particulars to be sent to the railway companies and local authorities concerned and the notices to be issued in connection therewith will, in due course, be prescribed by the Minister as required by the Act.

The matters in regard to which representations may be made and the bodies entitled to make them are specified in the Third Schedule. Representations to the Joint Authority in respect of matters which are to be determined by them and representations to the Railway Assessment Authority with regard to the amount of the average net receipts or the valuation in cumulo may be made by railway companies, County Valuation Committees and County Borough Councils. Representations to the Railway Assessment Authority as to the classification of, or the value apportioned to, particular premises may be made by the same bodies and also by the Rating Authority concerned or any person aggrieved, but it is provided that, on any such representation, the Authority shall not enter on any inquiry as to the correctness of the valuation in cumulo.

11. After consideration of any representations that may be made, the Joint Authority will issue their certificate in the case of the Anglo-Scottish railways and the Railway Assessment Authority will proceed to complete the roll both as regards the English portion of those railways and as regards the purely English railways. The Railway Assessment Authority are required to send notice of completion of each part of the roll and such particulars as may be prescribed to railway companies, County Valuation Committees, Assessment Committees and Rating Authorities.

12. Appeals against the railway valuation roll (or part thereof) as completed by the Railway Assessment Authority and against the certificate of the Joint Authority may be brought to the Railway and Canal Commissioners, and the superior court to which appeals from their decisions are to lie is the House of Lords. The provision as to the matters on which appeal may be brought and as to the bodies or person entitled to appeal follow the provisions as to representations already mentioned.

13. No alteration is to be made in any part of the railway valuation roll within six months of completion or pending the decision of any appeal against the valuation in cumulo. At the expiration of the six months (or after the decision on any such appeal) the Railway Assessment Authority will revise the roll, making any alterations necessitated by the decision on the appeal or by any decisions which they themselves may have given in the meanwhile on representations made in pursuance of Section 11 of the Act.

14. Section 11 provides for representations and appeals by railway companies, County Valuation Committees or Rating Authorities or by any person aggrieved on the ground of changes of circumstances affecting particular premises and occurring during the quinquennium. Effect is to be given to the decisions on any such representations or appeals by alteration of the roll. Such alterations, however, are not to involve any general review of the assessments of the other railway hereditaments on the company's system unless and until, in total, they involve an increase or decrease of more than one per cent. (or £5,000 whichever is greater) in the sum of the net annual values of the company's railway hereditaments. If and when that limit is reached, there is to be a general percentage revision of the value of all the railway hereditaments in the company's occupation.

15. Section 12 deals with two points, viz.: (1) the translation into local valuation lists of the relevant particulars in the railway valuation roll and the amendment of the lists to correspond with alterations in the roll, and (2) the date of operation of entries, and amendments of entries, in the lists, for purposes of determining rate liability.

It will be the duty of Assessment Committees, on receipt of information as to the completion or subsequent alteration of the roll, to cause the necessary entries to be made in the valuation lists for their areas in substitution for the existing entries.

In compiling any new valuation lists for their areas, Rating Authorities will, as regards railway hereditaments, automatically insert therein the particulars standing in the existing lists, and these will remain unaltered pending receipt from the Railway Assessment Authority of information as to alterations in the corresponding entries in the railway valuation roll.

The date of operation of amendments in valuation lists, for the purpose of determining a railway company's rate liability, will vary according to the circumstances in which the alteration of the roll, which occasions the amendment of the valuation list, is made. The relevant provisions will be found in subsection (4) of Section 12.

Alterations of the roll involving a change in the classification of premises may necessitate procedure by way of proposal for amendment of the list under Section 37 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (a) (or in London by way of provisional or supplemental list) to secure the proper assessment of premises no longer so occupied and used as to be (or form part of) "railway hereditaments." The date of operation of amendments so made, for the purpose of determining the occupiers' rate liability, is governed by the provisions of subsection (5) of Section 12.

Provisions as to consequential adjustments of rate charges (and, in London, as to the date of operation of amendments on totals for purposes of precepts) are contained in the succeeding subsections.

16. Reference has already been made to the question of the basis of apportionment of the valuation in cumulo. Section 13 requires the Railway Assessment Authority to prepare an apportionment scheme for determining the principle on which the valuation in cumulo of each company's undertaking is to be apportioned among the individual railway hereditaments occupied by the company, and also the basis of the distribution between the several counties and county boroughs of the Authority's expenses.

The principles laid down in the scheme are to be such as to secure that regard shall be had, inter alia, to certain considerations in the case of different classes of railway premises covered by the phrase "railway hereditaments."

The Railway Assessment Authority are to give public notice of the scheme when prepared and are required to hear and consider any representations made within two months by railway companies, County Valuation Committees or the Councils of County Boroughs or by any other Rating Authority whose interests are, in the opinion of the Railway Assessment Authority, specially affected.

The Authority are then to submit the scheme, with such modifications as they may consider necessary in the light of any representations received, for confirmation by the Minister, with or without modifications. The Minister's confirming Order is to be laid in draft before both Houses of Parliament, and if an address is presented against the draft scheme by either House within the next twenty-eight days no further proceedings are to be taken thereon, but without prejudice to the making and confirmation of a new scheme.

17. County Valuation Committees and Rating Authorities are empowered to combine for the purposes of prosecuting or resisting any representations or appeals under the Act, and to share the expenses.

18. Rating Authorities and Assessment Committees are required to render the Railway Assessment Authority any assistance reasonably required, and the Minister is confident that such help will be readily given.

RATING AND VALUATION

19. The only other provisions of the Act to which the Minister thinks it necessar to draw the attention of Local Authorities are the temporary and transitory pro visions contained in the Fourth Schedule.

Part I deals with railway assessments outside London for the current financia year, and gives statutory sanction to any agreement relating thereto made betwee the Chairman of the Central Valuation Committee and any railway company. A Local Authorities are aware, such an agreement was in fact concluded while the Bi was before Parliament, and Rating Authorities and Assessment Committees ar aware of its provisions, which follow generally those of the agreement concluded fo 1929/30. Accordingly, the rate liability for the current financial year of the railwa companies which were parties to the agreement will, as regards hereditaments out side London, be determined by the rateable values calculated in accordance with th agreement.

Part II contains provisions which will operate temporarily in the event of the firs railway valuation roll, or any particular part thereof, not having been completed an revised by April 1st, 1931. Broadly, the effect of the provisions is to stereotype fo the time being the classification and values of freight-transport hereditaments in th occupation of railway companies as at March 31st, 1931. The particulars and valu are to stand until the roll has been finally revised and, immediately thereafter, th valuation lists are to be amended to bring them into conformity with the rol Amendments so made will have retrospective effect for purposes of determining rat liability in accordance with the provisions of Section 12 of the Act.

Your obedient Servant,

RATING AND VALUATION ACT, 1925.

LAND DRAINAGE ACT, 1930.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to say that he has been in con munication with the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries as to the operation of th provisions of the Land Drainage Act, 1930 (a), relating to the expenses of Catchmer Boards.

The Minister understands that, as the boundaries of Catchment Areas mu normally follow the natural feature known as the watershed, they will, in many case not coincide with the boundaries of rating areas or of existing parishes or parts parishes as defined in Section 68 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (b), and he informed that the boundary of one of the Catchment Areas constituted by the Lar Drainage Act in fact passes through your Rating Area.

In these circumstances action on the part of the Rating Authority and Assessmer Committee will be necessary to secure the effective operation of the provisio relating to the distribution of charges in respect of the Catchment Board's expense

Where the boundary of a Catchment Area divides an existing parish, or part of parish which is a contributory place or otherwise subject to separate or differenti rating, the operation of the provisions of the Land Drainage Act as to expenses County Councils in respect of amounts due to Catchment Boards may have th effect of creating a new area subject to differential rating. Section 21 (2) of th Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (c), and Rule 3 of the Rating and Valuation Act (For of Valuation List) Rules, 1926 (a), require that the particulars with respect to each parish (or part of a parish) in the rating area shall be set out in a separate division of the valuation list. Where, therefore, a new area of charge is created consequential on the formation of a Catchment Area, it will, strictly speaking, be necessary to divide into two parts the valuation list, or the section of the valuation list relating to the parish or part of the parish affected, one of the new parts of the list relating to hereditaments within the Catchment Area and the other relating to hereditaments not within that area.

In any such case the Rating Authority should consult the Assessment Committee. If the Assessment Committee are of opinion that a physical division of the existing lists cannot be effected without undue inconvenience, the object in view might, during the continuance of the present lists, be attained by the compilation of a separate record of the hereditaments included in the Catchment Area, or, alternatively, by placing distinguishing marks in the existing lists against the entries relating to those hereditaments, and in either case compiling a separate record of totals in respect of the hereditaments affected.

Further, in any case where the boundary of the Catchment Area cuts across an existing hereditament, and the parts of the divided hereditament become situate in separate areas of charge, the parts will automatically become separate hereditaments, and it will be necessary for the Rating Authority to make a proposal to the Assessment Committee for assessing them separately.

Procedure on the lines suggested may be required not only for the purpose of facilitating the issue of precepts and the making of rates in the event of the County Council electing to charge its expenses as provided by paragraphs (b) or (c) of section 23 (1) of the Land Drainage Act, but also for the purposes of Section 20 of that Act. That Section provides that, where a Catchment Area extends into two or more Counties, the Catchment Board shall apportion its expenses between the Counties on the basis of the rateable value of hereditaments in the portions of the Catchment Area within each County, as shown in the valuation lists in force on the first day of the period of account in which those expenses are chargeable; and, under subsection (4) of that Section, the totals of such rateable value are to be supplied to the Catchment Board by the County Councils. It is, therefore, desirable that steps should be taken forthwith which will enable the totals of rateable value, as at the relevant date, inside and outside the Catchment Area respectively to be readily supplied to the County Council for transmission to the Catchment Board.

If any hereditament which is divided by the Catchment Area boundary is a railway hereditament as defined in the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930, the Railway Assessment Authority should be informed of the action taken to make any necessary apportionment of the existing value.

The Minister is informed that, pursuant to the provisions of Section 5 of the Land Drainage Act, maps have been prepared showing the boundaries of the Catchment Area which passes through your Rating Area; and he understands that, if application is made to the County Council, they will be prepared to supply you with such information as is available to show where the Catchment Area boundary differs from the boundaries of existing parishes or parts of parishes in your Rating Area.

It will be appreciated that, where Catchment Boards have already been constituted, it is desirable that any steps necessary for the apportionment of expenditure incurred by them should be taken without delay, and I am accordingly to request that your Council, as Rating Authority, will give the matters referred to in this letter immediate consideration.

An additional copy of this Circular is enclosed for the information of the responsible rating or accounting officer of the Rating Authority. Copies are also being sent to the County Councils concerned.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
R. B. CROSS.
Assistant Secretary.

Whereas the Railway Assessment Authority constituted under the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930, under and in accordance with section 13 of the said Act (a) submitted to the Minister of Health for his confirmation an apportionment scheme (hereinafter referred to as "the apportionment scheme");

And whereas the Minister of Health has made certain modifications in Article 8 (4) (ii) (b) of the apportionment scheme and the apportionment scheme as modified by him is set out in the schedule hereto:

Now therefore the Minister of Health in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by section 13 of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following order:

(a) The principles in accordance with which in the case of every railway company (as defined in the Act) the net annual value of the company's undertaking as a whole, or the net annual value of the company's undertaking as a whole in so far as it is carried on in England, as the case may be, is to be apportioned between the railway hereditaments in England occupied by the company, and

(b) The basis on which the expenses of the Authority are to be apportioned among the councils of the several counties and county boroughs in England;

And whereas it is provided in section 13 (2) of the Act that the principles laid down in any scheme as aforesaid shall be such as to secure that the Authority in apportioning the net annual value of a railway company's undertaking as a whole, or the net annual value of such an undertaking as a whole in so far as it is carried on in England, shall:

(i) In the case of hereditaments consisting of land used only as a railway made under the powers of any Act of Parliament for public conveyance, have regard, amongst other material considerations, to an estimate of the traffic conveyed over the hereditament; and

(ii) In the case of other hereditaments have regard, amongst other material considerations, to the value for the purposes of the undertaking of a railway company of the land and structures comprised in the hereditament;

(b) Every railway hereditament occupied by a company which, so far as occupied for the purposes of the undertaking of the company, is occupied for the purposes of more than one constituent undertaking shall be notionally divided into parts allocated to the several constituent undertakings in accordance with the estimated proportions in which the hereditament, so far as occupied for the purposes of the undertaking of the company, is occupied for the purposes of those constituent undertakings; and any such notional part of a hereditament so allocated to any constituent undertaking shall be deemed to be a hereditament of that constituent undertaking.

(2) The amount apportioned under this Article to any hereditament shall be the net annual value of that hereditament.

RATING AND VALUATION

8. The net annual value of the principal undertaking shall be apportioned among the several hereditaments thereof in accordance with the following provisions:

(1) The hereditaments of the principal undertaking shall be sub-divided into two classes, viz.:

(i) Class A comprising hereditaments consisting of land used only as a railway (hereinafter called "the hereditaments of Class A"); and

(2) The net annual value of the principal undertaking shall be divided between the said two classes in proportion to the estimated relative values of the aggregate of the hereditaments of each such class to the principal undertaking, and the amount so allocated to each class (hereinafter in this Article referred to respectively as "the net annual value of Class A" and "the net annual value of Class B") shall be apportioned among the several hereditaments of Class A and the several hereditaments of Class B respectively in manner hereinafter provided.

(3) For the purpose of apportioning the net annual value of Class A among the hereditaments of Class A, the Authority shall divide the said net annual value into two parts (hereinafter in this Article referred to respectively as "the traffic element of net annual value" and "the non-traffic element of net annual value") in the proportions in which the relative value of the aggregate of the hereditaments of Class A to the principal undertaking, as estimated for the purposes of Article 8 (2), is estimated to be attributable to the train-mile receipts, ascertained as hereinafter provided, from traffic conveyed over the hereditaments and in which that value is estimated to be otherwise attributable.

(4) The traffic element of net annual value shall be apportioned among the several hereditaments of Class A in accordance with the following rules:

(i) The Authority shall divide the land used only as a railway comprising the said hereditaments into such sections as shall be convenient and proper for the purpose of enabling the traffic conveyed over each section to be estimated.

(ii) There shall be estimated:

(a) the passenger-train and goods-train miles respectively worked over each such section during twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period; and

(b) the gross receipts attributable to each such passenger-train and goods-train mile respectively for twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period, and such gross receipts shall, where such passenger-train or goods-train miles include train miles for trains conveying only the company's own traffic which does not earn gross receipts, be the amount which would have been estimated to be attributable to each such passenger-train and goods-train mile respectively if the company's own traffic conveyed by such trains had been traffic earning gross receipts.

(iii) The Authority shall ascertain the train-mile receipts of each such section by adding together (a) the amount obtained by multiplying the passenger-train miles estimated under rule (ii) (a) of this paragraph to be worked over the section during twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period by the gross receipts estimated under rule (ii) (b) of this paragraph to be attributable to each such passenger-train mile for twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period, and (b) the amount obtained by multiplying the goods-train miles estimated under rule (ii) (a) of this paragraph to be worked over the section during twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period by the gross receipts estimated under rule (ii) (b) of this paragraph to be attributable to each such goods-train mile for twelve months of normal working within the appropriate period.

(iv) By reference to the train-mile receipts of each such section, ascertained under rule (iii) of this paragraph, the share (if any) of those train-mile receipts which is attributable to each hereditament or part of a hereditament comprised in the section shall be estimated.

(v) The Authority shall apportion to each hereditament such proportion of the traffic element of net annual value as the share (if any) of the train-mile receipts estimated to be attributable to that hereditament under rule (iv) of this paragraph bears to the sum of the train-mile receipts ascertained under rule (iii) of this paragraph for all the sections into which for the purposes of these rules the land used only as a railway was divided under rule (i) of this paragraph.

(5) The non-traffic element of net annual value shall be apportioned among the several hereditaments of Class A in the proportions in which the relative values of the several hereditaments to the principal undertaking are estimated to be attributable otherwise than to the train-mile receipts, ascertained as hereinbefore provided, from traffic conveyed over such hereditaments.

(6) The sum of the amounts apportioned under paragraphs (4) and (5) of this Article to any hereditament of Class A shall be the net annual value of that hereditament.

(7) The net annual value of Class B shall be apportioned among the several hereditaments of Class B in proportion to the estimated relative values of the several hereditaments to the principal undertaking.

(8) The amount apportioned under the last preceding paragraph of this Article to any hereditament of Class B shall be the net annual value of that hereditament.

9. Where a hereditament has under Article 5 of this Scheme been notionally divided, the sum of the net annual values apportioned to every part into which the hereditament was so divided shall be the net annual value of the hereditament.

PART III.—APPORTIONMENT OF EXPENSES OF THE AUTHORITY.

10. As from the commencement of the financial year first following the date on which the last part of the first railway valuation roll to be completed and revised under the Act shall have been completed and revised by the Authority, the expenses of the Authority (including any sum paid to the Joint Authority in accordance with paragraph 1 of Part II of the Second Schedule to the Act) shall be apportioned among the councils of the several counties and county boroughs in England upon the basis of the net annual values (as shown in the railway valuation roll in force upon the first day of the financial year in which the precepts are issued) of the railway hereditaments within each county and county borough.

11. During the period elapsing between the date on which the last part of the first railway valuation roll to be completed and revised has been completed and revised by the Authority and the date of the commencement of the financial year first following such completion and revision the expenses of the Authority (including any sum paid to the Joint Authority in accordance with paragraph 1 of Part II of the Second Schedule to the Act) shall be apportioned on the basis set out in the proviso to paragraph 3 of Part II of the Second Schedule to the Act.

Given under the official seal of the Railway Assessment Authority this twenty-first day of March, nineteen hundred and thirty-one.

that valuation lists which will come into force after the 1st day of October 1929 shall be made in conformity with the provisions of that Act;

And whereas by subsection (1) of section 1 of the Act of 1928 it is provided inter alia that in every valuation list agricultural industrial and freight transport hereditaments shall be distinguished from each other and from all other hereditaments and that where by that Act the net annual value of such hereditaments is required to be apportioned such apportionment shall be shown in the prescribed manner in the valuation list;

And whereas by section 67 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (a), it is provided that no particulars with respect to agricultural land or agricultural buildings shall be included in any valuation list subsequent to the valuation lists in force on the appointed day under that Act namely the first day of October 1929;

And whereas by section 12 of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (b), it is provided that so soon as an assessment committee have received from the Railway Assessment Authority notice that any part of a railway valuation roll has been completed and information as to the contents of that part they shall cause the values entered in that part of the roll and such of the other particulars entered therein as may be prescribed to be entered in the valuation list in substitution for values or particulars appearing in that list; and it is further provided in paragraph 2 of Part II of the fourth schedule to that Act that until the relevant part of the first railway valuation roll has been revised by the Railway Assessment Authority no alteration shall be made in the particulars and values appearing in any valuation list with respect to any hereditament which is under paragraph 1 of Part II of that schedule to be treated as if it was for the time being shown in the railway valuation roll as a railway hereditament;

And whereas by sections 21, 29 and 58 of the Act of 1925 provision is made with respect to the insertion in valuation lists of such particulars as to hereditaments and values and the recording of such particulars as to totals of values as may be prescribed and it is further provided that the Minister of Health after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable may by rules prescribe the form of any valuation list or other document whatsoever which is required or authorised to be used under or for the purpose of that Act;

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ADJUSTMENT OF LOSSES IN COUNTY BOROUGHS) REGULATIONS, 1933, DATED APRIL 3RD, 1933, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 97 (1) (c) OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1929, PRESCRIBING REGULATIONS FOR SECURING THE ADJUSTMENT OF LOSSES AS RESPECTS LOSING AREAS IN COUNTY BOROUGHS.

Whereas by paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of section 97 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (a), it is provided that the Minister of Health shall make regulations for securing that the grants under Part VI of the Act paid to the Council of a County Borough shall be applied towards making good to areas with respect to which a loss is disclosed the amount of such loss or of part thereof in such manner as to effect the objects of the said section:

Now, therefore, the Minister of Health in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the said paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of section 97 of the Local Government Act, 1929, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following Regulations:

1. These regulations may be cited as the Local Government (Adjustment of Losses in County Boroughs) Regulations, 1933, and shall have effect in relation to the years of the first and subsequent fixed grant periods.

2.—(1) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

(2) In these regulations, unless the context otherwise requires, the following expressions have the meanings hereby assigned to them—

"the Act" means the Local Government Act, 1929;

"minor rated area" means an area being a part only of a county borough, which was in the calculations made in accordance with paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of section 97 of the Act treated as a separately rated area, or which has been added to the county borough since the 1st day of April, 1930.

"losing area" and "gaining area" mean respectively a minor rated area in respect of which the calculations made in accordance with paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of section 97 of the Act and the Fifth Schedule to the Act disclose a loss and a gain respectively, and the expression "loss" shall be construed accordingly;

"product of a penny rate" means, in relation to any county borough or any minor rated area, the amount produced by a rate of a penny in the pound in that county borough or area as the case may be, calculated in accordance with the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1929 (a);

"area proportion of the General Exchequer Grant" means in relation to any minor rated area for any year a sum bearing the same proportion to the General Exchequer Grant of the county borough for that year as the product of a penny rate in that area bears to the product of a penny rate in the county borough for that year.

3.—(1) In the case of a county borough which contains minor rated areas, wher any one or more of those areas is a losing area the Minister shall certify t he amount o the loss of each losing area in the county borough.

(2) In the case of any such county borough as aforesaid where an Additiona Exchequer Grant exceeding in amount the aggregate amount of the losses of the losing areas in the county borough is payable in respect of the county borough the council of the county borough shall, out of the total of the General Exchequer Grant and Additional Exchequer Grant of the council for each year, apply in aid of so much of the general rate as is leviable in any losing area a sum equivalent to the amount of the loss of that area certified as aforesaid by the Minister and shall apply the remainder of the General Exchequer Grant and Additional Exchequer Grant in aid of the general rate over the whole borough.

(3) In the case of any such county borough as aforesaid where no Additional Exchequer Grant is payable in respect of the county borough the council of the county borough shall for each year—

(a) ascertain the area proportion of the General Exchequer Grant of the council in respect of each minor rated area;

(b) apply in aid of so much of the general rate as is leviable in each losing area so much of the Supplementary Exchequer Grant payable to the council as is in respect of the loss of the area certified as aforesaid together with a sum equivalent to that area's area proportion of the General Exchequer Grant increased by a sum not less than one-half of the amount of that loss; and

(c) apply in aid of so much of the general rate as is leviable in each of the other minor rated areas a sum equivalent to that area's area proportion of the General Exchequer Grant reduced by a sum equal to the amount, if any, contributed by that area towards the aggregate of the sums by which the losing areas' area proportions of the General Exchequer Grant are, under the provisions of the foregoing sub-paragraph (b), increased.

4.—(1) If the council of any county borough to which the provisions of paragraph (2) of Regulation 3 of these regulations apply is satisfied that, if full effect were given to the provisions of that paragraph, the poundage of the rate to be levied in each minor rated area within the borough would not vary by more than one penny from the poundage which would be required to be levied in each such area if the whole of the General Exchequer Grant, together with the whole of the Additional Exchequer Grant, were applied in aid of the general rate over the whole borough, then they may by resolution decide that the whole of the said grants of the council shall be so applied and thereupon they shall be applied accordingly.

(2) If the council of any county borough to which the provisions of paragraph (3) of Regulation 3 of these regulations apply is satisfied that, if there were applied in aid of so much of the general rate as is leviable in each losing area comprised in the borough so much of the Supplementary Exchequer Grant as is in respect of the loss of that area together with a sum equivalent to that area's area proportion of the General Exchequer Grant increased by a sum equivalent to one-half of the amount of that loss, the poundage of the rate to be levied in each minor rated area within the borough would not vary by more than one penny from the poundage of the rate which would be required to be levied in each such area if the whole of the General Exchequer Grant, together with the whole of the Supplementary Exchequer Grant,

Every rating authority, including the council of a county borough, on receiving any document sent to them under rule 10 hereof shall deposit it at their offices and shall forthwith publish a notice in the manner provided by section 46 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, indicating where and at what times the document may be inspected. The document so deposited shall be open to inspection for twenty-one days from the date on which notice of the deposit thereof is published.

12.—(1) Subject as hereinafter provided, every assessment committee on receiving under rule 10 hereof a copy of so much of any completed part of a roll as relates to hereditaments within their area shall cause the values and such other of the particulars of the hereditaments shown in that copy as may be necessary for the purpose of completing the entries in the valuation list to be entered in the valuation list substituting those values and particulars for the values and particulars relating to any of those hereditaments which already appear in the valuation list and shall distinguish each of the hereditaments shown in that copy and so entered in the valuation list by inserting, in addition to the number of the assessment in the valuation list, the letter R and the number of the hereditament in the roll.

Provided—

(a) that in the case of any part of the first roll (i) this Rule shall not operate until the Assessment Committee have received a notification that the part has been revised; and (ii) the entries which are then to be made in the valuation list shall accord with the particulars shown in that part as so revised; and

(b) that, in the case of any hereditament falling to be entered in Part I of the valuation list or, in the case of any hereditament situated in the county of London and falling to be entered in Part II or Part III of the valuation list, it shall not be necessary to make any separate entry of net annual value except where this differs from the corresponding rateable value.

(2) Any particulars of values entered in a valuation list in pursuance of this rule by an assessment committee within the county of London shall be entered in the columns of the valuation list appropriated for values as determined by the assessment committee.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1929. PART VI.

CALCULATION OF GRANTS FOR THIRD FIXED GRANT PERIOD BEGINNING ON APRIL 1ST, 1937.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Section 86 (2) of the Local Government Act, 1929, relating to the determination of the amount of the General Exchequer Contribution for each Fixed Grant Period.

RATING AND VALUATION

2. In accordance with the subsection referred to the Third Fixed Grant Period will commence on April 1st, 1937, and in this connection particulars will be required of the income and expenditure of Local Authorities in England and Wales in the financial year 1935–36. Forms on which the necessary particulars can conveniently be set out have been prescribed by the Minister in the Local Government (Statements of Income and Expenditure, &c.) Regulations, 1936.

A copy of the Regulations and three copies of the Form (a) are enclosed herewith. I am to request that you will be good enough to take steps to ensure that one copy of the form is completed and returned to this Department as soon as possible and in any event not later than the date prescribed in the Regulations, namely, June 30th, 1936.

3. It is appreciated that in order to furnish the completed returns by that date many Local Authorities will be obliged to take special steps to expedite the closing and balancing of their accounts for the year 1935–36. The work which will be entailed in the Department, however, after the receipt of the completed returns, will take a considerable time and the Minister trusts that Local Authorities will co-operate with the Department by furnishing these returns by the due date.

4. It will be observed that the Table on pages 2 and 3 of the Form corresponds with the relevant parts of the Aggregate Rate Fund Account in the Statutory Annual Return of Receipts and Expenditure, except that the entries against Item 1 are to be gross figures and not net expenditure. Thus, the entries in the Form, following the practice adopted in the case of the Statutory Annual Return, will be based upon the accounts of the Authority as normally kept. In this connection, attention is drawn to the Instruction at the head of column 6 of the Form regarding any item of Expenditure or Income relating to a period greater or less than twelve months.

5. In order to enable the "weighted population" of each County and County Borough to be determined (in accordance with the rules contained in Part III of the Fourth Schedule to the Act) for the purpose of the calculation of the grants payable in the Third Fixed Grant Period, provision is made in Statement II of the Form for the insertion, where the Form is completed by a Rating Authority, of particulars of the rateable value of all the hereditaments in the rating area according to the Valuation List in force on April 1st, 1936 (or April 6th, 1936, for Rating Authorities in the County of London). There will be areas in which at the date of completion of the form proceedings affecting the rateable values on April 1st, 1936, or April 6th, 1936, as the case may be, will still be unsettled, and any grant adjustment that may be found necessary as a result of the settlement of those proceedings will be made at a later date.

6. An additional copy of this circular letter, and an additional copy of the Local Government (Statements of Income and Expenditure, &c.) Regulations, 1936, are sent herewith for transmission by you to the Chief Financial Officer of the Council.

Your obedient Servant,

TITHE ACT, 1936.

Rating and Valuation (a).

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw your attention to certain provisions of the Tithe Act, 1936 (b), which received the Royal Assent on July 31st.

Grants as from October 1st, 1936.

2. Consequent upon the extinguishment of tithe rentcharge and the fact that as from October 1st, 1936, tithe rentcharge will no longer be a rateable hereditament, grants will be paid to Rating Authorities in respect of the loss of rate income from tithe rentcharge in accordance with the provisions of Section 25 and the Fifth Schedule. The Act provides that the distribution of these grants shall be made in accordance with directions to be given by the Minister after consultation with the Associations of Local Authorities. A further communication will therefore be addressed to you in due course, but the Minister desires to bring to the notice of Rating Authorities certain matters on which action should in the meantime be taken.

3. The grants to be paid to Rating Authorities in respect of the period beginning October 1st, 1936, will be based on the rate income from tithe rentcharge in respect of the financial year 1935–36. It will clearly be advantageous if any outstanding appeals and proceedings which may affect the rate income from tithe rentcharge in respect of that year are determined as soon as possible, and the Minister will be glad if steps are taken accordingly. A form will be sent to each Rating Authority at a later date for the purpose of the necessary return of rate income from tithe rentcharge in 1935–36.

Grant for half-year ending September 30th, 1936.

4. Section 19 of the Act provides that any tithe rentcharge issuing out of land which was on April 1st, 1936, agricultural land as defined by the Act,* shall be payable at the rate of £91 11*s.* 2*d.* in respect of every £100 par value, instead of at the rate of £105.

5. Section 23 provides that no proceedings for the alteration of the rateable value of such tithe rentcharge on the ground of this reduction shall be entertained but that the amount payable in rates in respect of any such rentcharge for the half-year ending on September 30th, 1936, shall be reduced to seven-eighths of the sum which would otherwise have been payable, and any ratepayer who has paid the rate demanded in respect of such tithe rentcharge in full is entitled to a refund of the overpayment. Grants will be paid in respect of this loss of rate income in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 (d) of the Fifth Schedule.

6. To facilitate a return which will be required in connection with the grants payable in respect of this half-year, any amounts written off or refunded solely in pursuance of these provisions should be entered in a separate column in the rate book or rate-account book.

* For the purposes of the Act "agricultural land" means agricultural land as defined in Section 2 of the Rating and Valuation (Apportionment) Act, 1928, and buildings (including dwelling-houses) occupied together with such land and used primarily in connection with agricultural operations thereon. The relief extends to a tithe rentcharge any part of which issues out of agricultural land so defined.

7. Attention is also drawn to the provisions of Section 32 as to information to be supplied on request to the Commission.* Such information will also be required by [illegible] and their agents in connection with the operation of Sections 19 and 23.

authority to credit in aid of the general rate a greater part than is fixed in the foregoing direction, the part so authorised shall be so credited in respect of that period by that rating authority in lieu of the part fixed in the foregoing direction.

(d) The balance of the tithe grants after deducting the amounts to be credited in aid of the general rate shall, as regards any period after September 30th, 1936, be credited in aid of special rates in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 7 of the Fifth Schedule to the Tithe Act, 1936.

3. The Minister has had under consideration certain points arising out of paragraph 7 of the Fifth Schedule to the Act, and desires to make the following observations. The Minister has no power to give directions in regard to the method in which the part of the tithe grants which is to be credited to the general rate is to be applied to the general rates in the several parts of a Rural District. He is advised, however, that this part of the tithe grant should be applied generally and evenly in aid of the general rate as a whole, i.e., the amount applicable in aid of the general rate in each parish or separately rated area should be at a uniform rate in the pound. The amounts for each part of the District can conveniently be ascertained by apportioning between the several parts of the District the tithe grants applicable to the general rate of the District in proportion to the products of a penny rate for those parts as ascertained in accordance with the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules and before taking into consideration the provisions of paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule to the Act.

4. Under paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule the sum to be credited under the Schedule in aid of any rate is to be taken into account for the purpose of ascertaining the proceeds of that rate, for whatever purpose such ascertainment is required. To enable this process to be carried out in regard to the general rate in respect of each part of the District for which a separate ascertainment is required, the amount of the tithe grant applicable to the general rate of that part of the District, ascertained as indicated in the preceding paragraph, should be added to the net rate income from general rate in that part (i.e., the gross rate income less the cost of collection and the loss on collection) and the result divided by the number of pence in the general rate levied in that part of the District will give the product of a penny rate for precept purposes after taking into consideration the provisions of paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule. A similar procedure should be followed as regards special rates.

5. The equivalent rates in the pound shown in the rate demand notes will be based on the estimated products of a penny rate after taking into consideration the tithe grants. Accordingly no deduction in respect of the tithe grants is required or should be shown in the rate demand notes.

6. The provisions in paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule will entail the crediting of the tithe grants to the Rate Income Account. The Minister considers it desirable that an estimate of the full amount due in respect of the tithe grants for 1936–37 should be made, and this amount brought into account for that year, an account being opened for this purpose with the Minister. It will not be necessary to keep the accounts for 1936–37 open until the amount of the grants is finally ascertained. It will be sufficient if an estimate of the amount due is made on the assumption that the amount recoverable from the Minister in respect of the first half of 1936–37 is the amount which has been allowed or refunded under Section 23 of the Tithe Act, 1936, and that the amount due in respect of the second half of 1936–37 is one-half of the amount collected in respect of rates on tithe rentcharge in 1935–36 as shown in Form H. 279. If the final ascertainment of the amount of grant due in respect of 1936–37 subsequently discloses a figure different from that included in the estimate, the necessary correction will fall to be made in the accounts of the year in which the amount of the grant is finally ascertained.

7. The question has been raised in regard to the effect of paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule to the Tithe Act, 1936, on the limitations imposed by Section 193 of the Local Government Act, 1933, in connection with the sums to be raised to meet the expenses of parish councils. The Minister is advised that the amounts calculated on rateable value in the manner set out in that Section are not the proceeds of a rate for purposes of paragraph 9 of the Fifth Schedule to the Tithe Act, 1936, and accordingly the tithe grants will not be taken into account in determining the maximum sums which can be raised to meet the expenses of parish councils under that Section.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT (ADJUSTMENT OF GAINS AND LOSSES IN COUNTY DISTRICTS) REGULATIONS, 1937,* DATED JULY 28TH, 1937, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 94 (1) (d) OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACT, 1929.

The Minister of Health, in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of section 94 of the Local Government Act, 1929, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following regulations:

1. These regulations may be cited as the Local Government (Adjustment of Gains and Losses in County Districts) Regulations, 1937, and shall have effect in relation to the years of the third and subsequent fixed grant periods.

2.—(1) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

(2) In these regulations unless the context otherwise requires the following expressions have the meanings hereby assigned to them—

"the Act of 1929" means the Local Government Act, 1929;

"the Act of 1937" means the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1937 (a);

"rating area" has the same meaning as in the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (b);

"minor separately rated area" means an area, being a part only of a rating area, which was in the calculations made under section 94 of the Act of 1929 treated as a separately rated area or under regulations made by the Minister under paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of section 108 of the Act of 1929 is to be deemed to be a separately rated area;

"alteration" means any alteration or combination of authorities or alteration of boundaries (including the formation of a new county district and the conversion of a rural district into or so as to form part of an urban district or of an urban district into or so as to form part of a rural district) taking effect on or after the first day of April, 1930;

"altered district" means a county district affected by an alteration, as constituted immediately after the date on which the alteration takes effect and includes a newly constituted county district;

"capitation sum" means, in relation to any county district, the sum which, under section 91 of the Act of 1929, is to be calculated on the basis of the estimated population of the district;

"added amount" and "deducted amount" mean, respectively, in relation to any minor separately rated area for the purpose of the application of these regulations in respect of any year, the amount (as varied by any order made or direction given by the Minister in the exercise of the powers conferred upon him by section 6 of the Act of 1937) which is for that year, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (1) of section 94 of the Act of 1929 to be added to, and the amount which, under the provisions aforesaid, would, but for the proviso to sub-paragraph (ii) of paragraph (c) of that subsection, be deducted from, the capitation sum of a county district in respect of that area ;

" product of a penny rate " means, in relation to any district or minor separately rated area, the amount produced by a rate of one penny in the pound in that district or area as the case may be, calculated in accordance with the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1929 (a) ;

" area proportion of the capitation sum " means, in relation to a minor separately rated area in a county district, a sum calculated for each year by the council of the district, bearing the same proportion to the capitation sum of the district for the year as the product of a penny rate in that minor separately rated area bears to the product of a penny rate in the district for that year.

3. In the case of a county district in which there are no minor separately rated areas, the General Exchequer Grant of the council of the district (other than such portion thereof as is applicable in respect of losses on account of special or parish rates) shall, in each year, be applied in aid of the general rate over the whole district.

4. Subject to the provisions hereinafter in these regulations contained, in the case of a county district in which there are minor separately rated areas the council of the district shall for each year apply in aid of so much of the general rate as is levied in each such area—

(a) in the case of a district in which there are no minor separately rated areas in respect of which a deducted amount has been determined by the Minister, a sum equivalent to the added amount of the area determined by the Minister, and

(b) in any other case, a sum equivalent to the area proportion of the capitation sum for the year, increased or decreased, as the case may require, by the added amount or the deducted amount of the area determined by the Minister, and apply the balance (if any) of the General Exchequer Grant of the council (other than such portion thereof as is applicable in respect of losses on account of special or parish rates) in aid of the general rate over the whole district :

Provided that, where an alteration takes effect in any year on a date other than the first day of April, the sums to be applied for that year under the foregoing provisions of this regulation shall be subject to such adjustments as the Minister may think appropriate, having regard to the date on which the alteration takes effect.

5. If in a county district there is a minor separately rated area in respect of which the deducted amount exceeds the area proportion of the capitation sum, or if in the case of any altered district the Minister, being of opinion that for the better securing of the objects of section 94 of the Act of 1929 it is expedient that this regulation should apply in relation to the district, shall so direct, the provisions of regulation 4 of these regulations shall not apply, but the council of such district shall, in each year, out of the General Exchequer Grant of the council, apply in aid of so much of the general rate as is levied in any minor separately rated area in the district such sum (calculated in such manner appropriate to the case as the Minister may think desirable in order that the objects of section 94 of the Act of 1929 may be effected) as the Minister may direct in relation to that year and that area, and shall apply the balance (if any) of the General Exchequer Grant of the council (other than such portion thereof as is applicable in respect of losses on account of special or parish rates) in aid of the general rate over the whole district.

6. If the council of a county district are satisfied that, if full effect were given to the foregoing provisions of these regulations, the poundage of the rate to be levied in each minor separately rated area within the district would not vary by more than one penny from the poundage of the rate which would be required to be levied in each such area if the whole of the General Exchequer Grant of the council (other than such portion thereof as is applicable in respect of losses on account of special or parish rates) were applied in aid of the general rate over the whole district, they may by

7.—(1) If in any year no part of a county district (not being a district containing one or more minor separately rated areas which were separately charged in the standard year with expenses on a transferred service) would but for the foregoing provisions of these regulations be separately rated save in respect of expenses falling to be borne by special rates or parish rates, the General Exchequer Grant of the council of the district (other than such portion thereof as is applicable in respect of losses on account of special or parish rates) may, if the council think fit, be applied in aid of the general rate over the whole district.

(2) If in any year in a county district some but not all of the expenses (other than expenses falling to be borne by special rates or parish rates) or, in the case of a district containing one or more minor separately rated areas which were separately charged in the standard year with expenses on a transferred service, all the expenses (other than expenses falling to be borne by special rates or parish rates) which were in the standard year charged on a part or parts only of the district cease to be so charged, the council of the district may prepare and submit to the Minister proposals for applying in that year and in subsequent years the General Exchequer Grant of the council of the district in such a manner as will take account of such cessation of separate charges (other than charges in respect of expenses on a transferred service) and the Minister may approve such proposals either with or without modification and the council shall give effect to any proposals so approved.

(3) Nothing done under or in pursuance of this regulation shall be taken into account for the purpose of making any calculation or adjustment to be made by the Minister under section 94 of the Act of 1929.

Whereas by subsection (2) of section 9 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, every council of a county is required in any precept issued in respect of any period beginning on or after the 1st day of April, 1929, to state the amount in the pound which they require the rating authority to levy for their purposes, and by subsection (3) of the said section the provisions of the said subsection (2) may be applied to precepts issued by any other authority;

And whereas by the said subsections every rating authority is required to transmit to every authority having power to issue to that rating authority precepts to which subsection (2) for the time being applies an estimate of the amount, calculated in the prescribed manner, which would be produced in the next financial year by a rate of a penny in the pound levied in the rating area of that authority, and it is further provided that the amount due under any precept so issued shall be ascertained in the prescribed manner;

And whereas it is desirable, except as hereinafter mentioned, to rescind the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1929 (a), as amended by the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Amendment Rules, 1933 (b) in view of the repeal of the proviso to paragraph (c) of subsection (2) of section 9 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925 (c);

RATING AND VALUATION

And whereas it is provided by subsection (4) of the said section that rules made for the purposes of that section shall make provision with respect to certain specified matters and to any other matters for which it may appear necessary to make provision in order to carry the said section into effect;

And whereas by section 58 of the said Act it is provided that the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities, with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe anything which by the Act is to be prescribed:

Now, therefore, the Minister of Health, after such consultation as is mentioned above, by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the said sections 9 and 58, and of all powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following rules—

1.—(1) These rules may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1938, and shall come into operation on the date hereof and shall have effect for the purposes of any precept issued by a precepting authority in respect of a period beginning on or after the 1st day of April, 1937.

(2) In these rules, unless the context otherwise requires—

"the Act" means the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925;

"rate" means a general rate;

"precepting authority" means the council of a county, and any other authority issuing precepts to which the provisions of subsection (2) of section 9 of the Act for the time being apply;

"product of a penny rate" means the amount produced by a rate of one penny in the pound;

"poundage" means in relation to any rate the amount assessed by that rate (including any additional item thereof) in respect of each pound of rateable value;

"gross rate income" means in relation to a rating area, or part of a rating area, and in relation to a financial year, the total of the gross amounts appearing in the rate book as assessed in respect of hereditaments in that area, or part of an area, by the rate or rates (including additional items) made in respect of that year, or any portion thereof, increased by—

(a) the amounts of any payments receivable in respect of that year under section 2 (7) of the Act, or under section 133 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (a), as the case may be, and of any contributions made by the Crown; and

(b) any amounts found during that year to be recoverable under section 36 (2) of the Act, whether by virtue of section 37 (10) of the Act or otherwise, or under or by virtue of section 12 (6) of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (b), or in respect of rates previously written off as irrecoverable;

"cost of collection" means—

(i) in relation to a rating area as a whole, the net cost of making, collecting and recovering rates during a financial year, including a proper proportion of such expenses as are attributable in part to the matters aforesaid and in part to the making, collection or recovery of special rates, or to other matters, but not including any proportion of any allowances made to owners or occupiers, or any expenses incurred in connection with the preparation of valuation lists; and

(ii) in relation to a part of a rating area, the sum which bears to the cost of collection in the rating area the same proportion as the total rateable value of that part of the area bears to the total rateable value of the whole area at the commencement of the financial year;

"loss on collection" means, in relation to a rating area or part of a rating area, and in relation to a financial year, the total amount written off during that year in the rate book as irrecoverable in respect of hereditaments in that area or part, whether in respect of a current rate or in respect of arreas of any previous rate, exclusive of any allowances made to owners or occupiers under section 8 of the Act, but including all other allowances, commissions, and abatements;

" precept " means a precept which requires a rating authority to levy a rate of a specified poundage;

" financial officer " means the chief officer charged with the duty of keeping the accounts of a rating authority.

2. The financial officer of every rating authority shall as soon as may be after the close of a financial year calculate in accordance with the directions hereinafter contained the product of a penny rate during that year in the rating area and, where a precept is issuable by a precepting authority in respect of a portion only of the rating area, the product of a penny rate during that year in such portion.

3. Subject as hereinafter provided, the product of a penny rate in any rating area or in any portion thereof, as the case may be, shall be calculated by deducting from the gross rate income of the financial year the cost of collection and the loss on collection, and by dividing the remainder (which sum is hereinafter referred to as " the total rate product ") by the number of pence representing the total poundage of the rate or rates:

Provided that if the poundage of the rate or rates of the financial year is not the same throughout the area or portion, as the case may be, the financial officer shall in the first instance calculate the product of a penny rate separately for each part in which a different poundage has been levied, and the product of a penny rate in the area or portion shall be taken to be the sum of the products of penny rates in the several parts comprised therein.

4. The amount due under a precept shall be taken to be the product of a penny rate in the rating area or in that portion thereof which is included in the area of the precepting authority, as the case may be, multiplied by the number of pence specified in the precept.

5. The financial officer of every rating authority shall as soon as may be after the close of a financial year ascertain, in accordance with the provisions of the last preceding rule, the total amount due in respect of that financial year under the precepts issued by a precepting authority to the rating authority; and, if the total amount so ascertained to be due exceeds the aggregate of the instalments required by such precepts to be paid on account thereof, the rating authority shall, save as hereinafter provided, forthwith pay the balance to the precepting authority:

Provided that the rating authority, subject to their obligation to pay in full the aggregate of the instalments required by the precepts, may defer payment of any sum not exceeding that which bears to the total amount due under the precepts the same proportion as the amount of arrears carried forward at the close of the financial year to which the precepts relate and for the time being still outstanding bears to the total rate product for that financial year.

6.—(1) The estimate of the product of a penny rate in the next ensuing financial year which a rating authority is required to transmit to a precepting authority before the first day of February in each calendar year shall be made in accordance with the principles of these rules as to the method of ascertaining the product of a penny rate.

(2) The financial officer in so framing the estimate shall take the latest ascertained figures available for the rating area or portion thereof, as the case may be, and shall modify those figures to such extend as appears to him to be necessary having regard to any alteration in total rateable value which may reasonably be anticipated and to any other material circumstances.

7. There shall be included in the accounts to be submitted by a rating authority to the district auditor the calculations required by these rules for the determination of the product of a penny rate in the rating area, or in any part thereof during the financial year and of the amount due under any precept issued to the authority in respect of that year, or any part thereof; and the auditor's certificate allowing the accounts shall be construed as a certificate that, subject to any amendments made by him, such calculations have been properly and correctly made, and any necessary consequential adjustments shall be made in the accounts between the rating authority and the precepting authority.

RATING AND VALUATION

8. The Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Rules, 1929, as amended by the Rating and Valuation Act (Product of Rates and Precepts) Amendment Rules, 1933 shall continue to apply to any precept issued in respect of any period ending on or before the 31st day of March, 1937, but subject to such continued application those Rules are hereby rescinded.

Given under the official seal of the Minister of Health, this thirty-first day of March in the year One thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
28th March, 1938.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to the decision of the Government, announced by him in the House of Commons on February 17th last, to postpone for two years the operation of the third new valuation lists which under the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, would have taken effect on April 1st, 1939. The necessary legislation has been laid before Parliament (a).

The Minister has received a number of enquiries from local authorities and others as to the action which they should, in view of this decision, immediately take, and having received the views of the Central Valuation Committee in the matter, the Minister thinks it desirable even at the present stage to make the following observations for the consideration of the local authority.

As was stated, the decision to postpone the operation of the lists was based upon the fact that complaints were being made on an extensive scale that the application of the existing law in the matter would lead to hardship, and upon the desirability of affording adequate time for the investigation of the validity of those complaints and the formulation of a suitable remedy if one should be found to be necessary.

It will be clear to the local authorities that any such investigation will be considerably hampered unless there can be produced definite statements of fact as to the effect of the existing law not only in relation to the alteration of the assessment of individual properties or classes of property, but also in relation to such changes in rate poundages as would be effected, as a result of the revaluation, apart from any increase or decrease of the expenditure of the local authorities.

It will, however, be possible to form a reasonably clear and definite view of the matter in the light of provisional revised lists of assessments made on a uniform basis under the existing law.

These provisional lists can best be prepared by proceeding with the preparations for revaluation which have already been commenced by many local authorities. The work involved will not require to be duplicated to any appreciable extent for the purposes of revaluation as from the new date, and the Minister trusts that local authorities will generally in this way test the soundness as regards the facts of their own area of the allegations of hardship that have been made and assist in securing that the proposed investigation is carried out on a sound basis.

The Minister would also observe that if the two years of postponement (a) are used to the fullest extent the result should be not only the clearing up of the question of (a) The Rating and Valuation (Postponement of Valuations) Act, 1938; 31 Halsbury's Statutes 613, is not printed in extenso in this work, but see references indexed at p. cxvii of Vol. II. hardship but the establishment of such a degree of uniformity as might otherwise not have been obtained for a number of years, and a considerable saving of the cost and labour of future revaluations.

A copy of the letter of the Central Valuation Committee conveying to the Minister the suggestion upon which the Government's decision was based is appended for the information of the local authority.

Further copies of this Circular may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at the addresses mentioned on the back of the Circular.

Director, Local Government Division.

APPENDIX.

CENTRAL VALUATION COMMITTEE.

NEW PUBLIC OFFICES,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
12th February, 1938.

RATING AND VALUATION ACTS, 1925–37.

THIRD NEW VALUATION LISTS.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Central Valuation Committee to state that, as the Minister of Health is aware they have had under consideration the position which has arisen by reason of the pressure now being put upon local authorities in some parts of the country with the object of dissuading them from carrying out the duty laid upon them by Parliament in the Rating and Valuation Acts, 1925–37, of making a third new valuation list which shall be in accord with the provisions of those Acts. The Committee are of opinion that while some local authorities will resist the pressure others may succumb to it. There may thus be created, as between different localities, a greater lack of uniformity in valuation than exists at the present time, and consequently the intention of Parliament that uniformity in valuation shall be promoted throughout each rating area, throughout each administrative county, and throughout the whole of England and Wales may be frustrated.

2. Among other contentions brought to our notice it is urged that in many areas the supply of houses (especially of houses available for letting) is still insufficient to meet the demand; that the rents now obtained for such houses as are available for letting are higher than would be the case if there were a normal relationship between supply and demand; and that consequently an application of the statutory definition of "gross value" in present circumstances would result in such increases in existing assessments as would give rise to hardship among certain classes of ratepayers.

3. Uniformity of valuation is essential within each rating area in order that rates may be properly and fairly charged upon the several ratepayers in such manner that there shall be demanded from each of them the sum he ought to pay—neither more nor less; it is essential within each administrative county in order that the several rating areas shall be called upon to pay the sum that each ought to contribute towards county expenditure—neither more nor less; and it is essential throughout England and Wales in order that a foundation may be laid for such a reform of the Government Grant system as shall ensure that that system shall operate fairly as between the several counties and county boroughs. These are severely practical objects and the Committee remain convinced that their attainment at the earliest practicable moment is a vital necessity.

4. Whilst not expressing any views upon the allegation of hardship, the Committee feel, having regard to the number of representations which have been made, that it is very desirable that the allegation should be investigated and that if it is found to be justified the appropriate remedy should be found. Consequently, of the suggestions made to them for their consideration, they would prefer that, in order to give time for such an investigation, legislation should be introduced to provide for the postponement of the coming into operation of the third new valuation lists under the Act of 1925 until April 1st, 1941. If so desired by the Minister, the Committee would, of course, be willing to give any assistance within their power in the matter.

5. The Minister will appreciate that it is very desirable that a public notification of any decision at which the Government may arrive on this question should be made and, on the completion of a roll, to the assessment committee of every assessment area (being a county, assessment area or rating area within which the transport undertaking is carried on), such information as to the contents of the roll as may be prescribed to be sent to the Board, county valuation committees, assessment committees and rating authorities respectively; and that every rating authority shall forthwith give such notice as to the receipt of, and afford such facilities for the inspection of, that information as may be prescribed;

And whereas section 12 (1) of the adapted Act requires that, so soon as an assessment committee have received from the Authority notice that a roll has been completed and information as to the contents thereof, they shall cause the values entered in the roll, and such of the other particulars entered therein as may be prescribed, to be entered in the valuation list in substitution for values or particulars appearing in that list;

And whereas by section 23 (1) of the adapted Act the expression "prescribed" when used in that Act means "prescribed by rules made under the Rating and Valuation Acts" and by section 58 (1) of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, the Minister of Health, after consultation with any local authority or association of local authorities with whom consultation appears to him to be desirable, may by rules prescribe anything which by that Act is to be prescribed and the form of any rate, demand note, valuation list, statement, return or other document whatsoever which is required or authorised to be used under or for the purposes of that Act:

Now therefore the Minister of Health after such consultation as aforesaid and by virtue of the powers conferred upon him by the recited enactments and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf hereby makes the following rules:

1.—(1) These rules may be cited as the Rating and Valuation Acts (London Passenger Transport Valuation Roll) Rules, 1938.

(2) In these rules unless the context otherwise requires—

"parish" includes any part of a parish being either a contributory place or an area otherwise subject to separate or differential rating;

"valuation list" includes a draft valuation list;

"the Authority" means the Railway Assessment Authority;

other expressions have the same meanings as in the Rating and Valuation Acts, 1925 to 1932, or in the Rating and Valuation (Metropolis) Acts, 1869 to 1930, as the case may be; any reference to a county valuation committee shall in relation to London be construed as a reference to the London County Council.

2. A roll shall be in the form in Schedule A hereto or in a form substantially to the like effect.

3. A roll shall be divided into two sections, namely section A, in which shall be entered particulars with respect to the transport undertaking as a whole, and section B, in which shall be entered particulars with respect to every transport hereditament occupied by the Board such hereditaments being entered in separate divisions, namely (I) hereditaments other than industrial and freight-transport hereditaments, (II) industrial hereditaments and (III) freight-transport hereditaments.

4. The hereditaments falling to be entered in any division of section B of a roll shall be entered in such order as the Authority may think convenient, provided that all the entries in any division relating to hereditaments within the same metropolitan borough, county borough, administrative county, rating area, or parish shall be grouped together.

5. The Authority shall cause entries to be made in the columns of a roll in accordance with the headings thereto contained in Schedule A hereto and in such manner as will facilitate the making of the necessary entries in the valuation lists in accordance with the statutory provisions applicable thereto.

6. A roll shall be certified on completion or revision by a declaration in the form shown in Schedule B hereto.

7. Every correction, insertion, alteration or amendment made in a roll after it has been revised by the Authority shall be authenticated by the clerk of the Authority or such other officer of the Authority as may be duly authorised in that behalf and the clerk or officer shall for that purpose enter the date and his initials accordingly in the columns provided for that purpose.

8. Immediately before the certification of a roll, the Authority shall cause summaries to be prepared so as to show (a) in respect of each rating area and (b) in respect of the Board as a whole the total net annual value and the total rateable value of all the transport hereditaments entered therein as being within that area or occupied by the Board, and whenever any correction, insertion, alteration or amendment is made in a roll after it has been revised they shall cause the necessary corrections to be made in the totals.

9. When the Authority have (i) settled a draft of a roll, or (ii) completed a roll, they shall send—

(a) to the Board, a copy of the draft of the roll, or a copy of the roll as completed, as the case may be ;

(b) to the county valuation committee of every county and to the council of every county borough within which the undertaking is carried on, a copy of so much of the draft of the roll, or of the roll as completed, as the case may be, as comprises section A of the roll and so much of section B of the roll as relates to hereditaments within the county or county borough ;

(c) to the rating authority of every rating area (other than a county borough) within which the undertaking is carried on, a copy of so much of section B of the draft of the roll, or of the roll as completed, as the case may be, as relates to hereditaments within that area ; and

(d) to every assessment committee within whose area the undertaking is carried on, a copy of so much of section B of the roll as completed as relates to hereditaments within the area of the assessment committee.

10. Every rating authority (including the council of a county borough) on receiving any document or documents sent to them under rule 9 hereof shall deposit the document or documents (or, in the case of the council of a county borough, so much of the documents as relates to section B of the roll) at their offices and shall forthwith publish a notice in the manner provided by section 46 of the Rating and Valuation Act, 1925, indicating where and at what times the document or documents (or, as the case may be, so much thereof as aforesaid) may be inspected. CIRCULAR 1743.

Non-County Borough Councils.
Urban and Rural District Councils
(England and Wales).

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
GREAT WESTMINSTER HOUSE,
HORSEFERRY ROAD,
LONDON, S.W.1.
31*st October*, 1938.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ACTS, 1929 AND 1937.

MODIFICATION OF PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE SUPPLEMENTARY EXCHEQUER GRANTS OF COUNTY DISTRICTS.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward for your information and guidance a copy of the Local Government (Losing Areas in County Districts) (Third Fixed Grant Period) (a) Provisional Regulations, 1938, which he has made in exercise of the powers conferred on him by subsection (3) of section 6 of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1937, after consultation with the County Councils Association, the Association of Municipal Corporations, the Urban District Councils Association and the Rural District Councils Association.

2. It will be seen that the regulations relate to two matters, namely:

(a) the substitution in certain cases (under section 6 (1) of the 1937 Act) of an annual rate of reduction of 1/30th for the annual rate of reduction of 1/15th provided for in section 94 (1) (b) of the 1929 Act, and

(b) the making good in certain cases (under section 6 (2)) of the loss suffered by the annual reductions of the remaining 1/30th.

3. The Minister wishes to direct special attention to the following points:

(a) As regards the first matter referred to in the preceding paragraph the Regulations are, by the provisions of Regulation 1, limited in their application to the third fixed grant period, i.e., to the five years which began on April 1st, 1937, and as regards the second matter, to the "remaining years" of that grant period, i.e., to the three years beginning on April 1st, 1939.

(b) The "adjusting sum" of an area is, in terms of rate poundage, the primary factor in determining whether or not there is in respect of any separately rated area a prima facie case for consideration by the Minister and is defined in Regulation 2. Under that definition the Minister, in considering an application, will have regard to the area to which the sum was applied in 1937–38, and not to the area on which it was originally calculated on the basis of "standard year" conditions.

(c) The references in paragraph 2 (c) of Part I of the Schedule and in paragraph 2 of Part II to the "total poundages of all rates" will enable the poundage of any special rates in rural districts as well as the general rate to be taken into account. The poundages will be calculated by adding to the uniform general rate the general rate which would produce an amount equivalent to the sums levied by additional items of the general rate and by any special rates.

4. In order to facilitate consideration by the Minister of applications under the Regulations a form of application has been prepared which makes provision for the supply of the particulars which are required in order that he may satisfy himself that the prescribed conditions are complied with. Application should therefore be made for one of these forms by any County District Council which considers that within its District there is comprised an area to which either Part I or Part II of the Schedule of Conditions applies and which desires to make an application under the terms of the Regulations. Any such application should be submitted not later than November 30th, 1938.

An additional copy of this letter and an additional copy of the Regulations are enclosed for the use of the Chief Financial Officer of the Council. Further copies of the Regulations may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown at the end of the Regulations.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
S. H. G. HUGHES.

Whereas by sub-section (1) of section 5 of the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 (hereinafter referred to as "the empowering enactment") it is enacted as follows:—

> "Subject to the provisions of this section a county council or other highway authority may by resolution prescribe in relation to either side of any part of a highway maintainable by them a frontage line for building (in this section referred to as "a building line"):
> (a) the Minister may by order direct that a building line shall not be prescribed under this section in relation to any class of road classified by him under sub-section (2) of section 17 of the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, until notification of the building line proposed has been sent to him and his observations with respect thereto have been considered":

Now therefore the Minister in exercise of the power given to him by the empowering enactment, and without prejudice to any further exercise of such power, hereby orders as follows:—

1. The Minister directs that a building line shall not be prescribed under the empowering enactment in relation to any road which, at the time when the building line is proposed, is classified by him either as a Class I. road, or as a Class II. road, until notification of the building line proposed has been sent to him and his observations with respect thereto have been considered.

MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT,
ROADS DEPARTMENT,

SECTION 17 (2) MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT ACT, 1919.

GRANTS FROM THE ROAD FUND IN RESPECT OF SURVEYORS' TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Transport to inform you that grants from the Road Fund towards the travelling expenses of Highway Surveyors whose salaries and travelling expenses have been approved for a contribution under Section 17 (2) of the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, will be subject to the following revised conditions as from April 1st, 1934 (May 16th, 1934, Scotland):

(a) Where the Surveyor performs duties additional to those of Road Surveyor, a proportion only of any travelling allowance paid to the Surveyor in connection with the duties will be accepted for grant, the proportion being such as the Minister can approve as being a reasonable allowance for highway duties.

(b) Where the Council provide and maintain a motor car or cycle for the Surveyor's use, the grant will be based on such proportion of the Council's actual expenditure in maintaining and running the vehicle as may be approved by the Minister as applicable to duties as Road Surveyor. The wages paid to a chauffeur will not be admissible for grant, nor the capital cost of any vehicle, but a reasonable charge for depreciation will be accepted as part of the maintenance costs.

(c) In normal circumstances, grants from the Road Fund made under paragraphs (a) and (b) above will not exceed 50 per cent., of an amount calculated on the appropriate mileage rate in the following scale:

Scale.	Rate per mile.
Motor cycles with or without sidecar	2¼d.
Tricars and four-wheeled motor cars up to and including 8 h.p.	2¾d.
Four-wheeled motor cars over 8 h.p. and up to and including 10 h.p.	3½d.
Four-wheeled motor cars over 10 h.p. and up to and including 12 h.p.	4d.
Four-wheeled motor cars over 12 h.p., 4½d. for first 8,000 miles travelled in the year; 4d. for mileage travelled in excess of 8,000 miles.

(Notes.—The rate of allowance for motor cycles is not applicable to motor-assisted bicycles, pedal-assisted motor cycles or vehicles of a similar type, for which a higher rate than 1½d. will not be allowed.

Horse-power.—The basis of calculation will be the horse-power as reckoned for taxation purposes.

The rates quoted are fixed to cover running costs, repairs, insurance, licensing and depreciation, and may be subject to revision from time to time.

As the grant is subject to a maximum rate per mile, it is necessary that a daily log be kept. It is appreciated that the allocation of mileage between highways and other duties may in some cases present difficulty. In such cases the Minister will be prepared to accept an allocation of mileage in the proportion which the salary accepted for grant for highway duties bears to the total salary of the Surveyor.)

(d) Where the Council hire a motor car for the Surveyor's use, the grant will be based on the proportion of the hiring charges applicable to the Surveyor's duties in connection with highways, subject to the Minister's prior approval of the terms upon which the motor car is hired.

(e) Railway or other fares incurred in connection with duties as Road Surveyor will be accepted for grant, but no contribution can be made in respect of subsistence expenses.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
CYRIL HURCOMB,
Secretary.

To the Clerk to the Council,
To the Town Clerk.

1. These Regulations may be cited as "The London Traffic (Miscellaneous Provisions) Consolidation Provisional Regulations, 1934".

2. For the purpose of these Regulations, unless the context otherwise requires, the expression "owner or driver of a vehicle" means owner, driver or other person in control or in charge of the vehicle and the word "street" includes part of a street.

3. The Regulations specified in the Sixth Schedule to these Regulations are hereby revoked.

(i) That no person shall be convicted under this Regulation if he satisfies the Court (a) that he has taken all reasonable steps to put and maintain the vehicle in a proper condition or to prevent its being overloaded as the case may be, or (b) that the offence was committed on the express instructions of some person with whose orders he was bound to comply in the course of his employment.

(ii) That no proceedings under this Regulation shall be commenced until three days after notice has been given to the defendant that such proceedings will be taken. It shall not be necessary, however, to give such notice in writing.

7. It shall be the duty of the owner and of the driver or of any other person in control or in charge of a broken down vehicle in a street within the London Traffic Area to remove or to take all reasonable steps to secure the removal of such vehicle as soon as practicable from any such street.

8. A police constable in uniform, if he is of opinion that the owner or driver of a broken down vehicle in any such street has failed to take all necessary steps to remove such vehicle or to cause the same to be removed in accordance with Regulation 7 hereof, or if he is of opinion that the vehicle constitutes a danger to traffic, may forthwith remove the vehicle, or use the services of any other person or persons to remove the same, in such manner and to such place as he may think fit, and for this purpose may provide and use any plant and apparatus and take all other steps which he may consider necessary.

9. When any police constable removes any broken down vehicle or uses the services of any other person or persons to remove the same in accordance with Regulation 8 hereof—

(1) the expenses of and incidental to such removal shall be recoverable summarily as a civil debt by or on behalf of the police authority from the owner of the vehicle;

(2) except upon proof of failure to exercise reasonable care, neither the constable, nor any person whose services are used by him as aforesaid, shall be liable to any action or demand whatsoever for the recovery of any alleged damage to such vehicle or otherwise in respect of the removal thereof.

10. If any person acts in contravention of, or fails to carry out his duty under, any of the provisions of this Part of these Regulations, he shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £5.

PART III.

Lighting and Guarding of Street Works.

13. When any materials, rubbish or other thing (hereinafter referred to as an obstruction) are placed upon or any opening or excavation (hereinafter referred to as an excavation) is made in the carriageway of any street within the London Traffic Area so as to obstruct or endanger the passage of traffic over any part of such carriageway it shall be the duty of the person by whose order or under whose direction such obstruction or excavation exists to—

16. Where any excavation, whether made in connection with a tramway or light ·ailway or otherwise, is not clearly visible for a distance of 25 yards to traffic ıpproaching from any direction on any part of the carriageway of the road in which :he excavation exists or of any road entering or intersecting such road, there shall be placed on the kerb, or on the edge of any such road from which the excavation is not so visible on the nearside of traffic approaching the excavation a warning notice or warning notices of the existence of such excavation, and any such notice or notices shall be placed at a distance of 25 yards, or as near thereto as may be practicable, from the excavation; provided that notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained in the case of an entering or intersecting road such notice or notices shall be placed at a distance not less than 10 yards from the junction of such road with the road in which the excavation exists.

19. If any person acts in contravention of or fails to carry out his duty under any of the provisions of this part of these Regulations, he shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £5.

20. Any person who has charge of a lamp or lamps provided in pursuance of this part of these Regulations and who fails to keep such lamp or lamps properly lighted at any time during the required period shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £5.

21. The provisions of any Act (whether public, general or local or private) byelaws or regulations dealing with the same subject matter as this part of these Regulations, and the provisions of any Act conferring power of making byelaws or regulations dealing with the same subject matter as this part of these Regulations, shall, so far as such provisions apply to any carriageway in any street to which this part of these Regulations apply, be suspended so long as this part of these Regulations remains in force. Provided that nothing contained in this part of these Regulations shall exempt any person from any liability for causing any obstruction or making any excavation nor free him from any obligation imposed upon him to obtain any consents which may be necessary before making any obstruction or excavation nor from any obligation to fence or otherwise render safe any obstruction or excavation.

PART IV.

Traffic Notices.

22. The expression "traffic notice" in this Part of these Regulations means any sign or notice erected or exhibited in or near any street within the London Traffic Area which gives or purports to give any directions or warnings to traffic in any street and includes any colourable imitation of a traffic notice as herein defined which is used by way of advertisement, or otherwise, but does not include any notices solely concerning traffic upon any private premises or the methods of ingress to or egress from such premises.

23. The Minister, if satisfied upon the Report of the Chief Officer of Police, that any traffic notice erected or exhibited within the London Traffic Area is undesirable, may cause notice in writing to be served upon the person responsible for the erection or exhibition of such traffic notice or upon the owner, occupier or lessee of the land or premises upon which such traffic notice is erected or exhibited requiring the traffic notice to be removed within the time specified in such notice and thereupon the person named in the notice shall remove or cause to be removed such traffic notice.

24. If any person fails to remove any traffic notice as required by any notice served upon such person under Regulation 23 hereof, he shall be guilty of an offence under this Part of these Regulations and shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine of £5, and if such person has been served with a notice of the offence in the form prescribed in the First Schedule hereto signed by the Chief Officer of Police of the Police area within which such traffic notice is situated, he shall be liable to a further fine of £2 for each day the offence has continued after the receipt of such notice. Provided that no person shall be convicted under this Regulation if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he is not legally entitled to remove the traffic notice required by such notice as aforesaid to be removed.

25. Every notice which may be served under this Part of these Regulations may be served either by delivering it or leaving it at the usual or last known place of abode or office of the person on whom it is to be served, or by sending it by post addressed to him at his usual or last known place of abode or office, or if that cannot be found by fixing it on some conspicuous part of the land or premises upon which the traffic notice in question is erected or exhibited, and any such notice or document may be addressed as the case may require to the "owner" "occupier" or "lessee" of the land or premises (describing it or them) without further name or description.

PART V.

Reversing in Streets, Advertising in Streets and Exceptional Loads.

26. In this Part of these Regulations unless the contrary appears the expression "any scheduled street" means any street which is a thoroughfare within the area described in Part I, or is named in Part II of the Second Schedule to these Regulations (a).

(a) The scheduled streets are all or almost all within the County of London, and therefore outside the scope of this work, but Part V of the regulations themselves is retained as a whole by reason of Regulation 30.

27. No person shall in any scheduled street while turning or attempting to turn any vehicle so as to face in the opposite direction to that in which it was proceeding, cause that vehicle to move backwards, so as to obstruct or to be likely to obstruct the flow of traffic in that street.

(ii) carry in any way any article which exceeds 36 feet in length ; or

(iii) use any vehicle drawn by more than four horses ; or

(iv) use any vehicle with a load which exceeds 8 feet 6 inches in width overall.

Provided that, notwithstanding anything in this Regulation contained, it shall be lawful for the Commissioner of Police of the City of London or the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, as the case may be, to give permission in writing to any person applying for the same, for such cause as may seem to him proper, for such deviation from the provisions of this Regulation, or any of them, and on such occasion as shall be specified in the written permission aforesaid.

(b) Nothing in this Regulation shall be taken to apply at any time to any vehicle or article constructed for and used by a Fire Brigade for the purposes of or in connection with the extinguishing of fires.

30. It shall be lawful for the Minister of Transport, from time to time as occasion may require, by notice in the London Gazette, to apply any or all of the Regulations of this Part of these Regulations to any or all of the streets named in Part III of the Second Schedule, either generally or for such time as may be specified in the notice aforesaid.

31.—(1) For so long as this Part of these Regulations remains in force subsections (1) and (2) of section 16 of the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867 (a) shall be modified so as to have effect as though the words " thirty-six feet " were substituted for the words " thirty-five feet " in each of those subsections.

(2) Save as aforesaid, the provisions of this Part of these Regulations are in addition to, and not in derogation of, the provisions of any Act of Parliament (whether public, general, local or private) or of any byelaws or regulations made thereunder dealing with the same subject matter as this Part of these Regulations.

32. If any person acts in contravention of any of the provisions of this Part of these Regulations he shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £5.

(b) between the hours of ten in the morning and seven in the evening in any of the streets set out in Part II of the said Schedule.

This Regulation shall not apply to any vehicle used solely for collecting street refuse arising from the cleansing of any such street.

36. If any person acts in contravention of the provisions of Regulation 35 hereof he shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £2.

MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT,
WHITEHALL GARDENS,
LONDON, S.W.1.
19*th August*, 1936.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT: GRANTS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Transport to request you to inform the Council that he is now prepared to consider applications for grants out of the Road Fund towards certain classes of expenditure incurred by highway authorities in the exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a).

(2) Section 1.—Where compensation becomes payable by reason of the coming into force of restrictions under Section 1 of the Act the Minister will consider applications for grant based on the amount of compensation as agreed by the District Valuer or, failing agreement, determined by arbitration.

The rates of grant, varying from 33⅓ per cent. to 85 per cent., will be determined by the classification of the road, the nature of the layout for which provision is made by the standard width adopted, and the grouping of the authority for the purpose of grants to works of improvement as set out in Circular Letter No. 466 (Roads) dated May 9th, 1936. The several rates are set out in the Table I appended to this letter.

(3) Section 2.—The Minister has no power to make grants towards expenditure resulting from the coming into force of restrictions under Section 2 of the Act.

(4) Purchase of land under Section 9 (1) (b) as an alternative to the payment of compensation for restrictions.—If a Highway Authority, with the approval of the District Valuer, decide to exercise their powers under Section 9 (1) (b) to purchase land required for road widening or new construction as an alternative to the payment of compensation, the Minister will consider an application for grant to be made at the time of purchase notwithstanding that it may not be proposed to throw the land into the highway forthwith.

(5) Administration expenses incurred in the operation of Section 1.—Where the Minister has agreed to make a grant under Section 17 (2) of the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, to the salary of the engineer or surveyor to a highway authority, grants of 50 per cent. will also be made towards approved expenditure incurred as set out in Table II appended to this circular.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. MATHESON,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk of the Council.
The Town Clerk.

TABLE I.

RATES OF GRANT TOWARDS COMPENSATION PAYABLE BY REASON OF THE COMING INTO FORCE OF RESTRICTIONS UNDER SECTION 1.

	In built-up Areas. Per cent.	In areas not built-up. Per cent.
Group A	80	85
Group B	75	80
Group C	66⅔	75
(ii) Class I roads (other than trunk roads in County Areas).
(a) in cases where it has been decided that the ultimate layout of the road shall include dual carriageways and cycle tracks and a standard width to accommodate this layout has been adopted—
Group A	66⅔	75
Group B	60	66⅔
Group C	50	60
(b) in other cases	50	60
(iii) Class II and unclassified roads	33⅓	50

For this purpose the classification of a proposed road will be determined at the time the standard width is adopted. Similarly should it be agreed that an existing unclassified or Class II road will have superior classification value when the layout for which provision is made by the standard width is completed, grants will be made under paragraphs (2) and (4) of this circular at the rate appropriate to the superior classification.

Applications for grants should quote the date and reference number of the letter in which the Minister approved the resolution of the Council to adopt the standard width for the road and should be accompanied by (a) a report from the District Valuer on each claim for compensation and (b) a sketch plan of the road showing the position and extent of the land which is the subject of the District Valuer's report.

TABLE II.

GRANTS TOWARD ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES INCURRED IN THE OPERATION OF SECTION 1.

Grants will be made to highway authorities referred to in paragraph (5) of this letter:

(i) in respect of staff added to the establishment of the Engineer or Surveyor of the Highway Authority for the purpose of work arising from the operation of Section 1 of the Act (including, for instance, surveys, the preparation of plans and the collection of other data necessary for and preliminary to the adoption of standard widths);

(ii) on travelling by such staff on such work, and

(iii) on the provision of instruments and maps required by such staff for such work, provided that an estimate of expenditure has been submitted for the Minister's prior approval.

Grants in respect of travelling expenses will be subject to the same conditions as those which apply to grants in respect of the travelling expenses of Engineers or Surveyors to Councils, as set out in Circular No. 388 (Roads) dated 13th November, 1933.

A preliminary statement of the additional staff which the Council propose to engage, an estimate of the annual expenditure on travelling expenses, and an estimate

ADS of the cost of the necessary instruments and maps should be submitted for the Minister's approval on the enclosed Form No. 331A (Roads).

Applications for payment of the grant should be made at the same time as application is made for payment of the grant towards the salary of the engineer or surveyor, i.e. as soon as possible after the financial year ending March 31st (May 15th in Scotland) in which the expenditure was incurred. Copies of the appropriate forms of application will be forwarded in due course. (Form 179A/359A and (for County Councils) Form 359 or (for other authorities) Form 179.)

In the case of County Councils, grants towards the salaries of all engineers and surveyors and other approved technical officers on the staffs of County Surveyors will continue to be made under the arrangements already in force, claims for payments of grant being made as before on Form 359.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
14*th December*, 1925.

SEA DEFENCE WORKS (a).

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to state that he has had occasion to deal recently with a number of important schemes of sea defence, and he has asked one of his engineering inspectors, Mr. Crosthwaite, who has had large experience of this class of case, for a report on the general subject. This report will be of interest to those local authorities who are concerned with works of sea defence, and a copy is enclosed for the information of the council.

As pointed out by Mr. Crosthwaite, works of sea defence involve peculiar difficulties of their own, and it is not possible to decide what works, if any, can be carried out with advantage in any particular case except after full investigation of the local conditions.

There are, however, some general considerations which need to be emphasised.

(1) Before any scheme is undertaken, its financial aspect should be carefully studied. The council should consider whether the advantages anticipated from the scheme will produce such a return in public benefit as to warrant the public expenditure, often large, which is involved. The Minister has found that in some cases this broad financial aspect has not been sufficiently examined and taken into account by the local authority.

(2) Public money can be rightly spent only on works of public advantage. Many schemes of sea defence works largely benefit private interests, and it is proper in such cases that those private interests should make a reasonable contribution towards the cost.

(3) There are two further considerations of a technical nature which the experience of the Ministry of Health and of the Local Government Board show cannot be too strongly emphasised both for devising satisfactory schemes and for economy. There are instances where much money could have been saved if these conditions had been observed.

  (i) Before sea defence works are undertaken, the council should obtain the advice of competent engineers with special experience in such works.

  (ii) It is equally important, though this consideration has hitherto been seldom observed, except where a competent engineer is permanently employed by the local authority, that the works should be inspected from time to time, say every six or twelve months, by a competent expert, in order to see whether any repair or additional work should be undertaken to preserve the works already done. This policy of a "stitch in time" is essential for economy, and there are cases where heavy expenditure would have been avoided had this inspection been systematically made, and the necessary works carried out in good time.

I am, etc.

ENCLOSURE TO CIRCULAR 652.

SEA DEFENCE WORKS.

Necessity for Sea Defence Works.

The prime cause necessitating sea defence works is the wasting of the foreshore through the transport of material, generally in the direction of flood tide currents complicated in many cases by the direction of prevailing winds. If any artificial barriers are projected from the foreshore, such as piers and solid jetties, so as to prevent the travel of material, the length of beach lying beyond the obstruction is almost certain to suffer, and rapid encroachment by the sea will result. Also, where extensive series of groynes have been constructed in order to protect the foreshore, the travelling material is trapped, and the erosion of the coast beyond is aggravated and there is a continuous loss of land.

A good example of this is a case where the construction of the harbour piers prevented sand and shingle from reaching the beach to the south, which was almost denuded down to the clay, and great damage resulted to the then existing sea defence works, destroying groynes and undermining walls. In consequence the beach had to be re-groyned. The new groynes collected in time a fair amount of beach and it is now fairly safe, but the shore still further south has suffered severely.

Another cause that accentuates beach erosion is the construction of sea walls fronting seaside towns. These walls are obviously necessary to protect roads and promenades, but unfortunately the rebound of waves breaking against their face almost invariably leads to scour and to the cutting out and denuding of the foreshore. This attack is generally countered by groyning, which is not always successful, with the result that the walls may become undermined and in some cases, unless underpinned or protected in some way, destroyed. The difficulty is that it is almost impossible to say prior to construction what the exact effect of a wall in any one place will be.

Again, on sandy foreshores there are frequently shifting channels and gut-ways parallel to the coast line that are a very great difficulty because in some conditions of wind and tide, which it is almost impossible to foresee, these may move landwards from positions in which they have remained stationary for years and cause havoc to groynes and foundations. This is said to have recently occurred off Silloth, on the Solway Firth, where vessels that could formerly lie only at a considerable distance from the shore were able, owing to an alteration of the channel, to come to within a few yards from the ends of the groynes, which were undermined. It has also been suggested that the destruction of a comparatively new sea wall at Lowestoft may be due to a general deepening of the sea bed beyond low water mark. This is, however, more or less a matter of conjecture, as there are not sufficient data upon which to form a reliable opinion.

Design of Sea Defence Works.

From the brief description given above of the causes that necessitate sea defence works, it will be readily understood that an engineer who has to design them is faced by a complicated problem, and he is usually called in only when some failure has actually occurred, and works must be done at once to prevent the damage spreading. To design such works successfully, a fairly complete knowledge of the local conditions is essential. That is to say, reliable information is needed of prevailing winds and tidal currents, the direction of littoral drift and the effect of wind coming from any direction on the latter. To obtain such information, observations must extend over a considerable period, for if they are made in the fine summer months the results may prove quite different from what would prevail in rough winter weather, or during the extreme high and low waters of the equinoxes. When called in to advise, the engineer is almost always met with a lack of reliable information on all these points, and especially can obtain no information of any kind relating to shifting channels off the shore. All he is likely to be told is that the directions of prevailing winds and littoral drift are so and so, and that the damage is caused when rough weather synchronises with exceptionally high tides, all of which he knows already. On such data and on what information he can pick up in a few days, he has to design his works, for when sea defences are breached they must be repaired at once, and it is small wonder if at times the works should turn out a failure.

This lack of local knowledge applies especially to small authorities who cannot usually be expected to have a surveyor capable of taking reliable tidal observations or making marine surveys and designing sea defence work, and in consequence an outside engineer has to be called in.

Even among the larger authorities, however, the local conditions with regard to tidal currents, etc., have seldom been systematically and properly recorded, and there is no record at the Ministry of any place, large or small, where a marine survey has been made extending, say, half a mile to sea and along the whole sea front sufficient to enable shifting channels to be studied. This would entail a proper survey with soundings taken on definite lines and repeated at intervals so as to ascertain what is happening out of sight, below low water. The soundings would, of course, be referred in all cases to a definite datum so that the successive surveys could be compared.

Tidal current observations should also be made at different states of tide and wind. These would not require the repetition necessary in the case of soundings, but might be added to from time to time, when exceptional conditions occur, or when the soundings showed that there had been material change in the shifting channels, likely to affect tidal currents. Such a survey to be of value should be made by an engineer who has had experience of marine surveying. It would of necessity be somewhat expensive, but, if once made, the repetition soundings, if taken on definite lines and permanently marked, could be taken by a competent surveyor or an assistant working under instructions.

At most large harbours, these periodic surveys are regularly made and, though they take considerable time, are of the greatest value. At most seaside places, the original survey would take one engineer and an assistant not more than three or four months, given favourable weather, while the periodic soundings could probably be done in a month or six weeks.

FAILURE OF SEA DEFENCE.

The failure of sea defence works may usually be attributed to :—

(2) Neglected maintenance.
(3) Unusual local circumstances that could not have been foreseen.

Few cases have come under the notice of the Ministry where works have actually failed which could not have been saved, at any rate to some extent, if remedial measures had been taken in time.

In a number of cases, walls have been designed of insufficient strength and with shallow foundations. Frequently these have been made safe by underpinning, piling in front, or by the provision of breast walls or buttresses carried down to a solid foundation. Though in these cases the original walls cannot be said to have actually failed, the cost of such remedial measures has been far more than the expense which would have been incurred had a more substantial design been carried out in the first instance.

Where actual failure has resulted, it has almost always been where the local authority has put off doing anything until too late. Thus, in one case, a wall was constructed about forty years ago, with the foundations reaching to only about half-tide level. When constructed, the shingle foreshore almost reached the coping level, but during recent years the level fell, as the result of erosion, and a few years ago the wall was undermined. Part fell and great damage was done. The authority consulted a well-known firm of engineers who prepared a scheme for repairing the damaged part and strengthening the whole length of wall. When tenders were obtained after the war, prices were at their highest and the cost was greater than could be faced. The engineers advised the authority to go on with the repairs and the protective works for the part of the wall that was actually in danger at the moment, in fact to spend as much as they could afford at the time, postponing such works as could be omitted with safety, but warning the authority that the remainder of the old wall would not be safe until the whole had been strengthened. The abridged scheme was consequently carried out.

Since the work was finished, there has been a continued denudation of the foreshore, and further lengths of the foundations of the old wall were exposed. Nothing was, however, done to extend the protective works as recommended by the engineers, and afterwards, during rough weather, the sea washed the gravel from under the old wall and part of it was undermined, bridging a breach under the foundations through which the wall backing was sucked out and a large cavity formed. The engineers were again called in, but all they could do was to repeat the advice previously given.

Another town where sea defences have constantly been a source of trouble may be referred to. Here, about twenty years ago, a sea wall and a series of groynes were erected for the protection of the beach. The wall was of quite satisfactory design, the foundations being taken down to about low water level and founded on gravel as it was not practicable to get any other foundation. The landward end of the groynes was carried up above high water level, and for about fifteen years the work seemed safe, there being a very good accumulation of gravel against the face of the wall. Later, however, the beach lowered considerably. Some of the groynes were partly washed out and, owing to the difficulty (this was during the war) of obtaining satisfactory labour and timber, it was not possible to maintain them and some were completely destroyed. The wall then became undermined and several lengths fell. A large sum was spent on rebuilding to make good the damage, but eventually it was found impossible to maintain the beach, and finally it was decided to give up all attempt to maintain the old line of sea wall and an entirely new form of wall was adopted, landwards of the old.

In this case, it is somewhat difficult to attribute the failure to any particular cause. The design of the wall was satisfactory, and it would have stood indefinitely had it been possible to maintain a good beach in front. The groynes were well constructed and were kept in repair, except for some time during the war, when, as explained above, there was difficulty. The only defect in design suggested is that the groynes were perhaps too high and not long enough to maintain a sufficiently flat beach. It is well known that in rough weather high groynes cause a scour by waves breaking over them and cutting out the beach on the lee side. In order to avoid this danger, groynes are sometimes lowered by removing sheeting where owing to scour they become too high, but in this case this could not be done as they were constructed with piles driven close together.

To account for this failure, it has been further suggested that there may have been a general deepening of the sea outside low water mark that caused the loss of beach material, but unfortunately no such survey as already suggested had been made, so there are no data either to confirm or refute this view. It is unfortunate that there was no survey in this particular case, for, if the damage is due to such general deepening of the sea bed, groynes will not stop it and the fate of the defence works now under construction will be the same as the last, and before they are finished they will have cost a large sum.

The above instances have been described somewhat fully, for they are typical of failures that may be expected when works from some cause prove ineffective, and the causes that have led to these failures are also typical.

It is sometimes asked why should there be more failures of sea defence than of other classes of works. There are several answers to this question. Other works have not the sea constantly attacking their foundations. Again, sea works are usually much more expensive than inland works, and the amount of money available is unfortunately limited. Consequently engineers, in order to keep within the available resources of their employers, have to take risks that in other circumstances would not be necessary. With unlimited money, no doubt, permanent sea defence works could be put up almost anywhere, but local authorities are not in this fortunate position. Where risks are taken, it may turn out all right, but, whether known risks are taken or not, all sea works should be kept under careful observation so that any defects that may develop may be remedied at once before the damage has time to spread.

These cases which have been instanced were on a large scale, but the need of competent advice may be equally important, relatively, in small cases. In one instance, groynes were put in and taken out without proper advice, as the majority in the council swayed for or against them, with resulting waste.

The maintenance of sea defence works is always the great difficulty, and before incurring a large expenditure there is always the tendency to "wait till something happens." Then it probably is too late, for the something generally happens during the rough winter weather when works of maintenance or reconstruction are impossible.

GENERAL REMARKS.

It is obviously impossible to lay down any rule as to coast protection works owing to the varying conditions at different places.

It would, however, tend towards economy if councils who have not a surveyor fully competent to design such works would employ a competent outside engineer, not only to advise them on works to be carried out, but to inspect the works annually and report what maintenance works, if any, are required. If this practice had been followed in some cases recently before the Ministry, much money would have been saved, whereas the cost of such an annual inspection would not be great.

It is also desirable, where coast works are required for the protection of a flat sandy coast, to have an accurate marine survey extending, say, half a mile to sea, with soundings taken on definite lines. The survey should extend for some distance each side of the place to be protected, and the soundings should be repeated annually or at such intervals as may be recommended by the responsible engineer. The survey should also show current observations during different conditions of tide and wind and, to be of value, should be made by an engineer who has had special experience in marine surveying.

If local authorities would adopt this proposal, any engineer called in later would have proper data upon which to design works, whereas at present, without such a survey, he is usually groping in the dark.

But, as important as the survey is the annual, or six-monthly, inspection of works by the engineer who designed them. He will take more personal interest in their preservation and will probably know what to look for better than another.

In fact, if local authorities would employ a competent engineer, do what he tells them, and not follow amateur advice, there would not be so much trouble with sea defence works, though at certain places, as already instanced, unforeseen difficulties are bound to arise.

SHOPS REGULATION

SHOPS REGULATION.

(S. R. & O., 1912, No. 316.)

REGULATIONS DATED APRIL 1ST, 1912, MADE BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE HOME DEPARTMENT, IN PURSUANCE OF THE SHOPS ACT, 1912.

In pursuance of the powers conferred on me by the Shops Act, 1912 (a), I hereby make the following regulations :—

I.

Notice to be given by Occupier as to Assistants' Weekly Half-holiday (section 1 (2)).

1. The notice required to be affixed in a shop specifying the day or days on which the shop assistants employed therein are not employed after half-past one o'clock shall be in the form marked I. in the schedule to these regulations.

2. The notice shall be kept constantly affixed in a position where it may be readily seen and read by any person whom it affects, and shall be renewed whenever it becomes defaced or otherwise ceases to be clearly legible.

If the half-holiday is given on different days to the assistants employed in different rooms or departments of a shop, a separate notice shall be affixed in each such room or department.

3. The notice shall be affixed before the assistants to whom it relates cease work on the Saturday preceding the week during which it is to have effect.

Inquiries by Local Authorities as to Orders fixing the Day on which Shops are to be closed for the Weekly Half-holiday (section 4 (2)).

4. Before the local authority make an Order fixing the day of the weekly half-holiday for any class of shops, they shall take the following steps for ascertaining whether the occupiers of a majority of that class of shops approve the order :—

(1) They shall cause a register of the shops of that class to be prepared in the manner hereinafter provided.

(2) They shall give notice of their intention to make the Order and of the times and place at which the register may be inspected by any shopkeeper affected, in the form marked II. in the schedule to these regulations. The notice shall either be advertised in at least two newspapers circulating in the area to which the Order is to apply, or be posted up in streets and public places in the area to which the Order is to apply, in such positions and in such manner that it is likely to be seen and can easily be read by persons interested.

(3) They shall take a vote of the occupiers of the shops of that class in the manner hereinafter provided or, if the local authority have received an application in writing purporting to be signed by the occupiers of a majority of the shops of that class, they may in lieu of taking a vote take such steps as they think fit to verify the signatures to the application, and signatures so verified shall, unless reason appear to the contrary, be taken to mean that the occupiers whose signatures they purport to be approve the order.

Provided that if shops of any class are required under a closing order in force before the 1st May, 1912, to close on a certain day of the week (other than Saturday) at one o'clock in the afternoon, it shall not be necessary to take a vote of the occupiers of those shops in respect of a proposal to make an order fixing that day as the day of the weekly half-holiday, unless representations are made to the local authority by a substantial proportion of the occupiers in favour of another day being fixed.

SHOPS REGULATION

Conditions for Mixed Shops remaining open on Weekly Half-holiday (section 10 (1)).

5. Where any trade or business exempted from the provisions of the Act as to closing on the weekly half-holiday is carried on in the same shop with any trade or business not so exempted, the shop shall only be kept open for the purpose of the exempted trade or business on the day fixed for the weekly half-holiday in respect of the trade or business not exempted, on the following conditions:—(a) After the hour of closing on the day of the weekly half-holiday, whether fixed by the occupier or by an Order made by the local authority under the Act, there shall be exhibited in some conspicuous places on the exterior and in the interior of the shop notices in letters of the size of not less than two inches in accordance with the form marked IV. in the schedule to these regulations; (b) so far as reasonably practicable no goods in connection with the trade or business not exempted shall be exhibited either inside or outside the shop.

II

Notice of Intention to make Closing Order.

6. As soon as may be after the local authority are satisfied that a primâ facie case is made out for making a Closing Order they shall cause a register to be prepared in the manner hereinafter provided.

7.—(1) Notice of the intention of the local authority to make a Closing Order shall be given in the form marked A in the schedule to these regulations, and unless a copy of the proposed order be annexed to it, it shall specify the area within which and the class or classes of shops to which the order will apply and the proposed days and hours of closing. The notice shall

(i) be advertised at least twice in a newspaper or newspapers circulating in the area to which the Order is to apply;

(ii) be posted up in streets and public places in the area to which the Order is to apply in such positions and in such manner that it is likely to be seen and can easily be read by persons interested; and

(iii) be given to any ratepayer in the area making reasonable application for it.

If the Order applies to an area with a population of not more than 5,000, the local authority may, in lieu of advertising the notice in a newspaper or newspapers, cause a copy to be sent to the occupier of every shop known to be affected by the Order.

(2) If anything in the Order affects post office business, a copy of the notice shall be sent to the Postmaster-General.

8. The prescribed period within which objections may be made to the proposed order shall be four weeks.

Ascertaining Opinion of Occupiers of Shops.

9. If the local authority, after considering any objections or suggestions received by them in pursuance of the notice of their intention to make an Order, desire to proceed with the Order, they shall, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the occupiers of at least two-thirds in number of the shops to be affected by the Order approve the Order, either take a vote in the manner hereinafter provided or, if they have received an application in writing for the making of the Order, purporting to be signed by the occupiers of at least two-thirds in number of the shops to be affected by the Order, they may in lieu of taking a vote take such steps as they think fit to verify the signatures to the application, and signatures so verified shall, unless reason appear to the contrary, be taken to mean that the occupiers whose signatures

11. In submitting the Order to the Secretary of State, the local authority shall inform him as to the method adopted by them for ascertaining the opinion of the occupiers of shops, and as to any matters which they think it desirable to bring to his notice, and shall forward to him copies of any notices given by them under these regulations and other evidence that the regulations have been duly complied with, verified by a certificate signed by their clerk.

Local Inquiries.

12. When the Secretary of State directs a local inquiry to be held with regard to a Closing Order it shall be held at such place as the local authority, with the approval of the Secretary of State, may appoint, and at such time as may be fixed by the person appointed by the Secretary of State to hold the inquiry (hereinafter called "the Commissioner").

13. Not less than three weeks before the time of holding the inquiry notice thereof and of the place where the inquiry will be held shall be given in the manner above prescribed for the notice of intention to make an Order.

14. The inquiry shall be held in public, and any person who, in the opinion of the commissioner, is affected by the Closing Order, may appear and be heard either in person, or by counsel, solicitor, or agent.

15. The Commissioner may give such directions as he thinks fit as to the order in which the objections to the Order shall be considered; and, if any person who has not sent objections in writing to the Secretary of State claims to be heard at the inquiry, may require him to state his objections in writing.

16. The Commissioner may adjourn the inquiry from time to time as he thinks desirable.

17. If the objections to the Order made by more than one person appearing at the inquiry seem to the Commissioner to be the same in substance, he may select any person whom he considers representative of the largest number of the persons affected by the Order, to state such objections, and to call evidence (if required); provided that any other person making the same objections may be heard subsequently with the consent of the Commissioner.

18. Subject to the foregoing rules, all the proceedings shall be conducted in such manner as the Commissioner may direct.

III.—GENERAL.

Preparation of Register.

19.—(1) A register to be prepared in pursuance of these regulations shall show the addresses, trades, and names of the occupiers of all the shops to be affected by the Order.

In the case of a shop in which several trades or businesses are carried on, the local authority may require the occupier to specify, in pursuance of sub-section (3) of section 10 of the Act, which trade or business he considers to be his principal trade or business, and the local authority shall not insert the name of the occupier in the register in respect of any other trade or business carried on in the shop unless the occupier satisfies them that it forms a substantial part of the business carried on in the shop.

(2) Every occupier of a shop to be affected shall be entitled to attend within the times and at the place specified in the notices required to be given by these regulations for the purpose of securing that the entries in the register with regard to his shop are duly made.

(3) Any occupier of a shop to be affected may represent to the local authority any matter, in regard to the register, which seems to him to require to be rectified; and the local authority shall consider all such representations.

The Taking of a Vote.

20. If a local authority decide, or are required, to take a vote for the purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the occupiers of shops to be affected by an Order fixing the day of the weekly half-holiday or by a Closing Order, they shall proceed as follows:—

(1)—(a) A notice, together with a voting paper, in the form marked III. or in the form marked B in the schedule to these regulations, as the case may be, shall be sent by post or otherwise delivered to every occupier appearing in the register, at his registered address.

(b) Voting papers shall be returned to the local authority either through the post or by a collector appointed in writing by them for the purpose, and carrying with him at the time of collection his written appointment, which he shall show to any occupier who shall require it to be shown.

In pursuance of the powers conferred on me by Section 17 of the Shops Act, 1912, and the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936, I hereby make the following Regulations:—

Rules of Procedure for Jewish Tribunals in considering cases referred to them by local authorities under Section 7 (7) of the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936.

1. On receiving particulars of a case from a local authority the Secretary of the Tribunal shall send to the person, partnership or company occupying the shop concerned (hereinafter called "the person affected") a copy of the particulars received from the local authority and shall notify the person affected that any statement it is desired to make on the said particulars should be submitted as soon as possible to the Tribunal. On receipt of any such statement the Secretary of the Tribunal shall forthwith make and send to the said local authority a copy thereof. The particulars above referred to shall contain the name and address of the person affected as given in the application form prescribed by Regulation 3 of, and the Schedule to, the Shops Regulations, 1937 (a). If the person affected is a partnership or company the particulars shall contain the names of all the partners or directors as given in the statutory declaration accompanying the said application form specifying which of the partners or directors of the company are alleged not to hold genuinely a conscientious objection on religious grounds to carrying on business on the Jewish sabbath.

2. Upon the expiration of ten days after the despatch of the particulars to the person affected, the Secretary of the Tribunal shall, by registered letter, notify the person affected and the local authority of the time and place appointed for holding the inquiry.

3. The particulars referred to in Regulation 1 and the notice referred to in Regulation 2 shall be addressed to the person affected at the address specified in the particulars.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Shops Regulations, 1937, the Tribunal may sit in more than one Division at the same time. Each Division shall consist of not less than three members of the Tribunal. Each Division shall exercise all or any part of the jurisdiction vested in the Tribunal.

5. The Tribunal may at any time prior to the date of holding the inquiry, serve on the person affected or the local authority a notice in writing asking if either of them are prepared to admit in writing any material fact in order that the expense of calling a witness or witnesses to prove such facts may be obviated.

6. The whole or any part of the inquiry shall be held in private if the Tribunal think fit.

7. The local authority may be represented at the inquiry by Counsel or Solicitor or by any of their officers.

8. The person affected may be represented at the inquiry by Counsel or Solicitor or, in the case of a company, by a director or officer thereof, or in the case of partnership, by a partner, or with the leave of the Tribunal by any other person.

9. The Tribunal shall be at liberty to proceed with the inquiry on the appointed day in the absence of the person affected whether represented or not or in the absence of a representative of the local authority if they are of opinion that it is just and proper so to do.

10. The Tribunal may adjourn the inquiry from time to time as they think fit and may hold adjourned sittings at such time and place as may appear to them to be suitable or necessary for the purpose of the case.

11. The Tribunal may, if they are of opinion in any particular case that no injustice will result, receive such part of the evidence as they may think fit in writing. Provided that the Tribunal may, if at any time after they have admitted evidence in writing they should in their absolute discretion consider that by reason of all or any part of such evidence being tendered in writing instead of orally any injustice is likely to be done, admit such oral evidence as they think desirable to obviate such injustice.

12. All witnesses called before the Tribunal shall be subject to such examination by the members of the Tribunal or by any other person or persons as the Tribunal consider desirable to assist them in the performance of their duties.

13. The Tribunal may, if they think fit, examine or obtain the evidence of such witnesses as appear to them likely to afford evidence relevant and material to the due investigation of the case although not called or tendered by the person affected or by the local authority.

14. Subject to the provisions of the foregoing Regulations the proceedings at the inquiry shall be conducted in such a way as the Tribunal may direct.

15. At the conclusion of the inquiry the Tribunal shall as soon as may be determine whether they are satisfied

(a) that the person affected is not a person of the Jewish religion, or

(b) that a conscientious objection on religious grounds to carrying on business on the Jewish sabbath is not genuinely held by the occupier of the shop or, in the case of a shop occupied by a partnership or company, by the majority of the partners or of the directors, as the case may be,

and shall report accordingly to the local authority.

SHOPS REGULATION

16. These Regulations may be cited as the Shops (Procedure for Jewish Tribunals) Regulations, 1937.

SAMUEL HOARE,
One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

Home Office.
Whitehall,
17*th November*, 1937.

MEMORANDUM ON THE SHOPS (SUNDAY TRADING RESTRICTION) ACT, 1936, AND THE RETAIL MEAT DEALERS' SHOPS (SUNDAY CLOSING) ACT, 1936.

In the following memorandum a description is given of the main provisions of the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936, the Shops Regulations, 1937 (S. R. & O., 1937, No. 271) and the Retail Meat Dealers' Shops (Sunday Closing) Act, 1936.

The general effect of the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936, is (1) to require the closing of shops on Sundays subject to a number of exemptions designed to meet the reasonable needs of the public, and (2) to provide for compensatory holidays during the week for persons employed on Sunday about the business of those shops which are permitted to open, subject to exceptions for certain classes of workers.

The provisions as to the closing of shops are in substitution for the provisions of the Sunday Observance Acts, in so far as they relate to retail trading, and no offence under those Acts will be committed by the occupier of a shop who opens on Sunday by virtue of and in accordance with the provisions of the new Act.

The Act also applies to the carrying on of retail trade or business in places not being shops.

Special provision is made to enable persons of the Jewish religion to carry on retail trade business on Sunday up to 2 p.m., provided that they close for the whole of Saturday, and comply with certain other conditions. These provisions apply also to members of any religious body regularly observing the Jewish Sabbath, e.g. members of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Provision is also made to meet the special needs of holiday resorts. Local authorities in holiday resorts may by order exempt from the closing provisions of the Act certain classes of transactions in addition to those exempted by the provisions of the Act which are of general application.

The Retail Meat Dealers' Shops (Sunday Closing) Act, 1936, prohibits the sale on Sundays of butchers' meat in butchers' shops or elsewhere, subject to certain exceptions.

These Acts do not apply to Scotland.

SHOPS (SUNDAY TRADING RESTRICTION) ACT, 1936.

SHOPS AND OTHER PLACES TO WHICH THE ACT APPLIES.

1. The Act applies—

(a) to retail shops, i.e. any premises where any retail trade or business * is carried on (with the exception of butchers' shops †);

(b) to any place where any retail trade or business (other than the retail sale of butchers' meat) is carried on elsewhere than in a shop. The Act applies therefore to retail trade or business carried on at or from a factory or workshop (e.g. a bakery), a farm or allotment, or any other place.‡ A person who carries on

* As a result of the passing of the Shops Act, 1936, retain trade or business now includes the business of a lending library, subject to the exceptions provided in that Act.

‡ [The note thus indicated in the original memorandum called attention to the decision of the High Court in Eldorado Ice Cream Co., Ltd. v. Keating, [1938] 1 K. B. 715; [1938] 1 All E. R. 330; 102 J. P. 147; Digest Supp., in which it was held that the provisions of the Act as to employment on Sunday did not apply to persons employed in selling ice cream from box tricycles.] retail trade or business at or from such a place is regarded, for the purposes of the Act, as being the occupier of a shop.

In this Memorandum, unless otherwise stated, any reference to a "shop" should be read as including a reference to any place at or from which retail trade or business is carried on; and any reference to an "occupier of a shop" should be read as including a reference to a person carrying on retail trade or business at or from such a place.

The Act does not apply to wholesale trading.

TRANSACTIONS WHOLLY EXEMPTED FROM THE CLOSING PROVISIONS OF THE ACT.

2. The following transactions are wholly exempted from the closing provisions * of the Act:

The sale of—

(1) intoxicating liquors;

Note.—The provisions of the Licensing Act, 1921, relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, including the prohibition of Sunday sales in Wales and Monmouthshire, remain in force unaffected by the present Act.

(2) meals or refreshments whether or not for consumption at the shop at which they are sold, but not including the sale of fried fish and chips at a fried fish and chip shop;

Note.—For certain special provisions as to the sale of refreshments for consumption off the premises, see paragraph 9 below.

(3) newly cooked provisions and cooked or partly cooked tripe;

(4) table waters, sweets, chocolates, sugar confectionery and ice-cream (including wafers and edible containers);

Note.—The specific exemption for wafers and edible containers was inserted in order to prevent any suggestion that these articles could be regarded as "flour confectionery." The fact that edible containers are specifically mentioned does not preclude the sale of ice-cream in the containers ordinarily used, e.g. paper or cardboard containers.

(5) flowers, fruit and vegetables (including mushrooms) other than tinned or bottled fruit or vegetables;

(6) milk and cream not including tinned or dried milk or cream, but including clotted cream whether sold in tins or otherwise;

(7) medicines and medical and surgical appliances—

(i) at any premises registered under Section twelve of the Pharmacy and Poisons Act, 1933; or

(ii) by any person who has entered into a contract with an insurance committee under the National Health Insurance Act, 1936, for the supply of drugs and appliances.

Note.—The effect of this is to permit sales of these articles at any chemist's shop; and at those drug stores which have a contract with the local Insurance Committee. It is not necessary that the contract should contain a requirement for Sunday service.

(8) aircraft, motor, or cycle supplies or accessories;

(9) tobacco and smokers' requisites;

(10) newspapers, periodicals and magazines;

(11) books and stationery from the bookstalls of such terminal and main line railway or omnibus stations, or at such aerodromes as may be approved by the Secretary of State;

* For the requirements as to compensatory holidays for persons employed on Sunday, see paragraphs 30 to 33 below.

SHOPS REGULATION

(12) guide books, postcards, photographs, reproductions, photographic films and plates and souvenirs

(i) at any gallery, museum, garden, park or ancient monument under the control of a public authority or university; or

(ii) at any other gallery or museum, or any place of natural beauty or historic interest, or any zoological, botanical or horticultural gardens or aquarium, if and to the extent that the local authority certify that such sale is desirable in the interests of the public; or

(iii) in any passenger vessel within the meaning of Part II of the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910, while engaged in carrying passengers.

Notes.—As regards (ii) application for a certificate should be made to the local authority. There is no prescribed form of application. It will be open to local authorities either to permit sales of all the articles mentioned for the whole of Sunday, or to limit the classes of commodities which may be sold and/or the hours during which they may be sold.

As regards (iii) the definition of "passenger vessel" for the purposes of Part II of the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910, is to be found in Section 52 of that Act and runs as follows:

> "The expression 'passenger vessel' means a vessel of any description employed for the carriage and conveyance of passengers which goes from any place in the United Kingdom to any other place in the United Kingdom or goes from and returns to the same place in the United Kingdom on the same day."

The Act does not apply to a "sea-going ship" (i.e. a ship which in fact goes to sea), and the special provision for passenger vessels will therefore apply to such vessels only on rivers, lakes, and certain tidal waters:

(13) photographs for passports;

(14) requisites for any game or sport at any premises or place where that game or sport is played or carried on;

(15) fodder for horses, mules, ponies and donkeys at any farm, stables, hotel or inn.

Note.—This exemption does not apply to the sale of fodder at a shop (e.g. a corn-merchant's shop).

(16) the transaction of post office business;

(17) the transaction of the business carried on by a funeral undertaker;

(18) the sale by fishermen elsewhere than in a shop of freshly caught fish (including shell-fish);

(19) the sale at a farm, smallholding, allotment or similar place, of produce produced thereon.

Note.—It will have been seen that by virtue of the general exemptions contained in the Act, flowers, fruit, vegetables, milk and cream may be sold at any time on Sunday. The further special exemption enables farmers, allotment holders, market gardeners, &c., to sell on Sundays other commodities (e.g. butter, eggs, honey) so long as the commodities are produced on, and sold at, the farm, allotment, &c., and are not obtained from any other source.

(20) the sale of victuals, stores or other necessaries required by any person for a ship or aircraft on her arrival at, or immediately before her departure from, a port or aerodrome;

(21) the sale of goods to a club for the purposes of the club;

(22) the sale of the products of a handicraft, when the local authority are satisfied that a person engaged in handicraft at his home is dependent for his livelihood upon the Sunday sale of the articles he produces to such an extent that the prohibition of these sales would involve substantial hardship.

Note.—In such a case application should be made to the local authority for certificate of exemption. There is no prescribed form of application. The certificate may contain stipulations as to the period during which it is to be in force (e.g. the summer months) and as to the hours during which sales may be carried on, and any conditions which it is desired to include.

3. Cooking of food for customers.—Notwithstanding anything in the Act, food brought to a shop (e.g. a baker's shop) by a customer to be cooked, and required for consumption on Sunday, may be cooked before 1.30 p.m. and may be dispatched or delivered up to an hour not later than 1.30 p.m.

4. Goods required in case of illness.—Customers may be served with any goods on Sunday if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the goods are required in the case of illness.

PARTIAL EXEMPTION ORDERS.

5. Certain transactions may, in so far as they are not otherwise exempted from the closing provisions of the Act, be permitted for part of Sunday in any district by a partial exemption order made by the local authority.

These transactions are as follows:

The sale of—

(a) bread and flour confectionery, including rolls and fancy bread;
(b) fish (including shell-fish);
(c) groceries and other provisions commonly sold in grocers' shops.

(Note.—Prior to February 1st, 1938, these transactions were exempted altogether from the closing provisions of the Act.)

6. A partial exemption order may—

(a) apply to the whole or any part of a local authority's district;
(b) apply to any or all of the transactions mentioned in the previous paragraph;
(c) permit the transactions specified in the order to be carried on up to the hour fixed by the order, which must not be later than 10 a.m. (subject to any provisions in the order for cases of emergency, &c.).

For the provisions applicable to the making of these orders see paragraph 10 below.

HOLIDAY RESORTS.

7. In places frequented as holiday resorts during certain seasons of the year certain transactions may be exempted from the closing provisions of the Act, on not more than eighteen Sundays in the year by an order made by the local authority, in addition to those transactions which are wholly exempted by the Act throughout the country (see paragraph 2 above).

These additional transactions are as follows:

The sale of—

(a) any articles required for the purposes of bathing or fishing;
(b) photographic requisites;
(c) toys, souvenirs and fancy goods;
(d) books, stationery, photographs, reproductions and postcards;

Note.—As regards (e) it should be noted that, as the Act does not apply to the business of a retail dealer in butchers' meat, a holiday resort order cannot be made for the sale of butchers' meat.

8. An order apply to a holiday resort:

(1) applies only to the Sundays specified in the order, which must not exceed eighteen in any year;

(2) may be made for the whole or part of the local authority's district;

(3) may apply to any or all of the transactions mentioned above;

(4) may permit the transactions specified in the order to be carried on in all shops or in specified classes of shops only in the district or part of the district;

(5) may limit the hours during which, and lay down the conditions under which, the transactions specified may be carried on.

For the provisions applicable to the making of these orders see paragraph 10 below.

SHOPS REGULATION

MEALS AND REFRESHMENTS SOLD FOR CONSUMPTION OFF THE PREMISES.

9. An order may be made by a local authority prohibiting the sale on Sunday of meals or refreshments for consumption off the premises in shops, or any specified class of shops, in their area or any part of it.

The prohibition of off-sales under such an order will not however apply (a) to a restaurant or any other shop in which the sale of meals and refreshments for consumption on the premises forms a substantial part of the business, or (b) to sales of meals and refreshments elsewhere than at a shop (e.g. from a stall or by a street vendor) except to such extent and under such conditions as may be specified in the order. Orders may be made for the whole year or for a specified period or periods.

For the provisions applicable to the making of these orders see paragraph 10 below.

The object of these orders is to provide means of preventing misuse of the general exemption for refreshments for off-consumption by persons who do not carry on a genuine refreshment trade.

PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO THE MAKING OF ORDERS.

10. The orders described in the foregoing paragraphs (i.e. partial exemption orders, orders for holiday resorts, and orders relating to off-sales of meals and refreshments) may be made only with the approval of the occupiers of not less than two-thirds of the shops affected by the order. When the order affects more than one class of shop there must be a two-thirds majority in each class in favour of the order. For the purpose of determining this majority the views of occupiers of shops only (and not those of persons trading elsewhere than in a shop) are to be taken into account.

An occupier who carries on more than one trade or business in his shop may be required by the local authority to specify his principal trade or business, and in that case he will, for the purpose of determining the majority referred to above, be regarded as carrying on that trade or business only, unless he satisfies the local authority that another trade or business forms a substantial part of his business.

Local authorities are required to give public notice of their intention to make an order, and to specify in the notice a period of at least four weeks within which objections may be made to them. At the end of that period they are required to consider any objections which they have received, and if they are satisfied (a) that it is expedient to make the order, and (b) that there is the necessary majority of occupiers in favour of it, they may make the order.

11. A local authority may vary or revoke an order by a subsequent order. Before making such an order they are required to carry out the procedure described above with the necessary modifications, and, inter alia, to be satisfied that there is a two-thirds majority in favour of the proposed variation or revocation.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR PERSONS OBSERVING THE JEWISH SABBATH.

12. The general effect of these provisions is to permit a person of the Jewish religion, or a member of any religious body regularly observing the Jewish Sabbath (e.g. a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church), to keep his shop * open until 2 p.m. on Sunday, provided—

(a) that he applies for and obtains registration of the shop by the local authority;

(b) that he keeps the shop, and any other shop occupied by him, closed for all purposes during the whole of Saturday, and

(c) that he complies with certain other conditions designed to secure that the privilege of opening on Sunday under these special provisions is limited to persons who have a genuine conscientious objection to trading on the Jewish Sabbath.

The provisions apply to shops occupied by a partnership or company, if the majority of the partners or directors are persons of the Jewish religion, or members of a religious body regularly observing the Jewish Sabbath.

* The provisions also apply to retail trade or business carried on elsewhere than in a shop (e.g. at a stall in a street)—see paragraph 1 above.

It will be appreciated that recourse to these special provisions will not be necessary in the case of (a) persons who desire to carry on a trade or business which is wholly exempted from the closing provisions of the Act (see paragraph 2 above), or (b) persons permitted to open their shops up to 2 p.m. on Sunday in certain districts of London by an order made by the local authority (see paragraphs 20 to 22 below).

13. Application.—Application must be made to the local authority in the form prescribed by the Regulations (Form III), and must be accompanied by the prescribed Statutory Declaration. In the case of a partnership or company, the Declaration must be in the terms of the Form IV (a) and if it is not signed by all the partners or directors, must specify the names and addresses of the partners or directors who have not subscribed to it. When the applicant is not a partnership or company, the Declaration must be in terms of the Form IV (b).

A person who makes an untrue statement or representation for the purpose of procuring registration is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding £50 or to a term of imprisonment not exceeding three months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

14. Registration.—On the receipt of an application in the prescribed form duly completed and accompanied by the prescribed Statutory Declaration, the local authority will register the shop, subject to the following exceptions:

(1) the local authority may refuse to register a shop if the registration of the shop or any other shop now occupied or formerly occupied by the applicant, or (in the case of an individual occupier) by any partnership or company of which he was a partner or director has been revoked or cancelled (see paragraphs 16 to 18 below);

(2) a shop cannot be registered if the registration of that shop has been revoked, or cancelled at the occupier's request, while in the occupation of the present applicant.

When the local authority refuse to register in a case falling under (1) above, they will serve notice of their refusal upon the applicant, and he may then appeal to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction; and in the event of his appeal being unsuccessful, he may make a further appeal to Quarter Sessions against the Court's order.

15. Conditions to be observed after registration.—(a) The shop and any other shop occupied by the same occupier must be kept closed for all purposes connected with trade or business throughout the whole of Saturday.

It should be noted that the prohibition of Saturday opening extends to all classes of trade or business, whether or not they are exempted from the closing provisions of the Act.

(c) A notice must be kept conspicuously posted in the shop stating that it will be closed on Saturday; and if it is kept open on Sunday after 2 p.m. for the purpose of exempted transactions the notice must specify the hours during which, and the purpose for which, it will be open on Sunday. The form of notice is not prescribed. The notice need not be exhibited by persons carrying on business elsewhere than in a shop.

(d) An individual occupier, or a partner or director, who has subscribed to the Statutory Declaration must not be employed or engaged on the Jewish Sabbath about the business of any shop, nor must he employ any person about the business of any shop on the Jewish Sabbath, or be concerned in the control or management of any partnership or company which so employs any person.

It should be noted that all these requirements must be observed so long as the shop is registered (whether or not it is actually kept open on Sunday), and registration can only be revoked or cancelled in the circumstances described in paragraphs 16 to 18 below.

16. Revocation of registration.—(a) In the event of a conviction for a contravention of, or failure to comply with, any of the requirements set out in the foregoing paragraph, the Court may, in addition to any other penalty, order the revocation of the registration of the shop, of any other shops in the same occupation, and of any shops occupied by a partnership or company in which the convicted person is directly concerned.

SHOPS REGULATION

It is, however, provided that the Court shall not order the registration of any shop not occupied, or not occupied solely, by the person convicted to be revoked except after affording an opportunity to the occupier or to the other occupiers, as the case may be, to appear and be heard.

(b) If it appears to a local authority, as the result of representations made to them, that the occupier of a shop either (i) is not a person of the Jewish religion or a member of a religious body regularly observing the Jewish Sabbath, or (ii) has no genuine conscientious objection to carrying on business on the Jewish Sabbath (or in the case of a partnership or company that the majority of the partners or directors have no such genuine conscientious objection) the local authority may refer the case to the appropriate tribunal constituted in accordance with the Regulations.

The Act provides that in the case of a person professing to be a person of the Jewish religion, the tribunal shall consist of persons nominated by the London Committee of Deputies of the British Jews (generally known as the Board of Deputies) and approved by the Secretary of State; and that in the case of a person professing to be a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, the tribunal shall consist of persons nominated by the British Union Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, and approved by the Secretary of State. A Jewish tribunal has been approved by the Secretary of State, and its procedure has been prescribed by the Shops (Procedure for Jewish Tribunals) Regulations, 1937 (S. R. & O., 1937, No. 1038).

If the tribunal, after considering the case, reports to the local authority that the occupier concerned is not a person of the Jewish religion (or a member of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church), or that he does not hold a genuine conscientious objection to trading on the Jewish Sabbath, the local authority will revoke the registration of the shop, and thereupon the registration of all other shops in the same occupation, whether or not they are in that local authority's area, will be deemed to be revoked.

17. Cancellation of registration at occupier's request.—An occupier is entitled to have the registration of his shop cancelled at his own request, but not until twelve months from the date on which an application for the registration of the shop was last made.

Once the registration has been cancelled, the shop cannot be re-registered while it remains in the same occupation (see paragraph 14 above).

18. Change of occupation.—(a) In the event of a change in the occupation of a registered shop, the new occupier must forthwith notify the local authority of the change.

(b) In the event of any change being made in the partnership or among the directors of a partnership or company occupying a registered shop, particulars of the change must forthwith be notified to the local authority by the partnership or company.

In either event, whether or not notice of the change has been given to the local authority, the registration of the shop will be deemed to be cancelled after the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the change, unless within that period (or within such further time as may be allowed by the local authority) a fresh application for registration has been made.

Where such a fresh application is made as the result of a change in a partnership or among the directors of a company, the local authority may dispense with a statutory declaration in the case of any partner or director who has already made such a declaration in connection with a previous application to that authority in respect of that or any other shop in the area.

19. Modification of the provisions of the Shops Act, 1912, relating to the closing of shops on the weekly half-holiday, and the shop assistants' half-holiday.—The effect of these modifications is that in the case of registered shops:

(a) any shop which is required to close on the weekly half-holiday must close on a week-day other than Saturday; and shop assistants must be given their half-holiday on one week-day other than Saturday;

(b) any order fixing the day of the weekly half-holiday which is to apply to registered shops must in future contain a provision permitting Friday to be substituted for the day fixed by the order (or if the order fixes Friday, for a day other than Saturday to be substituted for Friday). Until such an order is made, the occupier of a registered shop which is required to close on the weekly half-holiday will be free to choose any week-day except Saturday as the day of the weekly half-holiday for his shop. The day chosen must be specified in a notice affixed in the shop.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR LONDON.

20. The general effect of these provisions is that the Common Council of the City of London and the London County Council may make orders permitting shops * to open up to 2 p.m. on Sunday in—

(a) districts in which it was customary, before January 1*st*, 1936, to hold street markets on Sunday;

(b) districts situated within the City of London or the Metropolitan boroughs of Bethnal Green, Shoreditch or Stepney, in which it was customary before January 1*st*, 1936, for the majority of the shops to be kept open, and in respect of which the Council concerned are satisfied that, having regard to the character and habits of the population in the district, the closing provisions of the Act would cause undue hardship.

Where such an order has been made, an occupier of a shop who avails himself of the permission to open his shop on Sunday will be required to close his shop * on another day of the week.

21. Provisions to be included in orders.—(1) The order may apply to all shops or to certain classes of shops in the whole or any part of the district defined in the order.

In the case of orders applying to districts referred to in (b) of the previous paragraph the Council are required to exclude from the order any class of shops in which the occupiers of a majority of the shops are opposed to the making of an order. For the purpose of determining this majority the views of occupiers of shops only (and not those of persons trading elsewhere than in a shop) are to be taken into account.

(2) The order must fix a "closing day," i.e., a week-day in the preceding week on which shops kept open on Sunday must be closed. Different closing days may be fixed for different classes of shops. The closing day must be a day other than the day fixed for the half-holiday by any Weekly Half-Holiday Order in force in the district. When the closing day is a day other than Saturday, the order must contain a provision permitting traders to close on Saturday in substitution for the day fixed by the order.

(3) The order must contain such provisions as may be necessary or expedient—

(i) to secure that when a notice has been given (see paragraph 22 below) the shop shall not be kept open on the closing day for a period of six months or such longer period as may be specified in the order, and

(ii) as to the exhibition of notices in the shop.

22. Conditions to be observed by traders.—When an order as above has been made for any district, an occupier of a shop to which the order applies may open his shop on Sunday up to 2 p.m. if he complies with the following conditions:

(a) he must previously have given notice in writing to the Council concerned of his intention to keep open on Sunday. There is no prescribed form of notice.

(b) he must keep his shop closed on the closing day fixed by the order, except for the purpose of those transactions which are exempted from the closing provisions of the Act (i.e., the closing day is treated as Sunday for the purposes of the Act);

(c) if his shop is required to be closed for the weekly half-holiday under the Shops Act, 1912, he must close for that half-holiday on a day other than the closing day;

MIXED SHOPS.

23. When several trades or businesses are carried on in the same shop, and these include any two or all of the following classes of trade or business:

(a) a trade or business subject to the closing provisions of the Act;

* The provisions also apply to retail trade or business carried on elsewhere than in a shop (e.g. at a stall in a street)—see paragraph 1 above.

SHOPS REGULATION

(b) a trade or business consisting of transactions wholly exempted from the closing provisions by virtue of the Act itself or of any order made by a local authority;

(c) a trade or business consisting of transactions partially exempted (i.e. for part of Sunday only) by virtue of the Act itself or of any order made by a local authority; the shop may be kept open for the purpose of the exempted transactions only, provided that the following conditions are complied with:

(1) A notice in the form prescribed by the Regulations (Form I) and in letters of not less than one inch in height must be exhibited in some conspicuous places outside and inside the shop in the following terms:

"SHOPS (SUNDAY TRADING RESTRICTION) ACT, 1936.

This shop is open on Sunday for....."

The purposes for which, and the hours during which, the shop is open must be stated, e.g. "This shop is open on Sunday for the sale of meals and refreshments from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m."

(2) So far as reasonably practicable no goods in connection with any trade or business are to be exhibited either inside or outside the shop at any time on Sunday when the shop cannot lawfully be kept open for the serving of customers with those goods.

These two conditions are not applicable in the case of places not being shops.

DELIVERY AND DISPATCH.

24. The delivery or dispatch for delivery on Sunday of goods sold retail (whether sold on the Sunday or previously) is prohibited at any time when a customer could not be served with those goods in the shop. It follows that the occupier of a shop may deliver or dispatch on Sunday only such classes of goods as he is permitted to sell on Sunday by virtue of the provisions of the Act, or of any order made by a local authority. When any class of goods may be sold during part of Sunday only (e.g. under a partial exemption order) such goods may be delivered or dispatched only during the hours in which sale is permitted. The prohibition of dispatch or delivery does not apply to goods sold wholesale.

25. Exceptions.—An exception is made to permit the delivery and dispatch of any goods on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day when either day falls on a Sunday.

Exceptions are also made to permit the dispatch or delivery at any time—

(a) of victuals, stores or necessaries required by any person for a ship or aircraft on her arrival at, or immediately before her departure from, a port or aerodrome, and

(b) of goods dispatched or delivered to a club for the purposes of the club;

(c) of goods required in case of illness.

EVENING CLOSING HOURS ON SUNDAY.

26. A shop which is wholly exempted from the provisions of the Act as to closing on Sunday, by virtue either of the provisions of the Act itself or of an order or certificate of a local authority, will be subject, as regards the evening closing hour, to the provisions of the Shops (Hours of Closing) Act, 1928,* and to the provisions of any closing order made by the local authority which fixes a closing hour for Sunday.

SALES TO CUSTOMERS PRESENT IN THE SHOP BEFORE THE HOUR OF CLOSING.

27. When a shop is permitted to open on Sunday up to a certain hour by virtue of the Act or of any order made under the Act by a local authority (e.g. a Jewish shop permitted to open up to 2 p.m. or a shop permitted by a partial exemption order or an order relating to a holiday resort to open up to a certain hour) a customer who was in the shop before the closing hour may be served after that hour, so long as he leaves the shop not later than half an hour after the closing hour.

* Under the Shops (Hours of Closing) Act, 1928, the normal hour of closing on Sunday is 8 p.m. The Act, however, contains exceptions and special provisions for certain trades or businesses, and also empowers local authorities to extend the hour of closing in certain circumstances. In any case of doubt as to the hour of closing on Sunday applicable to a particular shop, inquiry should be made of the local authority.

NOTICE RELATING TO ANY ORDER AFFECTING A SHOP.

28. An occupier whose shop is affected by an order made by a local authority under the Act (e.g. a partial exemption order, a holiday resort order, or an order made under the special provisions for London) must, if he opens on Sunday, keep conspicuously posted in his shop either a copy of the order or orders applying to the shop, or the notice prescribed by the Regulations (Form VI) stating the titles and terms of any orders applying to his shop.

This notice need not be exhibited by persons trading elsewhere than in a shop.

HAIRDRESSERS' SHOPS.

29. The whole of the Hairdressers' and Barbers' Shops (Sunday Closing) Act, 1930, was repealed as from May 1st, 1937, and hairdressers are now subject to the provisions of the present Act.

It should be noted that Jewish hairdressers (including those who carried on business on Sundays prior to May 1st, 1937, by virtue of a notice given under Section 3 of the 1930 Act) must if they wish to keep open on Sunday, either (a) obtain registration of the shop under the special provisions for persons of the Jewish religion (see paragraphs 12 to 19 above) or (b) if the shop is situated in a district in London in respect of which an order applying to hairdressers' shops has been made by the local authority, give notice to the Council concerned (see paragraphs 20 to 22 above). They will then be able, subject to compliance with the conditions applicable in either case, to open on Sundays but only until 2 p.m. and not for the whole of Sunday.

The provisions in the 1930 Act relating to attendance by hairdressers on Sunday in certain circumstances are re-enacted in the present Act with slight amendments. The effect of the amended provisions is to permit attendance on Sunday upon any person whose infirmity renders this necessary, and upon residents in clubs as well as in hotels.

COMPENSATORY HOLIDAYS FOR PERSONS EMPLOYED ON SUNDAY.

30. Holidays to be given.—(a) a person employed for more than four hours on a Sunday must (i) receive in respect of his employment on that Sunday a whole holiday on a week-day, either in the previous week or in the week beginning with that Sunday, and (ii) must not be employed in a shop on more than two other Sundays in the same month;

(b) a person employed for four hours or less on a Sunday must receive in respect of his employment on that Sunday a half-holiday on a week-day, either in the previous week or in the week beginning with that Sunday; i.e. on that week-day he must either not be employed before 1.30 p.m., or not be employed after 1.30 p.m.

In the case of a person already entitled to a statutory half-holiday (i.e. a shop assistant or young person entitled to a half-holiday under the Shops Acts, 1912 and 1934), the whole or half-holiday given in compensation for Sunday employment must be in addition to the statutory half-holiday. When such a person is entitled to a compensatory half-holiday and to a statutory half-holiday, he may be given a whole holiday in lieu of the two half-holidays.

The holiday to be given is a holiday from the business of the shop in which the person is employed on Sunday. The Secretary of State is advised that where a person is employed by the occupier of a shop on Sunday only, or for part only of the week including Sunday, the occupier is entitled to treat one of the days on which he does not employ the person as the day of the compensatory holiday, even though the person may be employed on that day by another employer; and that in such a case the second employer is under no statutory obligations to give the holiday.

It should be noted, however, that the prohibition of employment on more than two other Sundays in the same month applies to employment about the business of any shop, and (subject to the exceptions mentioned in paragraph 32 below) to all persons employed for more than four hours on a Sunday, including part-time employees.

31. Persons entitled to compensatory holidays.—Subject to the exceptions described in paragraph 32 below, the holiday must be given—

(a) to all persons employed on Sunday about the business of a shop which is open for the serving of customers on that day.

This includes not only shop assistants, but all persons employed about the business of the shop, e.g. in the service of customers, the receipt of orders, the handling, dispatch, collection or delivery of goods, in the clerical work of the shop, in the service or preparation of food in a restaurant, or in carrying messages or running errands. Further, all persons who work about the business of the occupier are regarded as employed even though they receive no reward for their labour. This covers, for example, members of the shopkeeper's family employed by him, and unpaid learners.

It will be observed that the provisions apply only to persons employed about the business of a shop which is open for the serving of customers on Sunday. The Secretary of State is advised that a shop is to be regarded as open for the serving of customers if orders are taken over the telephone or by other means, even though the door is closed and customers are not admitted. Provided, however, that the shop is closed for the serving of customers throughout the day, the provisions relating to compensatory holidays will not apply in the case of persons employed on Sunday in the closed shop, e.g. in stock-taking or in making up books.

(b) to persons wholly or mainly employed in connection with retail trade or business carried on elsewhere than in a shop.*

A holiday need not, for example, be given to a farm servant who is employed for a small part of his time on Sunday in connection with the sale of milk or other farm produce.

Note.—The Act does not authorise the employment of any person at any time when such employment would be unlawful under the Shops Acts, 1912 to 1934, or the Sunday Entertainments Act, 1932.

32. Exceptions.—The following classes of employees need not be given compensatory holidays.

(b) Shop assistants employed in any premises for the sale of refreshments to whom the provisions of the Shops Act, 1913, apply by virtue of the fact that the occupier of the premises has elected to adopt the provisions of that Act, and has given notice accordingly.

(c) Persons employed wholly or mainly † as milk roundsmen.

(e) Registered pharmacists subject to the following conditions :

(i) that they are not employed on Sunday except in connection with the sale of medicines or medical or surgical appliances ;

(ii) that the shop in which they are employed is required to open on Sundays in pursuance of a contract with the local National Health Insurance Committee ;

(iii) that they are not employed for more than two hours on Sunday ;

(iv) that they have not been employed on the previous Sunday ;

(v) that they are given time off in respect of the Sunday employment, i.e. they either are not employed before 10.30 a.m. or are not employed after 6 p.m. on one week-day (other than the day of the statutory half-holiday under the Shops Acts, 1912 and 1934), in the previous week, or in the week commencing with that Sunday.

33. Records.—The occupier must keep a record, in the form prescribed by the Regulations (Form VII), of (a) the names of, and hours worked on Sunday by, all the persons entitled to compensatory holidays, and (b) the respective days of the week on which those persons receive their compensatory holidays. Entries in the record must be made on the day (viz. the Sunday, or the day of the compensatory holiday, as the case may be) to which they relate, or if that is not practicable, on the following day. The form of record provides for all the entries for a month to be made on one sheet, and the records relating to any month must be preserved at the shop for a period of not less than six months.

* As to persons employed in selling from vehicles, see the third footnote on p. 3. [i.e. of the memorandum as published. This is now the footnote marked ‡ on p. 3738, ante].

SHOP REGULATION

RETAIL MEAT DEALERS' SHOPS (SUNDAY CLOSING) ACT, 1936.

34. The business of a retail dealer in butchers' meat is not subject to the provisions of the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936. The Sunday closing provisions applicable to retail dealers in butchers' meat are contained in the Retail Meat Dealers' Shops (Sunday Closing) Act, 1936, which came into force on January 1st, 1937.

35. Prohibition of sale on Sunday.—The Act prohibits the sale on Sunday of butchers' meat, not only in butchers' shops, but also at a stall or any other place (subject to the exemptions mentioned below).

36. Exemption for Jewish butchers.—A Jewish butcher may keep his shop open on Sunday for the sale of Kosher meat if he complies with the following conditions:

(a) he must be licensed for the sale of Kosher meat by the local Board of Shechita, or in the absence of any such Board, by a Committee appointed for the purpose by the local Jewish congregation established in accordance with Jewish law;

(b) he must not carry on the business of a retail dealer either in Kosher meat or in ordinary butchers' meat on Saturday, and, if he has a shop, he must keep the shop closed for the whole of Saturday;

(c) he must give notice to the local authority of his intention to carry on business on Sunday; and

(d) if he has a shop, he must put up a notice stating that it is open on Sunday for the purpose of selling Kosher meat, but is closed on Saturday.

(The form of notice is not prescribed.)

A Jewish butcher who avails himself of the exemption and is accordingly closed for the whole of Saturday, must not fix Saturday as the half-holiday for his shop assistants: and if his shop is required by an order of the local authority to close for the weekly half-holiday, he must close on a day other than Saturday. Any future weekly half-holiday order applying to butchers' shops will contain a provision enabling Jewish Kosher butchers who open on Sunday to substitute Friday for the day fixed by the order (or if Friday is the day fixed, to substitute a day other than Saturday). Until such an order has been issued a Jewish Kosher butcher who opens on Sunday is free to choose any day other than Saturday as the day of the weekly half-holiday for his shop. The day chosen must be specified in a notice affixed in the shop.

37. Dispatch and delivery.—The dispatch or delivery of butchers' meat from a shop is prohibited at any time when the shop may not be kept open for the serving of customers. Butchers' meat may not, therefore, be dispatched or delivered at any time on Sunday, except by Jewish butchers availing themselves of the exemption described above, who will be able to dispatch or deliver Kosher meat on Sunday but will be prohibited from dispatching or delivering any meat at any time on Saturday.

The prohibition of dispatch and delivery does not apply on Christmas Day or Christmas Eve when either of those days falls on a Sunday.

38. Exemption for supplies to ships or aircraft.—An exemption is provided for the sale, dispatch or delivery on Sunday of butchers' meat required for ships or aircraft on their arrival at or immediately before their departure from a port or aerodrome.

39. Definitions.—Butchers' meat is defined to mean "beef, mutton, veal, lamb or pork (including livers, heads, feet, hearts, lights, kidneys or sweetbreads) whether fresh, chilled, frozen or salted, and includes Kosher meat." The expression "Kosher meat" means "butchers' meat killed and prepared by the Jewish ritual method."

ENFORCEMENT.

40. Penalties.—The penalty for any contravention of or failure to comply with any of the provisions of either Act is, in the case of a first offence, a fine not exceeding £5 and, in the case of a second or subsequent offence, a fine not exceeding £20.

SHOPS REGULATION

41. Administration.—The administration of the Acts rests with local authorities who are shops authorities. These are in London elsewhere than the City, the London County Council; in the City of London, the Common Council; in boroughs outside London, the Town Council; in Urban Districts with a population of 20,000 or more, the District Council; and elsewhere, the County Council (except in districts where the County Council has delegated its powers to Urban or Rural District Councils).

Any inquiry as to any provision of the Acts should be made to the local authority responsible for the administration of the Acts in the district in which the shop is situated.

42. Powers of Inspectors.—An inspector appointed by a shops authority may, for the purpose of his duties under the Acts, enter and inspect a shop at any reasonable hour and make such inquiry as may be necessary to ascertain whether the law is being observed. He may call for the production of any notices or records which are required to be kept or exhibited. He may also examine any assistant, either alone or otherwise.

Every inspector must be furnished with a certificate of appointment and must produce it, if required to do so by the occupier or manager of the shop.

The occupiers of shops, their assistants and servants, must give an inspector all the facilities necessary for executing his duty, and render themselves liable to prosecution if they obstruct him.

Copies of this Memorandum, of the Shops (Sunday Trading Restriction) Act, 1936, of the Shops Regulations, 1937, of the Shops (Procedure for Jewish Tribunals) Regulations, 1937, of the Retail Meat Dealers' Shops (Sunday Closing) Act, 1936, and, if desired, of certain of the forms and notices prescribed by the Regulations (see list on page 22) (a) may be purchased either directly from H.M. Stationery Office, at the addresses shown on the front page of this Memorandum, or through any bookseller.

SHOP REGU TIO

H.

This notice must be exhibited in every retail shop or warehouse occupied by a retail trader about the business of which young persons are employed.

ABSTRACT OF PROVISIONS OF THE SHOPS ACT, 1934 (AS AMENDED BY PART II OF THE YOUNG PERSONS (EMPLOYMENT) ACT, 1938), RELATING TO THE EMPLOYMENT OF YOUNG PERSONS IN RETAIL SHOPS AND WAREHOUSES (SHOPS ACT, 1934, SECTION 7 (2)).

1. Young persons to whom the Act applies.

The Act applies to young persons under the age of 18 (other than children of school age whose employment is regulated by the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933) employed about the business of a shop, whether or not they receive any reward for their labour.

In the application of the Act to retail establishments,

(a) "Shop" means any premises in which any retail trade is carried on, and includes any warehouse occupied for the purpose of his trade by any person carrying on any retail trade or business.

(b) "Employment about the business of a shop" includes such employment both inside and outside the shop, and covers also employment by the occupier of a shop upon any work whether within the shop or outside it which is ancillary to the business carried on at the shop.

2. Maximum working hours for young persons under the age of 16.

No young person under the age of 16 may be employed about the business of a shop for more than 44 working hours in any week, except in one week during the Christmas season subject to the conditions described in paragraph 3.

3. Averaging of hours of young persons under the age of 16 during the Christmas season.

When a notice in the prescribed form has been exhibited in a shop, the weekly hours of young persons under the age of 16 may be averaged over a fortnight comprising the week in which Christmas Day falls and either the week before or the week after, subject to the conditions (i) that their working hours must not exceed 48 in either week, and (ii) that their total working hours for the fortnight must not exceed 88.

4. Normal maximum working hours for young persons between the ages of 16 and 18.

Subject to the exceptions described in paragraphs 5, 8 and 9, no young person between the ages of 16 and 18 may be employed about the business of a shop for more than 48 working hours in any week. These are the "normal maximum working hours" for these young persons.

5. Overtime.

On occasions of seasonal or exceptional pressure of work at any shop, young persons between the ages of 16 and 18 may be employed about the business of a shop overtime, i.e. in excess of the normal maximum working hours, subject to the following conditions:

(a) Overtime may not be worked in any shop in more than six weeks in a year.

(b) No individual young person may be employed overtime in any year for more than 50 working hours.

(c) No individual young person may be employed overtime in any week for more than 12 working hours.

Overtime may not be worked by any young person under the age of 16.

6. Mixed employment.

In determining the number of working hours in any week for which a young person has been employed about the business of any shop, any time worked in that week about the business of any other retail or wholesale shop or warehouse, or in a factory or in any of the employments which are regulated by Part I of the Young Persons (Employment) Act, 1938, must also be reckoned.

HOPS GULA-TION

Where a young person has previously been employed in a factory on any day, he must not be employed about the business of a shop on the same day for a longer period than will, together with the hours worked in the factory, complete the daily number of hours permitted by the Factories Act, 1937.

But except as above the Act does not apply to the employment in a factory of young persons whose hours of employment are regulated by the Factories Act, 1937.

7. Restrictions on night employment.

Every young person employed about the business of a shop must be allowed an interval of at least eleven consecutive hours in every period of twenty-four hours between midday and midday, and this interval must include the hours between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. (or 5 a.m. in the case of male young persons between the ages of 16 and 18 employed in connection with the collection or delivery of milk or bread or newspapers).

8. Special provisions as to the catering trade.

(1) The two following provisions apply only to young persons between the ages of 16 and 18 wholly or mainly employed in connection with the business of serving meals, intoxicating liquor or refreshments to customers for consumption on the premises.

When a notice in the prescribed form has been exhibited in a shop, the weekly hours of the young persons may be averaged over a fortnight, subject to the conditions (i) that their working hours must not exceed 60 in either week, (ii) that their total working hours for the fortnight must not exceed 96 hours, (iii) that no overtime may be worked during the fortnight, and (iv) that averaging may not take place in more than twelve fortnights beginning in any calendar year.

The young persons may be employed overtime in any week in the year when an averaging arrangement is not in force, but the overtime in any period of two successive weeks must not exceed 8 working hours. The limitation of the annual amount of overtime to be worked by the individual young person (see paragraph 5 (b)) remains unaffected.

An occupier of a shop may however by giving the prescribed notice elect that in lieu of this provision, the normal overtime provisions set out in paragraph 5 above shall apply to the young persons.

(2) Night employment in connection with the service of meals.

In the case of male young persons between the ages of sixteen and eighteen employed wholly or mainly in connection with the business of serving meals to customers for consumption on the premises, the restrictions on night employment set out in paragraph 7 are modified so as to permit employment for any period between 10 p.m. and midnight during which they are wholly employed in connection with the business of serving meals.

9. Special provisions as to the sale of supplies or accessories for aircraft, motor vehicles or cycles.

In the case of a shop where the business of selling such supplies or accessories for immediate use is the sole or principal retail business carried on in the shop, the following special provisions apply to young persons between the ages of sixteen and eighteen employed in connection with that business.

When it is not the principal retail business carried on in the shop, the special provisions apply to young persons between 16 and 18 who are wholly or mainly employed in connection with that business.

Where the prescribed notice has been given to the local authority, the hours of the young persons may be averaged, and the weekly hours specified in the scheme of hours set out in the notice (a copy of which must be exhibited in the shop) become the normal maximum working hours of the young persons, subject to the following conditions :

(i) The hours worked in any week, including any overtime worked in excess of the hours specified, must not exceed 54 working hours.

(ii) The total working hours (excluding overtime) in any period of three consecutive weeks must not exceed 144.

(iii) No young person may be employed overtime in any period of three consecutive weeks for more than 12 working hours.

The young persons may be employed overtime in any week in the year, whether or not an averaging system is in force, but no young person may be employed overtime in any period of three consecutive weeks for more than 12 working hours.

The limitation of the annual amount of overtime to be worked by the individual young person (see paragraph 5 above) remains unaffected by either of the special provisions.

An occupier of a shop may by giving the prescribed notice elect that in lieu of the special provision relating to overtime the normal overtime provisions set out in paragraph 5 above shall apply to the young persons (except where an averaging scheme is in force).

10. Weekly half-holidays.

Every young person wholly or mainly employed about the business of a shop for more than 25 hours in any week must be allowed in that week the weekly half-holiday provided for shop assistants by Section 1 of the Shops Act, 1912, i.e. on at least one week day in each week the young person must not be employed about the business of the shop after 1.30 p.m. (1 p.m. if the Shops Acts are applied to employment at the premises by the employer's election under Part I of the Young Persons (Employment) Act, 1938).

11. Meal Intervals.

Every young person wholly or mainly employed about the business of a shop must be allowed the intervals for meals prescribed for shop assistants by the First Schedule to the Shops Act, 1912, except that in the case of young persons, the period which may be worked without an interval is reduced. The intervals are as follows:

(1) No young person may be employed for more than five hours (or five and a half hours on the day of his weekly half holiday) without an interval of at least twenty minutes being allowed during the course thereof.

(2) Where a young person is employed during the hours from 11.30 a.m. to 2.30 p.m., an interval of not less than three-quarters of an hour (or one hour when the meal is not taken in the shop) must be allowed between those hours for dinner.

In the case of young persons employed in the sale of refreshments, or the retail sale of intoxicating liquors, or in any shop on a market day, or the day of an annual fair, the dinner interval may end not earlier than 11.30 a.m. or commence not later than 2.30 p.m.

(3) Where a young person is employed during the hours from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. an interval of not less than half an hour must be allowed between those hours for tea.

NOTE.—The provisions as to meal intervals do not apply to a shop where the only persons employed are members of the occupier's family, maintained by him and dwelling in his house.

12. Records.

Every occupier of a shop who employs young persons about the business of his shop must—

Either (a) keep a record in the prescribed form of the actual hours worked by, and the intervals for rest and meals allowed to, the young persons.

Or (b) exhibit in the shop a notice in the prescribed form specifying the daily hours to be worked by, and the intervals for rest and meals to be allowed to, the young persons. In that case he must record separately on the prescribed form any time worked outside the daily hours or during the intervals specified in the notice.

13. Definitions.

"Working hours" means the time during which the persons employed are at the disposal of the employer, exclusive of any intervals allowed for rest and meals.

"Week" means the period between midnight on Saturday night and midnight on the succeeding Saturday night.

"Year" means the period between midnight on the last Saturday night in the month of December and midnight on the last Saturday night in the next month of December.

14. Administration of the Act.

The provisions of the Act relating to hours of young persons are administered by the local authorities responsible for the enforcement of the Shops Acts. Enquiries should accordingly be addressed in London outside the City to the London County Council, in the City of London to the Common Council, in Boroughs to the Town Council, in Urban or Rural Districts where the District Council is the Shops authority, to that Council, and elsewhere to the County Council.

RURAL DISTRICT COUNCILS (SLAUGHTER-HOUSES) ORDER, 1924.

PUBLIC HEALTH (MEAT) REGULATIONS, 1924.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to Circulars 547 and 552 of the 29th December, 1924, and to say that he has received a large number of communications both from local authorities and from other correspondents as to the proper interpretation of the statutory provisions put in force in rural districts by the Rural District Councils (Slaughter-houses) Order, and of the Public Health (Meat) Regulations (a). It will, of course, be appreciated that any question as to the legal interpretation of the provisions of the statutes and the Regulations can only be decided by the courts, but the Minister thinks that it may be useful to set out for the information of local authorities the intention of the department and the construction which as he is advised may properly be given to the provisions in question.

1. Rural District Councils (Slaughter-houses) Order.

[This part of the circular is out of date since the enactment of sections 57 et seq. of the Food and Drugs Act, 1938 : see notes to those sections, ante, pp. 1392 et seq.]

2. Public Health (Meat) Regulations.

Article 2 (1) (Definition of Meat).—The Minister's intention in making the Regulations was that, apart from the special case of bacon and ham, they should apply to what is ordinarily known as butcher's meat, that is to say the raw and untreated edible parts of the carcases of slaughtered cattle, swine, sheep, and goats. Questions have been raised whether the Regulations apply to rabbits, poultry, fish, butter, margarine, and cheese. It is clear that the definition of meat would not include these articles, and the Minister thinks that local authorities might also properly treat cooked meat, lard, sausages, and other preparations of or containing meat as outside the scope of the Regulations.

SLAUGHTER-HOUSES

Article 20 (5).—It was not contemplated that this provision should be construed as requiring all butchers' shops to be provided with glass fronts, and the precautions which it may be reasonable to require under this provision must depend on the circumstances of individual cases. It seems to the Minister that in its enforcement the corresponding provisions of Article 19 (b) and (d) should be borne in mind and that the same general standard of freedom from contamination should be aimed at both for shops and for stalls.

The steps necessary to protect meat against contamination must depend on the circumstances of the shop or stall in relation to the sources of possible contamination and also on the conditions under which trade is carried on. In no circumstances, however, should meat be allowed to project outside the limits of the wall or screen of the shop or stall, where it would be especially exposed to contamination from the street, and it should be kept as far within those limits as is practicable. Where meat has to be kept near to an open window the general rule should be that it should be covered with clean muslin or other suitable material, but local authorities will no doubt realise that, when a brisk trade is being carried on, this precaution may have to be suspended so that meat may be readily accessible.

Application to Ships.—The Minister is advised that each deck of a ship would in itself form one or more separate "compartments" and that meat and cattle for example may properly be carried on different parts of the same deck without any special covering of the meat, if those parts are effectively separated.

Article 21 (2) (a).—The word "ground" is not intended to apply to any part of a ship, vehicle, or building. (In Article 19 (e) where the possibility of a stall being inside a market building is contemplated, the expression used is, "ground or floor.")

SLAUGHTER OF ANIMALS ACT, 1933.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw the Council's attention to the Slaughter of Animals Act, 1933 (a), which will come into operation on January 1st, 1934. There are certain steps which are necessary or expedient for bringing the Act into operation, such as passing the resolutions and issuing the licences authorised by the Act, and section 37 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, empowers Local Authorities to take these steps in advance.

The Local Authorities for enforcing the Act are, for the City of London and the Metropolitan Cattle Market, the Common Council, elsewhere in London the Metropolitan Borough Councils, and, outside London, Town Councils and District Councils. The Act confers new powers on them, and it also imposes new duties upon them, as well as upon persons carrying on slaughter-houses and knackers' yards.

2. The subject-matter of the Act is not, however, new to Local Authorities. Outside London it was already the statutory duty of all Local Authorities to make byelaws for preventing cruelty in slaughter-houses. The greater number of Local Authorities had done so, and more than six hundred had made byelaws requiring animals, or some animals, to be stunned. Of these, nearly five hundred Local Authorities outside London, and in London the London County Council, had by their byelaws required the use of mechanical stunning instruments for all or most animals, which is the central requirement of the new Act.

3. Section 1 of the Act requires that animals in slaughter-houses and knackers' yards are to be stunned before slaughter, and that the stunning shall be by a mechanically operated instrument, which is defined to include an electrical instrument. This requirement, however, will not apply to sheep unless the Local Authority apply it by resolution; while goats can be excluded by resolution (see paragraph 6 below). The requirement applies to pigs; but, if electrical energy is not available, this is a defence to proceedings, unless the prosecution show that it could reasonably be made available. Slaughter by a Jew or a Mohammedan for his co-religionists is exempt from this section; but, as regards the former, only if he is licensed by a Commission which is to be established under the First Schedule to the Act.

4. The Act impliedly supersedes byelaws covering the same ground, but existing byelaws dealing with matters not covered by the Act are not affected, nor is the power (and duty) to make byelaws for the licensing and registering of slaughter-houses and for securing their sanitary condition. The model byelaws are being revised in the light of the Act.

5. The Act places on Local Authorities the new duty of licensing slaughtermen, and it is desirable that every Local Authority should notify this requirement to persons carrying on slaughter-houses and knackers' yards, and to any organisation known to them as representing journeymen, in time for the first applications for licences to be made and dealt with this year. The duration, availability, and cost, of licences are set out in detail in section 3 of the Act. Two important points to notice are that a licence, once granted, is available throughout England and Wales, but must be produced on demand to the Local Authority in whose district the licensee is working, and that an appeal to Petty Sessions lies against the refusal of the grant or renewal, or the suspension or revocation, of a licence.

6. Section 2 of the Act empowers Local Authorities, as is above mentioned, to exclude goats by resolution from section 1, and requires them within twelve months of the passing of the Act to consider whether they will by resolution apply section 1 to sheep. These resolutions are made subject to formalities which, with slight modification, are familiar to Local Authorities as occurring in the Third Schedule to the Public Health Act, 1925. For their convenience, forms of resolution and notice are given in the appendix to this circular letter. It is expressly provided that a Local Authority may rescind or vary a resolution on compliance with the same formalities, and a copy of every original or rescinding or varying resolution has to be sent to the Minister. A newly constituted Local Authority, or a Local Authority whose area is extended, must consider the position within three months.

7. Section 4 and the Second Schedule give statutory force, for both slaughter-houses and knackers' yards, to requirements most of which, apart from slight differences, have long been normal in the byelaws of Local Authorities with respect to slaughter-houses. Other provisions of the Act are that Local Authorities who have established slaughter-houses are empowered by section 6 to employ persons to slaughter or stun animals, and to make reasonable charges for the services of the persons so employed, and that a right of inspection is given (section 7) for the purpose of enforcing the Act to the Medical Officer of Health or Sanitary Inspector at any time when business is, or appears to be, in progress, or is usually carried on. This last provision is similar to one which has for a long time been inserted in byelaws with respect to slaughter-houses.

Further copies of this Circular may be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office, at any of the addresses shown below, or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
E. H. RHODES,
Assistant Secretary.

No charge for briefs to, or attendance of, counsel shall be allowed.

In any case in which the arbitrator determines the amount of costs to be paid to the claimant in the arbitration, these rules and the scales herein contained, shall apply to and govern such determination of costs by the arbitrator.

5. These rules shall not apply to an arbitration in which an arbitrator has been appointed before the rules come into operation.

6. Nothing in these rules shall authorise an arbitrator to hear counsel or expert witnesses, except in such cases as the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries direct, and if counsel or expert witnesses are heard by an arbitrator without such direction, no costs shall be allowed in respect thereof.

7.—(1) If, having regard to the nature or importance of the case, the interests of the parties, the general conduct of the proceedings, and the skill, labour, and responsibility involved, the taxing officer shall on special grounds consider the costs or allowances provided by any of the scales inadequate, he may make such further or increased allowances as he shall in his discretion consider reasonable.

(2) The taxing officer may in any case where the owner or claimant is not represented by a solicitor on the arbitration make such allowance as he may consider reasonable towards the charges or expenses incurred by the owner or claimant in connection with the arbitration, but not exceeding in the aggregate the maximum amount which could otherwise have been allowed under the relevant scale.

8. These rules and the scales of costs contained herein shall not apply to the fees or remuneration properly payable to or charged by the arbitrator, which fees, if and

General.

1.—(1) These regulations may be cited as the Land Settlement (Annuities) Regulations, 1919.

(2) In these regulations, "the council" means the council of a county or the council of a county borough by whom an annuity is payable under the Act of 1919.

(3) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

Register of Annuitants.

2.—(1) The council shall keep a register (hereinafter called the "Register of Annuitants") of all persons who are entitled to an annuity and to whom an annuity certificate has been issued under the Act of 1919.

(2) The register of annuitants shall contain the following particulars:—

(a) the name, address and description of each annuitant, a statement of the amount of the annuity to which he is entitled, and the number and date of the annuity certificate issued to him;

(b) the date on which any annuity certificate issued to an annuitant was cancelled upon the redemption of the annuity or otherwise.

(3) The register of annuitants shall be open to public inspection at all reasonable times free of charge.

Annuity Certificates.

3.—(1) Every annuity certificate shall be in the form A contained in the First Schedule to these regulations or in a form substantially to the like effect.

(2) If an annuity certificate is worn out or damaged the council on delivery up thereof may issue a new certificate in the same terms to the person entitled to the annuity in respect of which the certificate was issued.

(3) If an annuity certificate is lost or destroyed the council on proof thereof to their satisfaction and on receiving an indemnity if they so require against the claims of all persons deriving title under the certificate lost or destroyed shall give a new certificate in the same terms to the person entitled to the annuity in respect of which the certificate was issued.

(4) Where two or more persons are jointly entitled to an annuity, only one annuity certificate shall be issued in respect thereof.

SMALL HOLDINGS AND ALLOTMENTS

(5) Upon the redemption of any annuity by the council, the annuitant shall deliver to the council the annuity certificate relating to it, and the council shall thereupon cancel the annuity certificate.

Transfer of Annuities.

4.—(1) The transfer of an annuity or part of an annuity shall be by deed in the form B contained in the First Schedule to these regulations or in a form substantially to the like effect.

(2) Every deed of transfer shall be duly stamped and the consideration shall be truly stated therein.

(3) The deed of transfer shall be delivered to and retained by the council, and the council shall enter a memorial thereof in a book to be called "Register of Transfers of Annuities" and shall endorse on the deed of transfer a notice of that entry.

(4) The council shall, upon receipt of the deed of transfer duly executed, together with the certificate issued in respect of the annuity, enter the name of the transferee in the register of annuitants and shall issue a new certificate or certificates to the transferee, or to the transferor and transferee, as the case may require.

(5) Until the deed of transfer and the annuity certificate have been delivered to the council as aforesaid, the council shall not be affected by the transfer and the transferee shall not be entitled to receive any payment of the annuity.

(6) The council before registering a transfer of the whole or part of an annuity may, if they think fit, require evidence by statutory declaration or otherwise of the title of any person claiming to make the transfer.

Closing of Register of Transfers.

5. The council may close the register of transfers of annuities for a period not exceeding fifteen days immediately before the thirty-first day of March and the thirtieth day of September in any year respectively, and notwithstanding the receipt by the council during those periods of any deed of transfer of an annuity, the half-yearly payment next falling due may be made to the persons registered as annuitants on the date of the closing of the register of transfers of annuities.

Transmission of Annuities.

6.—(1) Any person becoming entitled to an annuity by reason of the death or bankruptcy of an annuitant or by any lawful means other than a transfer may, upon the production of such evidence of title as the council may require, either be registered as an annuitant in respect of the annuity or instead of being himself registered may make such transfer of the annuity as the annuitant could have made, and the council shall issue an annuity certificate accordingly.

(2) Until such evidence as aforesaid has been furnished to the council, the council shall not be affected by a transmission of the annuity and no person claiming by virtue thereof shall be entitled to receive any payment of the annuity.

(3) Where two or more persons are registered as annuitants in respect of one annuity, they shall be deemed to be joint owners with right of survivorship between them.

Fees.

7. Fees not exceeding those specified in the second schedule to these regulations may be taken by the council in the cases therein mentioned.

Sinking Fund for Redemption of Annuities and Repayment of Borrowed Money.

8.—(1) The council shall, as from the date on which an annuity is granted, make provision by payments out of the county fund or out of the borough fund and rate, as the case may be, for the formation of a sinking fund to be applicable to the redemption of the annuity and the repayment of any moneys borrowed by the council for the redemption of the annuity.

For the purposes of such sinking fund, the value of an annuity shall be deemed to be its capitalised value at twenty-five years' purchase, or such other number of years' purchase as may from time to time be approved by the Minister of Health after consultation with the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

(2) The sinking fund shall be formed and maintained by the payment to the fund of such equal yearly or half-yearly sums as with accumulations at a rate not exceeding three pounds ten shillings per centum per annum, or such other rate as may from time to time be approved by the Minister of Health, will be sufficient within the prescribed period to redeem the annuity and to repay any moneys borrowed for such redemption.

(3) The sums so paid to the sinking fund, together with the interest on the investments of the fund shall, unless applied in redemption of the annuity or the repayment of moneys borrowed for such redemption, be immediately invested in securities in which trustees are by law for the time being authorised to invest trust money, or in mortgages, bonds, debentures, debenture stock, stock, or other securities (not being securities payable to bearer) duly issued by any local authority as defined by section 34 of the Local Loans Act, 1875, but exclusive in every case of the securities of the council, the council being at liberty from time to time to vary and transpose such investments.

(4) The council may at any time apply the whole or any part of the sinking fund in or towards the redemption of the annuity, or the repayment of moneys borrowed for such redemption. Provided that the council shall pay into the fund each year or half-year (as the case may be) and accumulate a sum equal to the interest which would have been produced by such sinking fund or part of such sinking fund so applied if invested at the rate per centum per annum on which the yearly or half-yearly payments to the sinking fund are based.

(5) If in any year the income of the sinking fund is less than, or is in excess of, the income which would be derived from the amount invested if the same were invested at the rate per centum per annum on which the yearly or half-yearly payments to the fund are based, any deficiency shall be made good by the council, and any excess may be applied towards the yearly or half-yearly payments.

(6) In any year when the interest arising from the investments of the sinking fund is sufficient to pay the annuity and the interest payable by the council on moneys borrowed for its redemption, the council shall not be required to make any payment to the sinking fund, and the interest on the investments of the fund may be applied in payment of the annuity or of the interest payable by the council on moneys borrowed as aforesaid.

(7) Any expenses connected with the formation, maintenance, investment, application, management of or otherwise in relation to the sinking fund, shall be paid by the council in addition to the payments hereinbefore provided for.

(8) "The prescribed period" means such period not exceeding eighty years from the date of the grant of the annuity as the council (subject to the provisions of section 15 of the Act of 1919) with the sanction of the Minister of Health shall determine.

Return respecting Sinking Fund to the Minister of Health.

9. Once in every year, within 42 days after the thirty-first day of March, if during the twelve months next preceding any sum is required to be paid to a sinking fund formed in pursuance of these regulations, the clerk to the council shall send to the Minister of Health an abstract of the accounts of the council relating thereto in such form as the said Minister may prescribe or require.

THE ALLOTMENTS (APPROVED SOCIETIES) REGULATIONS, 1925, DATED NOVEMBER 10, 1925, MADE BY THE TREASURY UNDER SECTION 2 (8) OF THE ALLOTMENTS ACT, 1925.

Whereas by sub-section (8) of section 2 of the Allotments Act, 1925 (a) (15 & 16 Geo. 5, c. 61), it is enacted that for the purposes of that Act "approved society" means—

(a) a society registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, 1893 to 1913, or the Friendly Societies Acts, 1896 to 1924, one of whose objects is the provision of allotments, and which, by its constitution or otherwise, is restricted in relation to the rate of interest on share and loan capital and the distribution of profits amongst its members so as to comply with regulations made in that behalf by the Treasury; or

(b) a company registered under the Companies Acts, 1908 to 1918 (a), which does not trade for profit, or whose constitution forbids the issue of any share or loan capital with interest or dividend exceeding the rate for the time being prescribed by the Treasury.

Now, therefore, the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury by virtue of the power vested in them by the said section and of all other powers enabling them in that behalf hereby make the following regulations, which may be cited as the Allotments (Approved Societies) Regulations, 1925:—

(1) The rate of interest which may be paid by an approved society upon any share or loan capital raised after the date of these Regulations shall not exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, such rate being a gross rate calculated before deduction of income tax.

(2) The distribution of profits amongst members of an approved society shall be limited in any year to the payment of a dividend not exceeding the rate of five per cent. per annum upon any share capital of the society for the time being subscribed and paid up, such rate being a gross rate calculated before deduction of income tax.

MODEL RULES FOR THE COUNCILS OF BOROUGHS AND URBAN DISTRICTS AS TO ALLOTMENTS (b).

The making of Rules by a Borough or District Council under section 28 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, is optional. Such Rules require to be confirmed by the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries before they can be of any force.

Any Council proposing to make Rules should submit a draft copy to the Ministry; a copy of the Model Rules can be used for this purpose. Where it is proposed to make alterations of any importance it may save time and correspondence if the circumstances are explained when the draft is submitted.

In considering the Model Rules, it should be remembered that the application of the Rules is not limited to land already acquired for allotments. For this reason, although some of the provisions in the Rules may seem to be unnecessary or inappropriate to the land already acquired, it may, nevertheless, be desirable to include them.

In the case of very small allotments it may be found convenient to dispense with a written agreement and rely on section 28 (4) of the Act of 1908, which provides that Rules for the time being in force under that section shall be binding on all persons whatsoever. For this reason it is desirable that the Rules should cover, as far as possible, all matters which would be dealt with by written agreements for letting allotments.

Provisions as to Market Garden Improvements.

Where the use of the land for market-gardening is reasonable, the Ministry thinks no obstacle should be thrown in the way of such use, provided that terms as to compensation are arranged which are equitable as between tenant and Council, having regard to all the circumstances of the case and in particular to the extent of the Council's interest in the land.

Under section 47 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, the tenant of an allotment has a right to compensation at the end of his tenancy for—

(1) planting of standard or other fruit trees permanently set out;
(2) planting of fruit bushes permanently set out;

(a) See now the Companies Act, 1929 (2 Halsbury's Statutes 775).

(b) This series of rules was issued in 1921. It is understood that it has not been reprinted, but that it is supplied from the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries with an indication of amendments required by later legislation.

SMALL HOLDINGS AND ALLOTMENTS

(3) planting of strawberry plants ;
(4) planting of asparagus, rhubarb, and other vegetable crops which cont productive for two or more years ;

unless such improvements are expressly prohibited by the Council in writing and prohibition is not over-ruled by the Minister under Sub-section (1) of that section. compensation is based on the value to a hypothetical tenant, which might be siderably in excess of the value to the Council or the actual incoming tenant.

If the allotment is by written agreement " let or treated as a market garden " there is no provision in the lease prohibiting the erection or enlargement of build for the purpose of the trade or business of a market gardener, the tenant could be prevented from carrying out such improvements and claiming compensation f the Council (see sections 48 and 49 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923).

The right of the Council to claim against their landlord for these improvemen regulated by sections 48 and 49 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, section 47 (2) of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, as amended by Land Settlement (Facilities) Act, 1919 (see section 23 and Second Schedule), accordingly Councils must contemplate the possibility of their right to claim b excluded, or limited to the actual value to the landlord, which in the case of land for building might be insignificant.

The Ministry recognises that Councils who allow their tenants to grow ma garden crops must take precautions to prevent their having to pay large sum compensation to their tenants, which they may be unable to recover. Model Ru has therefore been drawn up with the view of allowing reasonable freedom to tenant while at the same time protecting the Council from any serious loss for payment of compensation. The advisability of including this Rule should be c sidered if there is any likelihood of the allotments or any of them being used growing market garden crops.

MODEL RULES FOR PARISH COUNCILS AS TO ALLOTMENTS (a).

The making of Rules by a Parish Council under section 28 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, is optional. Such Rules require to be confirmed by the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries before they can be of any force.

Any Council proposing to make Rules should submit a draft copy to the Ministry; a copy of the Model Rules can be used for this purpose. Where it is proposed to make alterations of any importance, it may save time and correspondence if the circumstances are explained when the draft is submitted.

In considering the Model Rules, it should be remembered that the application of the Rules is not limited to land already acquired for allotments. SMALL HOLDING AND ALLOTMENTS

Provisions as to Market Garden Improvements.

Where the use of the land for market-gardening is reasonable, the Ministry thinks no obstacle should be thrown in the way of such use, provided that terms as to compensation are arranged which are equitable as between tenant and Council, having regard to all the circumstances of the case and in particular to the extent of the Council's interest in the land.

Under section 47 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, the tenant of an allotment has a right to compensation at the end of his tenancy for—

(1) planting of standard or other fruit trees permanently set out;
(2) planting of fruit bushes permanently set out;
(3) planting of strawberry plants;
(4) planting of asparagus, rhubarb, and other vegetable crops which continue productive for two or more years;

unless such improvements are expressly prohibited by the Council in writing and such prohibition is not overruled by the Minister under subsection (1) of that section. The compensation is based on the value to a hypothetical tenant, which might be considerably in excess of the value to the Council or the actual incoming tenant.

If the allotment is by written agreement "let or treated as a market garden" and there is no provision in the lease prohibiting the erection or enlargement of buildings for the purpose of the trade or business of a market gardener, the tenant could not be prevented from carrying out such improvements and claiming compensation from the Council (see sections 48 and 49 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923).

The right of the Council to claim against their landlord for these improvements is regulated by sections 48 and 49 of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, and section 47 (2) of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, as amended by the Land Settlement (Facilities) Act, 1919 (see section 23 and Second Schedule), and accordingly Councils must contemplate the possibility of their right to claim being excluded, or limited to the actual value to the landlord, which in the case of land ripe for building might be insignificant.

The Ministry recognises that Councils who allow their tenants to grow market garden crops must take precautions to prevent their having to pay large sums in compensation to their tenants, which they may be unable to recover. Model Rule 8 has therefore been drawn up with the view of allowing reasonable freedom to the tenant while at the same time protecting the Council from any serious loss for the payment of compensation. The advisability of including this Rule should be considered if there is any likelihood of the allotments or any of them being used for growing market garden crops.

SMALL HOLDINGS AND ALLOTMENTS

Division of the land into Allotments.

3. The Council, before giving notice of their intention to let any land for allotments, shall divide the land, and shall cause a plan to be prepared showing each allotment, and distinguishing it by a separate number.

Notices to be given for the letting of the Allotments.

4. The Council shall give public notice by bills or placards, posted in some conspicuous places in the parish or otherwise exhibited therein, setting forth the particulars as to any allotments which they propose to let.

Such notices shall specify the allotments to be let and the size thereof, the rent to be paid for the same, the name and address of the Clerk to the Council to whom applications for the hiring of an allotment or for forms of application are to be sent, and the last day for receiving an application for an allotment.

If any special condition is to apply to the allotments, or any of them, the notice shall specify such condition, or state where copies of the Form of Agreement for Letting for such allotments may be seen.

If the tenant is to pay for tenant-right or compensation for improvements, this fact and the amount, if then ascertained, shall be stated in the notice.

Rules as to the letting of the Allotments, and for preventing any undue preference in the letting thereof.

5. The Council shall not let any allotment unless and until notice that they propose to let the same has been duly given in pursuance of the Rule in that behalf at least two weeks before the last day for receiving an application for such allotment.

Every application for an allotment shall be in the Form appended to these Rules, and shall be sent or delivered to the Clerk to the Council.

In letting an allotment for which there are two or more applicants eligible to become tenants and likely to keep the allotment in a proper state of cultivation, preference shall be given to an applicant who does not hold an allotment or agricultural land (other than a garden of 20 poles or less attached to his residence) either from the Council or otherwise over an applicant who does hold such land, but subject to such preference the tenant shall be determined by the drawing of lots by the Council. A quitting tenant of land shall for the purposes of this Rule be treated as not holding that land.

Agreements for letting Allotments.

6. An agreement to let an allotment to an applicant may be signed by the Clerk to the Council on behalf of the Council, and may be in the Form set out in the Schedule to these Rules.

General Conditions under which the Allotments are to be Cultivated.

7. The tenant of an allotment shall comply with the following conditions:

(1) He shall keep the allotment clean and in a good state of cultivation and fertility and in good condition.

(3) He shall not underlet, assign, or part with the possession of the allotment or any part of it without the written consent of the Council.

(4) He shall not without the written consent of the Council cut or prune any timber or other trees, or take, sell, or carry away any mineral, gravel, sand, or clay.

(5) He shall keep every hedge that forms part of the allotment properly cut and trimmed, keep all ditches properly cleansed, and shall maintain and keep in repair any other fences and any gates on the allotment.

(6) He shall not without the written consent of the Council erect any building on the allotment.

(7) He shall not without the written consent of the Council break up any pasture.

(8) He shall not use barbed wire for a fence adjoining any path set out by the Council for the use of occupiers of the allotments.

(9) He shall, as regards the allotment, observe and perform all conditions and covenants contained in the lease under which the Council hold the land.

(10) He shall observe and perform any other special condition which the Council consider necessary to preserve the allotment from deterioration, and of which notice to applicants for the allotment is given in accordance with these Rules.

Special Rule as to Market Garden Improvements.

8. Except where it is otherwise expressly agreed in writing, an allotment shall be held subject to the following conditions, which shall be endorsed on the agreement for letting the allotment:

(1) the allotment shall not be let or treated as a market garden, but if the tenant executes any of the following improvements,* viz.:

(a) planting of standard or other fruit trees permanently set out;
(b) planting of fruit bushes permanently set out;
(c) planting of strawberry plants;
(d) planting of asparagus, rhubarb, and other vegetable crops which continue productive for two or more years;

he shall on the determination of the tenancy be entitled to receive from the Council such sum as fairly represents the increase (if any) in value of the allotment to the Council due to these improvements having regard particularly to the then unexpired term of the lease (if any) under which the land is held by the Council.

(2) The tenant may in lieu of claiming compensation for any fruit or other trees or bushes planted or acquired by him remove the same before the determination of the tenancy, levelling the surface of the land and restoring the same to a proper state and condition and making good any damage caused by the removal.

(3) For the purpose of protecting the Council from claims for compensation for the undermentioned improvements, other than such compensation as is provided by paragraph (1), the following improvements are to be treated as prohibited for the purpose of Section 47 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act, 1908, viz.:

(a) planting of standard or other fruit trees permanently set out;
(b) planting of fruit bushes permanently set out;
(c) planting of strawberry plants;

(c) the tenant is resident more than one mile out of the parish.

The tenancy may also be determined by the Council or the tenant at the end of any year of the tenancy by twelve months' notice in writing.

Application of these Rules.

12. These Rules shall not apply to any land let to an Association or to any allotment which the Council, under special circumstances to be recorded in their minutes, may exempt from these Rules, but shall apply, except as aforesaid, to an allotment though held under a tenancy made before these Rules come into operation, but not so as to affect any right to compensation for an improvement executed before these Rules come into operation.

SUPERANNUATION.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

S. R. & O., 1936, No. 651.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND CIVIL SERVICE (SUPERANNUATION) RULES, 1936. DATED JUNE 24TH, 1936.

The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, after consultation with the Minister of Health and the Secretary of State for Scotland, in pursuance of the powers conferred on them by Section 9 of the Superannuation Act, 1935 (a), and of every other power enabling them in this behalf, hereby make the following Rules:

PART I.—GENERAL RULES.

1. These rules may be cited as the Local Government and Civil Service (Superannuation) Rules, 1936.

2.—(1) In these rules, unless the context otherwise requires, the following expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them—

"the Civil Service" means the permanent Civil Service of the State;

"officer" includes "servant";

"superannuation allowance" includes "pension"; and

"local superannuation enactment" means an enactment (including a scheme made thereunder or in pursuance thereof) relating to the superannuation of officers of a local authority.

(2) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these rules as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. These rules shall apply to any local authority to which, upon the application of that authority, the Treasury has directed that they shall apply.

4. The Superannuation Acts and every local superannuation enactment shall, so far as applicable to an officer qualified for or entitled to the benefit of these rules, have effect subject to the modifications made by these rules.

5. If any question arises between an officer and any local authority as to his right to any payment from that local authority under these rules or as to the amount of such payment, the question may be referred by either party, where the local authority is a local authority in England or Wales, to the Minister of Health, and where the local authority is a local authority in Scotland, to the Secretary of State for Scotland, who may determine the question.

PART II.—RULES APPLICABLE TO PENSIONABLE OFFICERS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES WHO BECOME ESTABLISHED CIVIL SERVANTS.

6. In this part of these rules—

(a) the expression "the officer" means a person who, being a pensionable officer of a local authority to which these rules apply, becomes an established civil servant (otherwise than in the capacity of an officer of the Unemployment Assistance Board or of an officer to whom section 11 (9) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1930 (b), applies) and as respects whom it is certified to the Treasury at the time of his appointment by the Department of the Civil Service to which he is appointed that, with the consent of the local authority to his leaving their service, either

(i) he was appointed on account of his special qualifications; or

(ii) he was selected from other candidates by a selection board, and his local government service was a material factor in his selection;

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

(b) the expression " the responsible local authority " means the local authority in whose service the officer was immediately before his appointment to the Civil Service.

7.—(1) If the officer on ceasing to be employed by the responsible local authority becomes entitled to a return of contributions under any provision of the local superannuation enactment applicable to him, and if, within one month after his appointment to the Civil Service takes effect he gives notice in writing to the responsible local authority relinquishing such right, the said provision for the return of contributions shall, subject to the provisions of these rules, cease to have effect in relation to him and any person claiming under him :

Provided that if the officer dies on or before the last day on which he may give notice as aforesaid and the Treasury are satisfied that he had decided to relinquish his right to a return of contributions, the Treasury may sanction the waiver of such notice in writing, and thereupon the officer shall be deemed to have given notice in accordance with the terms of this rule.

(2) The responsible local authority shall immediately inform the Department of the Civil Service in which the officer is employed of any such notice in writing as aforesaid which has been received by that authority.

8.—(1) For the purpose of determining whether the officer has served for the minimum period prescribed by the Superannuation Acts as necessary for any retiring award to be made to him or (in the case of death) to his legal personal representatives, any service of the officer which was pensionable local authority service for the purposes of the local superannuation enactment applicable to him at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service shall, subject as hereinafter provided, be deemed to have been service in an established capacity in the Civil Service :

Provided that this paragraph shall not apply to—

(a) any service in respect of which the officer has made contributions under a local superannuation enactment if those contributions have been returned to him and have not been subsequently refunded by him prior to his entry into the Civil Service or if having a right to the return of them, he has not relinquished that right under these rules ; or

(b) any service which has been taken into account in the calculation of any superannuation allowance awarded to him under a local superannuation enactment before his appointment to the Civil Service or of any annual allowance awarded to him as compensation for the loss of a whole time office or of any two or more offices which in the aggregate involved the whole-time service of the officer.

(2) When any such retiring award falls to be calculated upon the number of completed years served by the officer, the amount of such award shall be calculated only upon the number of completed years served by him in an established capacity in the Civil Service.

(3) If the aggregate pensionable service as determined under paragraph (1) of this rule amounts to at least ten years but service in an established capacity in the Civil Service is less than ten years, there may be granted to the officer under and subject to the Superannuation Acts an annual superannuation compensation or retiring allowance equal to one-eightieth of the annual salary and emoluments of his office for each completed year of his service in an established capacity in the Civil Service.

(4) For the purposes of this rule, the expression " retiring award " includes any payment whether of an annual allowance or of an additional allowance which may be made to an established civil servant and any payment of a gratuity which may be made to the legal personal representatives of an established civil servant under the Superannuation Acts.

9.—(1) On the retirement of the officer from the Civil Service in such circumstances as qualify him for the grant of an annual superannuation allowance under the Superannuation Acts as modified by these rules then, subject as hereinafter provided—

(a) if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service he was subject to the Local Government and other Officers Superannuation Act, 1922 (a), or to that Act as modified by Section 124 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (a), or Section 7 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, he shall be entitled to receive from the responsible local authority an annuity payable during life and calculated at the rate of 1/60th of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each completed year (if any) of his contributing service under the relevant statutory provisions, and 1/120th (or such higher rate not exceeding 1/60th as the responsible local authority may, by resolution, passed before, or within six months after, his appointment to the Civil Service, have determined) of such emoluments in respect of each completed year, or part of a year exceeding six months (if any), of his non-contributing service;

(b) if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service he was subject to the Fire Brigade Pensions Acts, 1925 to 1929 (b), he shall be entitled to receive from the responsible local authority an annuity payable during life and calculated at the rate of 1/60th of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each completed year (if any) not exceeding thirty in all of his approved service under the said Act of 1925 (including any service which he is entitled to reckon as approved service under section 22 (1) (a) of the said Act) and the responsible local authority may increase a superannuation allowance granted under this sub-paragraph in the like manner and circumstances and subject to the like conditions as they may increase a pension under subsection (2) of section 22 of the said Act;

(c) if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service he was subject to some other local superannuation enactment under which employees become entitled to benefits on retirement, he shall be entitled to receive from the responsible local authority an annuity payable during life, or if under such local superannuation enactment a superannuation allowance includes a lump sum payment in addition to an annuity, then an annuity payable during life and a lump sum, and the annuity or annuity and lump sum, as the case may be, shall be calculated at the rate of such fraction or fractions of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each year or part of a year of his pensionable local authority service as would have been applicable under that enactment in the calculation of his superannuation allowance, if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service he had attained the age of sixty years, and completed forty years of pensionable local authority service;

(d) if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service he was not subject to any such local superannuation enactment as aforesaid but the responsible local authority had a discretionary power under a local superannuation enactment to grant superannuation allowances to employees on retirement, that local authority may grant to him a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of such fraction or fractions of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each year or part of a year of his pensionable local authority service as would have been applicable under the local superannuation enactment if he had been qualified for a grant thereunder at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this rule

(i) if the local superannuation enactment to which the officer was subject distinguishes between contributing and non-contributing service, any superannuation allowance which he is entitled to receive under the provisions of the foregoing paragraph shall, in so far as it relates to contributing service, be calculated at the full rate appropriate to contributing service, notwithstanding that the period of such service may have been less than ten years;

(ii) no service of the character specified in the proviso to Rule 8 (1) shall be taken into account in granting or calculating any superannuation allowance under this rule.

(a) 10 Halsbury's Statutes 863, 963. See now s. 41 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, ante, p. 2099.

SUPER-ANNUATION

(3) For the purposes of this rule, the expression " pensionable emoluments " means the amount in respect of salary, wages and emoluments on which, at the date of the officer's appointment to the Civil Service, his superannuation allowance under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him would have been based if at that date he had been entitled or qualified to receive one :

Provided that where such superannuation allowance would have been based on the average emoluments received during a period of years and that period is longer than the period of the officer's pensionable local authority service for the purposes of the local superannuation enactment so applicable to him as aforesaid, the latter period shall be substituted for the longer period.

(4) Where by virtue of sub-paragraph (b) or of sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph 1 of this rule the officer becomes entitled to a superannuation allowance from the responsible local authority and the pensionable local authority service in respect of which it is calculated was service as an established officer under the Asylums Officers' Superannuation Act, 1909 (a), or that Act as modified by the Asylums and Certified Institutions (Officers Pensions) Act, 1918 (b), or was approved service under the Fire Brigade Pensions Act, 1925, the responsible local authority shall have the same right (if any) to receive contributions towards the superannuation allowance from any other authority or authorities with whom the officer may have previously served as they would have had if the officer had become entitled to a superannuation allowance under the said Act of 1909 or under that Act as modified by the said Act of 1918 or under the said Act of 1925, as the case may be, and the proviso to Section 12 of the said Act of 1909 or Section 7 (2) of the said Act of 1925, as the case may be, shall apply to the determination of any dispute between the responsible local authority and any other authority as to the amount of any such contribution.

10.—(1) Where under the last preceding rule the officer will, if he retires from the Civil Service in such circumstances as qualify him for the grant of an annual superannuation allowance under the Superannuation Acts as modified by these rules, become entitled to a superannuation allowance from the responsible local authority, that local authority shall, as soon as may be after the officer's appointment to the Civil Service, record in their minutes and notify both to the Department in which the officer is employed and to the officer the local superannuation enactment applicable to him, the length of his pensionable local authority service (contributing and non-contributing respectively) and the amount of his pensionable emoluments within the meaning of Rule 9 (3).

(2) If the officer disputes the accuracy of the record so notified to him by the responsible local authority and within three months after the receipt of the notification applies, where the local authority is an authority in England or Wales to the Minister of Health, and where the local authority is an authority in Scotland to the Secretary of State for Scotland, to determine any question as to the accuracy of the record, the Minister or the Secretary of State may determine that question and a local authority shall record in their minutes any determination of that question.

(3) On the officer's retirement from or death in the Civil Service the Department in which he was employed shall notify the fact to the responsible local authority, and if he was retired with an annual superannuation, compensation or retiring allowance, the amount of such allowance, and the length of service and the emoluments upon which it was calculated.

11. If the officer is retired from the Civil Service under Section 6 of the Superannuation Act, 1909 (c) (abolition of office, etc.) with an annual compensation allowance, or under Section 2 of the Superannuation Act, 1887 (d) (removal on the ground of his inability to discharge efficiently the duties of his office) with an annual retiring allowance, he shall be paid by the responsible local authority such sum by way of return of contributions and interest (if any) as he would have been entitled to receive at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service if he had then retired from their service for the reason for which he is retired from the Civil Service, and in condition, if his contributions would then have been returnable with interest, interest similarly calculated in respect of the period from the date of his appointment to the Civil Service to the date of his retirement therefrom.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

12. If the officer dies after retirement from the Civil Service in circumstances which render his legal personal representatives eligible for a gratuity under Section 2 (2) of the Superannuation Act, 1909, then for the purpose of calculating the deficiency upon which such gratuity is based, any superannuation allowance (or any lump sum in addition thereto) paid to him by the responsible local authority shall be added to the amount of the superannuation allowance and additional allowance received by him under the Superannuation Acts.

13.—(1) Nothing in these rules shall affect any liability or obligation of the officer in respect of any arrears of contributions under a local superannuation enactment.

(2) If any sum payable by the officer to any local authority for the purpose of acquiring superannuation rights under a local superannuation enactment remains unpaid at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service, the officer shall be deemed for the purposes of the payment of such sum to have remained in the service of the local authority, and in the event of his death before the whole of the sum has been paid the liability for the unpaid balance shall be treated as cancelled.

14. Any payment to the officer under his part of these rules by a local authority shall be charged in the same manner, as nearly as may be, as such payment would have been charged if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service the officer had been retiring from his service of the local authority in circumstances entitling him to or qualifying him for such payment under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him.

PART III.—RULES APPLICABLE TO ESTABLISHED CIVIL SERVANTS WHO BECOME PENSIONABLE OFFICERS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

15. In this part of these rules—

(a) the expression "the officer" means a person who, being an established civil servant (including a person who is serving or has served as an officer of the Unemployment Assistance Board or as a Commissioner of the Board of Control), becomes a pensionable officer of a local authority to which these rules apply and as respects whom it is certified to the Treasury by that local authority at the time of his appointment to their service that, with the consent of the Department of the Civil Service in which he was employed to his leaving the Civil Service, either—

(i) he was appointed on account of his special qualifications; or

(ii) he was selected by the local authority from other candidates and his civil service was a material factor in his selection;

(b) the expression "the responsible local authority" means the local authority to whose service the officer is appointed from the Civil Service or, if subsequently without having become entitled to any benefit under these rules the officer becomes a pensionable officer of any other local authority to which these rules apply in circumstances which entitle him to reckon for superannuation purposes all his local government service subsequent to his civil service, the local authority in whose service he is for the time being.

16.—(1) On the officer's appointment by the responsible local authority, the Treasury shall notify to them and to the officer the period of the officer's service which is to be taken into account for the purposes of rule 17.

(2) If the officer subsequently becomes a pensionable officer of any other responsible local authority, such authority shall forthwith inform the Treasury of the fact and thereupon the Treasury shall send such authority a notification in the terms of paragraph (1) of this rule.

17. For the purpose of determining under the local superannuation enactment applicable to the officer, when he ceases to hold office under the responsible local authority, whether he has served for any minimum period which under that enactment would entitle him to or qualify him for any benefit or (in the case of death) would entitle his legal personal representatives to any benefit, the following periods of service namely—

(a) any period of service which shall have been notified to the responsible authority by the Treasury under Rule 16; and

(b) in the case of a person who was in pensionable local authority service immediately before he became a civil servant, any period of pensionable local authority service which, if he had remained a civil servant, would have been taken into account for the purposes of Part II of these Rules or the Unemployment Assistance Board (Superannuation) Rules, 1935 (a), or section 11 (9) (b) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1930, shall, subject as provided in rule 18 (4), be taken into account, and if the local superannuation enactment is one under which in return for contributions officers become entitled to benefits, any such period of service shall be deemed to have been a period during which the officer was a contributor under that enactment.

18.—(1) If the officer on ceasing to hold office under the responsible local authority becomes entitled to a superannuation allowance under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him, whether by virtue of rule 17 or otherwise, the superannuation allowance shall be ascertained in the following manner—

(a) if he is subject to the Local Government and other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922, or to that Act as modified by Section 124 of the Local Government Act, 1929, or Section 7 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, the superannuation allowance shall be an annuity payable during life and calculated at the rate of 1/60th of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each completed year (if any) of his contributing service under the relevant statutory provisions, and 1/120th (or such higher rate not exceeding 1/60th as the local authority may by resolution have determined) of such emoluments in respect of each completed year, or part of a year exceeding six months (if any), of his non-contributing service ;

(b) if he is subject to the Fire Brigade Pensions Acts, 1925 to 1929, the superannuation allowance shall be the pension to which he is entitled under those Acts, having regard to the length of his approved service, and for the purpose of calculating this pension Scale I of Table I in the Schedule to the said Act of 1925 shall be deemed to provide a pension of 1/60th of annual pay for each completed year of approved service from one to twenty-four years and Scale II of that table shall be deemed to provide a pension of 1/60th of annual pay for each completed year of approved service from one to nine years ;

(c) if he is subject to any other local superannuation enactment under which officers become entitled to benefits on retirement, the superannuation allowance shall be an annuity payable during life, or if under such local superannuation enactment a superannuation allowance includes a lump sum payment in addition to an annuity, then an annuity payable during life and a lump sum, and shall be calculated at the rate of such fraction or fractions of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each year or part of a year of his pensionable local authority service as would have been applicable under that enactment in the calculation of his superannuation allowance if on his ceasing to hold office he had attained the age of sixty years and completed forty years of pensionable local authority service.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this rule, if the local superannuation enactment distinguishes between contributing and non-contributing service, any superannuation allowance which the officer shall be entitled to receive under those provisions shall, in so far as it relates to contributing service, be calculated at the full rate appropriate to contributing service, notwithstanding that the period of such service may have been less than ten years.

(3) If the officer on ceasing to hold office under the responsible local authority is not subject to any such local superannuation enactment as aforesaid but the responsible local authority have a discretionary power under a local superannuation enactment to grant superannuation allowances to employees on retirement and if the officer is qualified for the grant of such an allowance, the local authority may grant to him a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of such fraction or fractions of his pensionable emoluments in respect of each year or part of a year of his pensionable local authority service as would be applicable in the case of a person who, apart from these rules, was qualified for a grant under the local superannuation enactment.

(4) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this rule or of rule 17 no service of the character specified in the proviso to rule 8 (1) shall be taken into account in determining any minimum period under rule 17 or in granting or calculating any superannuation allowance under this rule.

(5) For the purposes of this rule—

(a) the expression " service " includes in the case of a person who was in the service of the responsible local authority immediately before he became a Civil Servant and to whom Part II of these rules or the Unemployment Assistance Board (Superannuation) Rules, 1935, or section 11 (9) (b) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1930, applied, any service which was then reckonable as service for the purpose of the local superannuation enactment applicable to him;

(b) the expression " pensionable emoluments " means the amount in respect of salary, wages and emoluments on which the superannuation allowance of the officer would have been based if apart from these rules he had been entitled to or qualified for a superannuation allowance under the local superannuation enactment applicable to the case:

Provided that if the allowance would have been based on the average emoluments received during a period of years and that period is longer than the period of the officer's pensionable local authority service for the purposes of the local superannuation enactment applicable to the case the latter period shall be substituted for the longer period.

19. If the officer ceases to hold office under the responsible local authority in such circumstances as qualify or entitle him to receive from that local authority an annual superannuation allowance under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him or under that enactment as modified by these rules, the Treasury may grant to the officer such superannuation allowance and additional allowance, if any, as might have been granted to him under the Superannuation Acts at the date when he became a pensionable officer of a local authority if he had then retired from the Civil Service on the ground of ill health, and if those Acts had provided in the event of his service in the Civil Service being less than ten years for the grant of a superannuation allowance calculated, if he was subject to the Superannuation Act, 1859 (a), at the rate of one-sixtieth or, if he was subject to the Superannuation Act, 1909, one-eightieth, of the annual salary and emoluments of his office for each completed year of his reckonable pensionable service.

20. On the officer ceasing to hold office under the responsible local authority in the circumstances specified in the last preceding rule, that local authority shall notify to the Department of the Civil Service in which he was employed immediately before becoming a pensionable officer of a local authority and to any local authority in whose service he may have been a pensionable officer immediately before becoming a civil servant the amount of the superannuation allowance awarded to him by the responsible local authority and the length of service upon which it was calculated.

21.—(1) If the officer on ceasing to hold office under the responsible local authority is awarded by that authority an annual superannuation allowance under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him or under that enactment is modified by these rules, and if immediately before his appointment to the Civil Service he was a pensionable officer of some other local authority and on his appointment to the Civil Service became an officer to whom Part II of these Rules or the Unemployment Assistance Board (Superannuation) Rules, 1935, or section 11 (9) (b) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1930, applied, then,—

(a) if the local superannuation enactment applicable to him was one under which officers become entitled to benefits on retirement, he shall also be entitled to receive from the local authority in whose service he was immediately before his appointment to the Civil Service an annual superannuation allowance ascertained in accordance with the provisions of sub-paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of paragraph (1) and paragraphs (2) and (3) of Rule 9;

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

(b) if the local authority in whose service he was immediately before his appointment to the Civil Service have a discretionary power under a local superannuation enactment to grant superannuation allowances to employees on retirement on certain conditions, that local authority may though those conditions are not fulfilled grant to the officer a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of such fraction or fractions of his pensionable emoluments within the meaning of rule 9 (3) in respect of each year or part of a year of his pensionable local authority service (excluding service of the character specified in proviso (b) to rule 8 (1)) as would have been applicable under the local superannuation enactment if he had been qualified for a grant thereunder.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in this rule no pensionable local authority service shall be taken into account for the purposes of this rule if it is service which is taken into account for the purposes of the grant or calculation of the allowance granted to the officer by the responsible local authority.

22. Any payment to the officer under this part of these rules by a local authority other than the responsible local authority shall be charged in the same manner, as nearly as may be, as such payment would have been charged if at the date of his appointment to the Civil Service the officer had been retiring from the service of the local authority in circumstances entitling him to or qualifying him for such payment under the local superannuation enactment applicable to him.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
10th August, 1937.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw attention to the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937 (a), which received the Royal Assent on July 30th.

1. The principal modification of the law effected by the Act is to require provision to be made for the superannuation of all whole-time officers in the employment of the Councils of Counties, County Boroughs, Metropolitan Boroughs and County Districts and the Common Council of the City of London, and also of Joint Boards and statutory Joint Committees of such Councils (including a Joint Superannuation Committee), Assessment Committees and any other local authority who have adopted the Act of 1922. Provision for the superannuation of servants and part-time officers of the above-mentioned bodies, and also for employees of any other local authority, will remain discretionary, but such provision can, under the Act, be made pursuant to a statutory resolution, as defined, and the two-thirds majority which was required by the Act of 1922 will no longer be requisite.

These statutory provisions will not become operative till the appointed day (April 1st, 1939), but certain action will fall to be taken by local authorities in advance of that date for the purpose of bringing the Act into operation, and in that connection reference is made in the following paragraphs to some of the provisions of the Act which require early attention.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

2. Under Section 1, certain local authorities as therein indicated, will become responsible, on the appointed day, as "administering authorities," for maintaining superannuation funds. The authorities specified include the larger local authorities and all others who may have adopted the Act of 1922, together with such Councils of County Districts as may, on October 1st, 1938, be employing one hundred or more persons who, according to a return to be made to the Minister, will be "contributory employees."

3. Section 2 of the Act deals with schemes for the maintenance of a joint superannuation fund by two or more "administering authorities." Although no date is specified in the Act for the submission of any such scheme, it will be appreciated that, if in any case such a combination were contemplated, it would be necessary to take steps at an early date with a view to the submission of the necessary scheme for the Minister's approval. As regards existing combination schemes, subsection (3) of Section 2 requires any necessary modifying scheme to be submitted not later than April 1st, 1938.

4. Under Section 4, provision for the superannuation of the contributory employees of an employing authority other than an "administering authority," will, in general, be made through the superannuation fund of the County Council, in accordance with regulations to be made by the Minister under subsection (6) of Section 36 and paragraph (5) of the Third Schedule. The Minister contemplates that it will be necessary for the regulations to provide, inter alia, that the employing authority, in such a case, should furnish the County Council, by some date prior to the appointed day, with such information as is requisite to enable the County Council to make arrangements for the discharge of their obligations under the Act. To that end, the records of employing authorities in regard to the service of such of their employees as will become contributory employees should be brought up to date with a view to accurate information being available when necessary.

5. Under subsection (1) of Section 25, local authorities who have adopted the Act of 1922 and have obtained, by local legislation or statutory orders, provisions modifying that Act in its application to them are required, if they desire to preserve any of those provisions, to submit a scheme to the Minister for the purpose within six months from the passing of the Act.

6. Part II of the Act relates to "local Act authorities," i.e., such of the Councils mentioned in Part I of the First Schedule who, not having adopted the Act of 1922, maintain a superannuation fund under a local Act.

Subsection (1) of Section 26 requires such authorities to make schemes for modifying their local Acts so as to secure, inter alia, that all their whole-time officers shall be superannuable and to facilitate interchange of staff with other authorities, with preservation of accrued superannuation rights and necessary financial adjustments. Such schemes are required to be made by the authorities concerned not later than April 1st, 1938.

7. Schemes required to be made by a local authority under any of the above-mentioned provisions will be subject to the general provisions in Section 36 of the Act. No such scheme will have effect until it has been approved by the Minister, who is empowered to approve with or without modifications. It will be observed that Section 36 enables the Minister to grant an extension of the period for submission of schemes for his approval and, while he has no reason to think that this will be necessary in the majority of cases, he will be prepared to grant an extension in any case where he is satisfied that it is not practicable for the necessary action to be taken within the period specified in the Act.

8. Memoranda dealing with other provisions of the Act will be issued in due course, but in the meantime local authorities will, no doubt, appreciate the need for early consideration of the Act in its application to their own staffs and will wish to take preliminary steps in relation to the matters above-mentioned, including any necessary consultation with other authorities.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
R. B. CROSS,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
HOBART HOUSE,
GROSVENOR PLACE, S.W.1.
30th December, 1938.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION ACT, 1937.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION (SURRENDER OF SUPERANNUATION ALLOWANCE) RULES, 1938.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to enclose a copy of the Rules made by him under section 9 of the above-mentioned Act. These Rules prescribe the conditions under which a married employee may surrender a part of the superannuation allowance to which he is entitled under section 8 (1) (b) or (c) of the Act (a) in order to secure the payment of a pension during the period, if any, in which the spouse survives the employee.

Tables from which the amount of the annual pension payable to the surviving spouse can be calculated have been prepared by the Government Actuary. A copy of the Tables which have been prepared in respect of retiring ages from 60 to 65 in the case of a man and 55 to 65 in the case of a woman is enclosed, but it is recognised that there may be cases where the retiring age is greater than those mentioned. Further Tables have accordingly been prepared to cover later retiring ages, but it has not been thought necessary to circulate these additional Tables. If an authority has such a case, sufficient extracts from the Tables to enable the necessary calculation to be made will be supplied if application is made to the Ministry stating the retiring age of the employee in question and the age of the spouse.

It will be noted that the Rules prescribe limits to the part of his superannuation allowance which an employee may surrender, and in order to assist him in submitting to the authority a notification within these limits it is suggested that, in forwarding to him a copy of the Rules and Tables, an offer should be made to inform him of the maximum and minimum amounts within which he may make a surrender if he notifies the authority of the age of the spouse.

Copies of the Rules and of the Tables for the time being in force, together with the necessary forms, have to be supplied by the appropriate administering authority to any employee not less than three months before the earliest date on which he may become entitled to a superannuation allowance, but it may be that the employee, although he will shortly have attained the age of sixty years and completed forty years' service, does not retire immediately. In such circumstances the authority will no doubt think it well to notify the employee at an appropriate time prior to his eventual retirement of any revision of the provisional estimate that may have become necessary.

The Rules are applicable only to contributory employees under the Act of 1937, and accordingly will not apply to any person in the employment of a local authority who retires before April 1st, 1939.

An additional copy of the Rules and the Tables is enclosed for the information of the Chief Financial Officer. Further copies of this circular and of the Rules and Tables may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at the addresses shown thereon.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. W. NEVILLE,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

S. R. & O., 1938, No. 1509.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION (SURRENDER OF SUPERANNUATION ALLOWANCE) RULES, 1938, DATED DECEMBER 13TH, 1938, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 9 OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION ACT, 1937.

The Minister of Health, in exercise of the powers conferred on him by section 9 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Rules.

Short Title.

1. These Rules may be cited as the Local Government Superannuation (Surrender of Superannuation Allowance) Rules, 1938.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

the spouse of the employee, be allowed to surrender such part, not exceeding one-third, of the allowance as the employee may specify:

Provided that an employee shall not surrender—

(a) any such part as would make the amount of the reduced allowance payable to the employee less than the amount of the pension which might become payable to the spouse under these Rules; or

(b) a smaller part than would secure for the spouse a pension equal to one-fourth of the amount of the reduced allowance payable to the employee; or

(c) any part which is not an exact number of pounds:

Provided also that, subject as aforesaid, an employee in the calculation of whose superannuation allowance account is taken of such service under the Teachers Acts as is mentioned in subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act shall not surrender a larger part than an amount equivalent to a sum not exceeding one-third of the superannuation allowance after deduction therefrom of any annual sum which by virtue of that subsection and any Regulations for the time being in force thereunder will be required to be deducted from the amount receivable in any year in respect of superannuation allowance.

(2) The amount of pension payable in return for each £1 of a superannuation allowance surrendered by an employee shall be the amount, according to the age and sex of the employee and the age and sex of the spouse, shown in the Tables which are in force at the date on which the allowance becomes payable.

(3) The pension of the spouse shall be payable in arrear in the same manner as the superannuation allowance of the employee would have been payable.

Notification of desire to make a surrender.

5.—(1) Not less than three months before the date on which a contributory employee may become entitled to such a superannuation allowance as aforesaid, the appropriate administering authority shall furnish the employee with a copy of these Rules and of the Tables for the time being in force together with a provisional estimate of the amount of the superannuation allowance that may become payable to the employee and two copies of the form of notification of surrender of allowance set out in the Schedule to these Rules.

(2) Not less than two months before the appointed day, the local authority who will be the appropriate administering authority in relation to any employee who may become entitled to such a superannuation allowance as aforesaid on, or within two months after, the appointed day shall furnish that employee with the documents mentioned in paragraph (1) of this Article.

(3) Not less than one month nor more than two months before the date of ceasing to be employed, the employee may notify his desire to surrender a part of any allowance to which he may become entitled by completing the form provided for the purpose, and sending it to the appropriate administering authority, at the same time sending a copy of the document to the employing authority if that authority is not the administering authority.

(4) If at the date of receipt by the appropriate administering authority from an employee of such a notification as aforesaid there are in force Tables different from those which were furnished to the employee under this Article, the authority shall forthwith furnish him with a copy of the Tables in force for the time being.

Action to be taken prior to administering authority's decision in regard to notification.

6. On receipt from a contributory employee of a notification under the last preceding Rule—

(a) the employing authority, if they are not the administering authority, shall furnish the appropriate administering authority with a record of all the occasions on which the employee has been absent from duty owing to ill health (indicating in cases of absence for periods of seven or more consecutive days the nature of the illness) during the five years immediately preceding the date on which the employee will cease to be employed;

(b) the appropriate administering authority shall arrange for the employee to be examined by a registered medical practitioner nominated by them and to obtain from him a report stating whether, in his opinion, the employee is in good health, regard being had to the age of the employee, and if the opinion stated in such report is that the employee is not in good health the administering authority shall notify him accordingly and offer him an opportunity of a further examination by some other registered medical practitioner nominated by them with a view to his reporting to them as to the state of health of the employee;

(c) the administering authority shall require the employee to furnish at his own expense a certificate of his birth except where the date of birth has been duly recorded by the authority and is not disputed and, with respect to the spouse, a birth certificate, a marriage certificate and any other information or evidence which the authority may consider necessary:

Provided that if for any reason a birth or marriage certificate cannot be supplied the authority may accept such other evidence of birth or marriage as they may think fit.

Fees for medical examination.

7.—(1) Any fee payable to a practitioner in respect of an examination and report under the last preceding Rule shall be paid by the employee at the time of the examination.

(2) If, in any case in which the administering authority have obtained a report that an employee is in good health, the date of retirement of the employee is postponed to a date more than three months after the date of the report, the authority may if they think fit require the employee to undergo such further medical examination as they may direct, but in that event the employee shall not be required to pay any fees in respect of such further examination.

Decision of administering authority in regard to notification.

8.—(1) Subject to the provisions of these Rules, unless the appropriate administering authority are of opinion, on a consideration of a report obtained by them under Rule 6, that the employee to whom the report relates is not in good health or they are of opinion that the evidence produced in regard to age or marriage is not satisfactory, they shall accept the surrender of such part of the superannuation allowance to which the employee becomes entitled as is specified in the employee's notification and as is in conformity with these Rules and shall grant to the spouse named in the notification a pension in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of Rule 4.

(2) As soon as practicable after coming to a decision in regard to a notification given by an employee, the administering authority shall notify the employee that they have accepted his notification or that they have decided not to accept a surrender of any part of the superannuation allowance, as the case may be, and in addition they shall furnish the employee with a statement in the former case as to the amount of the pension to which the spouse may become entitled after the death of the employee and the amount of the superannuation allowance that may become payable to the employee, and in the latter case as to the grounds upon which they have decided not to act upon the notification of the employee.

Cancellation or amendment of notification.

9.—(1) An employee may cancel or amend a notification given by him by a notice in writing addressed to the administering authority in the form set out in the Schedule to these Rules and posted at any time before the day on which the employee ceases to be employed or left with the clerk to the authority at any time before 5 p.m. on that day.

(2) An amendment of a notification shall be disregarded if the notification as so amended does not comply with these Rules.

Validity and operation of notification.

10.—(1) A notification given by an employee shall become null and void if either the employee or the spouse dies before midnight on the day on which the employee ceases to be employed.

(2) Subject as aforesaid, a surrender of part of an allowance accepted in pursuance of a notification shall have effect as from the first day in respect of which the employee's superannuation allowance is payable.

The Minister of Health, in exercise of the powers conferred on him by proviso (ii) to paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of section 8 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Regulations.

1. These Regulations may be cited as the Local Government Superannuation (Additional Contributory Payment) Regulations, 1939.

2.—(1) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these Regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

(2) In these Regulations the expression "the Act" means the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937.

3. The sum to be paid by a contributory employee who desires to receive by way of superannuation allowance in respect of any year of non-contributing service—

(a) in any case to which the Act as amended by a local Act applies, an annual sum, being a fraction of his average remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-sixtieth but not exceeding one-eightieth, and a lump sum, being a fraction of his average remuneration larger than one sixtieth but not exceeding one thirtieth; or shall be calculated in accordance with the provisions contained in the Schedule to these Regulations.

(b) in any other case, a fraction of his average remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-twentieth but not exceeding one-sixtieth;

4.—(1) Such sum may be paid—

(a) in a lump sum forthwith upon the contributory employee notifying the employing authority in writing within any such period mentioned in paragraph (5) of this Article as is applicable to his case that he intends to secure a title to any such superannuation allowance as aforesaid; or

(b) partly in a lump sum or not less than one-tenth of such sum forthwith upon for giving of such notice as aforesaid and as to the remainder, and subject as hereinafter provided, by such instalments as within three months after the date of such notification (hereinafter referred to as "the material date") may be agreed between the employee and the employing authority; or

(c) wholly, subject as hereinafter provided, by such instalments as aforesaid.

(2) If such sum is made payable, partly or wholly, by instalments, the instalments shall be of equal amounts spread over a period of not more than ten years after the material date, the first instalment to be paid within four months after the material date:

Provided that the whole of the instalments shall be payable before the date on which the employee will attain the age of compulsory retirement applicable in his case:

Provided nevertheless that—

(a) if he has completed, or can before attaining the age of compulsory retirement complete, forty years of service; or

(b) if, being a female nurse, midwife or health visitor in whose case the age of compulsory retirement is sixty years, she has completed, or can before attaining the age of compulsory retirement complete, thirty years of service;

the whole of the instalments shall be payable before the date on which the employee will complete, in the last [illegible]

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

(3) If such sum is payable, partly or wholly, by instalments, then, while any instalment remains to be paid the following provisions shall have effect—

(a) interest shall be payable as from the material date upon the amount for the time being unpaid and shall be calculated at the rate of three per cent. per annum, with half-yearly rests;

(b) if the employee becomes entitled to a superannuation allowance under the Act, a deduction in respect of any amount due may be made from any payment on account of the superannuation allowance;

(c) if the employee dies without having become entitled to a superannuation allowance, all liability in respect of the balance of the debt shall cease;

(d) if the employee ceases to hold his employment without having become entitled to a superannuation allowance and is entitled to a return of contributions, then, at the expiration of twelve months, the employee shall cease to be entitled to any rights in respect of payments made by him on account of the debt, except any right to a return of the amount of such payments, and his liability in respect of the balance of the debt shall cease, unless within that period the employee has again become a contributory employee without having previously become a local Act contributor, in which event, subject as hereinafter provided, the right to receive the balance of the debt shall be deemed to be transferred to the employing authority whose employment the employee has entered and the employee shall pay to that authority an amount equal to any sum which may have been returned to him in respect of payments made by him on account of the debt.

(4) The provisions of sub-paragraphs (d) of paragraph (3) of this Article shall have effect subject to the following provisions—

(a) if after an employee has ceased to hold one employment and entered one other employment as a contributory employee, being a part-time employment, that employee, within twelve months after having ceased to hold his former employment but while retaining that part-time employment and without having ceased to hold any other employment as a contributory employee or local Act contributor which he may have held when he ceased to hold his former employment, enters the part-time employment of another local authority or of two or more other local authorities and becomes such an employee or contributor as aforesaid, the right to receive the balance of the debt and the liability of the employee to make payments to the employing authorities shall be apportioned in accordance with the provisions of sub-paragraph (c) of this paragraph as if he had simultaneously entered all the employments he holds, and any payments already made by him under the provisions of sub-paragraph (d) of paragraph (3) of this Article shall be adjusted accordingly;

(b) if the employee having ceased to be in the whole-time employment of a single employing authority has become a contributory employee in their part-time employment and a contributory employee in the part-time employment of another employing authority, the right to receive only such portion of the balance of the debt shall be deemed to be transferred to that other employing authority as bears the same proportion to the balance of the debt as the annual remuneration of the part-time employment he has entered under that other employing authority bears to the aggregate amount of the annual remuneration of the part-time employments, and the employee shall pay to that other employing authority an amount equal to a similar proportion of any sum which may have been returned to him in respect of payments made by him on account of the debt, the balance thereof being payable by him to the single employing authority aforesaid:

Provided that if the employee, within twelve months after having entered and while retaining the part-time employments aforesaid, has entered the part-time employment of another local authority or of two or more other local authorities and become a contributory employee or local Act contributor, the right to receive the balance of the debt and the liability of the employee to make payments to the employing

(c) if the employee having ceased to hold one employment has entered the employment of more than one local authority, the right to receive the balance of the debt shall be apportioned between the employing authorities—

(i) if none of the local authorities are local Act authorities, in the proportion which the annual remuneration of each part-time employment bears to the aggregate amount of the annual remuneration of the part-time employments;

(ii) if any of the local authorities are local Act authorities, in the proportion which the annual remuneration payable by each of the employing authorities bears to the aggregate amount of the annual remuneration payable by those authorities and any local Act authority; and the liability of the employee to make payments to the employing authorities in respect of any sum which may have been returned to him in respect of payments made by him on account of the debt shall be similarly apportioned:

Provided that if within twelve months after ceasing to hold his former employment the employee, while retaining the employments he has entered and without having ceased to hold any other employment as a contributory employee or local Act contributor which he may have held when he ceased to hold his former employment, enters the employment of another local authority or of two or more other local authorities and becomes such an employee or contributor as aforesaid, the right to receive the balance of the debt and the liability of the employee to make payments to the employing authorities shall be re-apportioned in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this sub-paragraph as if the employee had simultaneously entered all the employments he holds, and any payments already made by him under those provisions shall be adjusted accordingly.

(5) A notification under paragraph (1) of this Article shall be given—

(a) in the case of a person who is a contributory employee on the appointed day, within twelve months thereafter;

(b) in the case of a person who becomes a contributory employee after the appointed day without having previously been such an employee, within three months after becoming such an employee;

(c) in the case of a person who, having ceased to be a contributory employee, again becomes such an employee after a disqualifying break of service, within three months after again becoming such an employee.

5. Any sum or sums payable by an employee under these Regulations shall be paid to the employing authority and on receipt shall be paid by the employing authority to the appropriate administering authority.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

2. The amount shown in a Table in relation to an age which corresponds with that of the employee is an amount appropriate in respect of £100 of remuneration. A total amount is to be calculated proportionately by reference to the remuneration of the employee. Such total amount is the sum payable by the employee in order to secure in respect of one year of the non-contributing service which he is entitled to reckon on the material date a superannuation allowance at the rate of one-sixtieth of his average remuneration or a superannuation allowance consisting of an annual sum at the rate of one-eightieth of his average remuneration and a lump sum equal to one-thirtieth of his average remuneration.

3. The sum payable by an employee in order to secure in respect of one year of the non-contributing service which he is entitled to reckon on the material date a superannuation allowance at a fraction of his average remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-twentieth but less than one-sixtieth or a superannuation allowance consisting of an annual sum at the rate of a fraction of his average remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-sixtieth but less than one-eightieth and a lump sum equal to more than one-sixtieth of his average remuneration but less than one-thirtieth is that proportion of the amount calculated in accordance with the last-preceding paragraph which the difference between the fraction chosen and one one-hundred-and-twentieth or one one-hundred-and-sixtieth, as the case may require, bears to one one-hundred-and-twentieth or one one-hundred-and-sixtieth, as the case may be.

4. The sum payable by an employee in order to secure any such allowance as is mentioned in either of the last two preceding paragraphs in respect of more than one year of the non-contributing service which he is entitled to reckon on the material date is the amount calculated in accordance with paragraph 2 or 3 of these Directions, as the case may be, multiplied by the number of years of the said service which the employee desires to reckon.

THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION (REDUCTION AND ADJUSTMENT OF SUPERANNUATION ALLOWANCE) REGULATIONS, 1939, DATED JANUARY 21ST, 1939, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER SECTION 31 (2) OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION ACT, 1937.

The Minister of Health, in exercise of the powers conferred on him by subsection (2) of section 31 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Regulations.

Short Title.

1. These Regulations may be cited as the Local Government Superannuation (Reduction and Adjustment of Superannuation Allowance) Regulations, 1939.

Interpretation.

2. The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these Regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

3. In these Regulations the expression " the Act " means the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937.

Reduction of superannuation allowance during re-employment.

4. A person entitled to any such superannuation allowance or allowances as are mentioned in subsection (1) of section 31 of the Act (a) shall not be entitled to receive in respect of any period during which he is employed by any local authority any greater sum in respect of superannuation allowance than the amount, if any, by which the emoluments of his employment for that period fall short of the remuneration of the employment or employments in relation to which he became entitled to the allowance or allowances, computed for a period of the same length, and the allowance or allowances shall be reduced accordingly, and in proportion, where there are two or more allowances, to the amounts thereof respectively:

Provided that if, concurrently with any employment or employments in relation to which he became entitled to such an allowance or allowances as aforesaid, he held any other employment under any local authority in relation to which he did not become entitled to such an allowance as aforesaid, then if either—

(a) he continues to hold that other employment; or

(b) he ceases to hold that other employment on or after the date on which he became entitled to the allowance or allowances and takes up a new employment under any local authority without having become in relation to that other employment entitled to such a superannuation allowance as aforesaid;

the allowance or allowances shall not be reduced by virtue of the foregoing provisions of this Article in relation to the emoluments of—

(i) that other employment; or

(ii) any new employment which he so takes up as aforesaid;

except to the extent, if any, by which the aggregate of the allowance or allowances and the emoluments of that other employment or the new employment, as the case may be, exceeds the aggregate of the remuneration of the employment or employments in relation to which he became entitled to the allowance or allowances and the emoluments of that other employment immediately before the date on which he became entitled to the allowance or allowances.

Adjustment of superannuation rights on cesser of further employment of employee entitled to superannuation allowance.

5.—(1) If any person entitled to any such superannuation allowance or allowances as are mentioned in subsection (1) of section 31 of the Act is re-employed by any local authority and is in his new employment a contributory employee or a local Act contributor, then, on his ceasing to hold that employment, the service in respect of which he became entitled to such allowance or allowances as aforesaid shall be reckoned as service for the purpose of ascertaining whether he is qualified for any superannuation allowance in respect of the new employment under Part I of the Act or under the local Act scheme and, if he is so qualified, he shall be entitled to receive at his option either that allowance in addition to the allowance or allowances to which he had already become entitled or alternatively a superannuation allowance calculated under Part I of the Act or under the local Act scheme, as the case may require, by reference both to service in his new employment and to the service taken into account in the calculation of the allowance or allowances aforesaid and by reference to the annual average of the remuneration or emoluments received by him in respect of such service rendered during the five years immediately preceding the day on which he ceased to hold his new employment:

Provided that—

(a) if any allowance to which he had already become entitled was an annuity calculated at the rate of one-eightieth of emoluments in respect of each year of service taken into account, together with a lump sum payment, then the allowance which he may elect to receive in respect of the whole of his service under the foregoing provisions shall be calculated in the same manner and the amount of the lump sum payment receivable by him shall be reduced by the amount of the lump sum payment received by him as part of the allowance to which he became entitled as aforesaid;

(b) in any other case, the allowance which he may elect to receive in respect of the whole of his service under the foregoing provisions shall be calculated in the manner prescribed by section 8 of the Act so, nevertheless, that any service which for the purpose of calculating the allowance to which he became entitled as aforesaid was reckoned at a fraction of remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-twentieth but less than one-sixtieth in respect of each year of such service shall be reckoned for the purpose of calculating the allowance which he may elect to receive under the foregoing provisions as contributing service of such proportion only of the actual length of the service aforesaid as is obtained by multiplying the number of years of such service by sixty and dividing it by the denominator of the fraction at which that service was reckoned as aforesaid.

(2) Any superannuation allowance payable under this Article shall be paid in the case of a contributory employee out of the appropriate superannuation fund and in the case of a local Act contributor out of the superannuation fund maintained by the local Act authority.

(3) If a person to whom this Article applies elects to receive a superannuation allowance calculated by reference to the whole of his service under local authorities in manner provided by this Article any such superannuation allowance as aforesaid to which he has already become entitled shall cease to be paid and if, in relation to that allowance, he has taken advantage of the provisions of section 9 of the Act, no title to any pension shall accrue by reason thereof.

(4) If a person to whom this Article applies elects to receive such a superannuation allowance as is mentioned in the last-preceding paragraph and was in his new employment an employee of a different authority from the authority whose employment he ceased to hold on previously becoming entitled to any such superannuation allowance as is mentioned in subsection (1) of section 31 of the Act, then, unless the superannuation fund concerned is the same in the case of both employments—

(a) the authority maintaining the fund out of which the said allowance was payable shall in lieu thereof pay annually from that fund to the superannuation fund out of which the allowance which he has elected to receive is payable, by way of contribution towards that allowance so long as that allowance is payable, an amount equal to the annual amount of the allowance previously payable to him:

Provided that if, in relation to the last-mentioned allowance, he has taken advantage of the provisions of section 9 of the Act, the amount of the annual contribution to be made shall be the annual amount of the allowance which would have previously been payable to him had he not taken advantage of those provisions; and

(b) upon the death of the person in the circumstances mentioned in paragraph (b) of subsection (3) of section 10 of the Act, the sum payable to his legal personal representatives under the provisions of the said subsection shall be apportioned between the authorities maintaining the superannuation funds concerned in such manner as may be agreed or, in default of agreement, determined by the Minister.

Given under the official seal of the Minister of Health this twenty-first day of January, nineteen hundred and thirty-nine.

4. Subject as hereinafter provided, the service of the employee by reference to which the sum in lieu of transfer value which was payable by him was ascertained shall be taken into account for the purposes of section 12 of the Act (a) as non-contributing service:

Provided that if before he became a contributory employee he had paid all sums which had accrued due from him before the appointed day under the agreement by virtue of which he was paying by instalments the sum in lieu of transfer value, then, to the extent that the aggregate amount so paid by him, after deduction therefrom of any sum or sums included therein which represent the payment of interest by the employee, would, if it were paid, pursuant to the Regulations made by the Minister under proviso (ii) to section 8 (2) (b) of the Act and for the time being in force, by reference to the salary or wages of the employment in relation to which he became a contributory employee and to his age on the appointed day, enable him to receive a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of one-sixtieth of such salary or wages in respect of each year of service, the whole number, or such lesser number as is requisite, of completed years of the service by reference to which the sum in lieu of transfer value was ascertained shall be reckonable as contributing service.

Contribution towards superannuation allowance.

4.—(1) If a contributory employee or local Act contributor to whom the last preceding Article applies becomes entitled to a superannuation allowance under Part I of the Act of 1937 or under a local Act scheme the annual contribution towards that allowance to be made by the body by which he was employed as an established employee before becoming a contributory employee or local Act contributor shall be an amount equal to the annual amount of the superannuation allowance under the Act of 1909 to which he would have been entitled had he been an officer or servant of the second class and had that Act provided that at the date when he ceased to be an established employee there should be payable to him thereunder an allowance the annual amount of which should be computed by reference to the number of years of service which he had then completed and the amount of his salary or wages and emoluments as an established employee calculated in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of the Act of 1909.

(2) If the fund out of which was paid the salary or wages as an established employee of a person in respect of whose superannuation allowance a contribution calculated as aforesaid becomes payable by the body under which he was an established employee is not the fund out of which superannuation allowances under the Act of 1909 are paid to established employees of that body, the contribution shall be made out of the superannuation or other fund out of which such allowances are paid.

PART III.

5.—(1) This Article applies to an established employee to whom sub-paragraph (2) of paragraph 3 of Part V of the Second Schedule to the Act of 1937 applies.

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

(3) For all purposes of the Act of 1909 other than those relating to eligibility for superannuation allowance the period of any such service by a contributory employee as is mentioned in the last preceding paragraph which was non-contributing service shall—

(a) if under the Act of 1937 that service would have been reckonable for the purpose aforesaid at the rate of one one-hundred-and-twentieth of remuneration in respect of each such year of service or at some larger fraction not exceeding one-sixtieth, be reckoned at such proportion only of the actual length of that service as is obtained by multiplying the number of years of such service by sixty and dividing it by the denominator of the fraction at which that service would have been reckonable as aforesaid ;

(b) if under the Act of 1937 as amended by any local Act that service would have been reckonable for the purpose aforesaid at the rate of one one-hundred-and-sixtieth of remuneration in respect of each such year of service or at some larger fraction not exceeding one-eightieth, be reckoned at such proportion only of the actual length of that service as is obtained by multiplying the number of years of such service by eighty and dividing it by the denominator of the fraction at which that service would have been reckonable as aforesaid :

Provided that if as a condition of being entitled to reckon any non-contributing service at some fraction of remuneration larger than one one-hundred-and-twentieth or one one-hundred-and-sixtieth, as the case may be, a contributory employee had been discharging but had not fully discharged a liability subsisting when he ceased to be such an employee to pay a sum by instalments to the appropriate superannuation fund, then account shall be taken of the said service as if the period thereof had been one-half its actual length, and to the extent that one-half of the aggregate amount paid on account of the sum due in discharge of the liability aforesaid would, if it were paid, pursuant to the Regulations made by the Minister under proviso (ii) to section 8 (2) (b) of the Act of 1937 and for the time being in force, in relation to his remuneration at the date when he ceased to be a contributory employee and to his age at such date, enable him to receive a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of one-sixtieth of such remuneration in respect of each year of service, account shall also be taken of the remaining half of the actual length of the said service :

Provided nevertheless that if on ceasing to be employed as an established employee a person to whom any of the preceding provisions of this Article have been applicable is an officer or servant of the first class the period of any previous service which is taken into account in accordance with the preceding provisions of this Article for the purpose of calculating any superannuation allowance to which he may be entitled shall be reckoned as if that period were reduced by one-sixth.

(4) An established employee to whom this Article applies, by virtue of his having been a local Act contributor shall, subject as hereinafter provided, be entitled to aggregate with any service which he may become entitled to reckon for the purposes of the Act of 1909 with the body under whom he first becomes an established employee all service which immediately before he ceased to be a local Act contributor he was entitled to reckon as service or as a period of contribution for the purposes of the local Act scheme :

Provided that if part (hereinafter referred to as the said service) of any such service as aforesaid was service in relation to which the established employee, before he ceased to be a local Act contributor, had been discharging but had not fully discharged a liability to pay a sum by instalments to the superannuation fund maintained by the local Act authority, or had been under a liability to make payments to that fund by way of a contribution of a percentage of emoluments additional to the percentage payable in respect of current service, as a condition of being entitled to reckon the said service for the purposes of the local Act scheme, then, for all purposes of the Act of 1909 other than those relating to eligibility for superannuation allowance, account shall be taken of the said service only to the extent that the aggregate amount paid on account of the sum due or of additional percentage contributions in discharge of the liability aforesaid would, if it were paid, pursuant to the Regulations made by the Minister under proviso (ii) to section 8 (2) (b) of the Act of 1937 and for the time being in force, in relation to his emoluments at the date when he ceased to be a local Act contributor and to his age at such date, enable him to receive a superannuation allowance calculated at the rate of one-sixtieth of such emoluments in respect of each year of service:

Provided nevertheless that if on ceasing to be employed as an established employee a person to whom any of the preceding provisions of this paragraph have been applicable is an officer or servant of the first class the period of any previous service which is taken into account in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph for the purpose of calculating any superannuation allowance to which he may be entitled shall be reckoned as if that period were reduced by one-sixth.

(5) An established employee to whom this Article applies by virtue of his having been a designated employee shall be entitled to aggregate with any service which he may become entitled to reckon for the purposes of the Act of 1909 with the body under whom he first becomes an established employee all service which immediately before the date on which he ceased to be a designated employee he was entitled to reckon as service for the purposes of the Act of 1922 in relation to the post in virtue of which he was such an employee:

Provided that for all purposes of the Act of 1909 other than those relating to eligibility for superannuation allowance—

(a) in the case of a person who when he ceases to be employed as an established employee is an officer or servant of the first class, the period of any such service which was contributing service under the Act of 1922 or which was non-contributing service that under the Act of 1922 as amended by any local Act would have been reckonable at the same rate as contributing service for the purpose of calculating his superannuation allowance had he become entitled to one thereunder at the date when he ceased to be a designated employee shall be reckoned as if that service had been five-sixths its actual length;

(b) in the case of any established employee, any such service which was non-contributing service under the Act of 1922, not being non-contributing service which would have been reckonable as aforesaid, shall be reckoned as if the period thereof had been one-half its actual length:

Provided nevertheless that if on ceasing to be employed as an established employee a person to whom the provisions of head (b) of the foregoing proviso have been applicable is an officer or servant of the first class the period of any previous service which is taken into account in accordance with the preceding provisions of this Article for the purpose of calculating any superannuation allowance to which he may be entitled shall be reckoned as if that period were reduced by one-sixth.

Fund to which transfer value in respect of previous service is to be paid.

6. If the fund out of which the salary or wages of an established employee to whom the last preceding Article applies is paid by the body under which he becomes such an employee is not the fund out of which superannuation allowances under the Act of 1909 are paid to established employees of that body any transfer value payable under paragraph 3 (2) (b) of Part V of the Second Schedule to the Act of 1937 shall be paid into the fund out of which such allowances are paid.

(a) references therein to the Teachers Acts as therein defined were references to the Teachers Acts as defined in the Scottish Act or to the Teachers Acts as defined in the Scottish Act and the Superannuation Scheme framed in pursuance thereof as the case may require;

(b) there were substituted for the words "but for any deduction made by the Board of Education under section seven of the Teachers (Superannuation) Act, 1925" the words "if any period which, in order to avoid duplicate pensions, has not been reckoned as service for the purpose of calculating his retiring allowance, had been so reckoned."

(2) In any such case as aforesaid the superannuation allowance shall be deemed to be an allowance to which subsection (2) of section 31 of the English Act applies and any Regulations made thereunder shall apply accordingly as if references to a local authority or an authority included references to a Scottish local authority or a Scottish authority respectively, and as if references to any provison of the English Act included references to the corresponding provision of the Scottish Act.

PROVISIONAL REGULATIONS, DATED MARCH 11TH, 1939, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF HEALTH UNDER PROVISOES (b) AND (c) TO SUBSECTION (1) OF SECTION 17 OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION ACT, 1937.

The Minister of Health hereby certifies under section 2 of the Rules Publication Act, 1893, that on account of urgency the following Regulations should come into immediate operation, and in exercise of the powers conferred on him by provisoes (b) and (c) to subsection (1) of section 17 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, hereby makes the following Regulations to come into operation forthwith as provisional rules:

1. These Regulations may be cited as the Local Government Superannuation (Teachers) Regulations, 1939.

2.—(1) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of these Regulations as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

(2) In these Regulations, unless the context otherwise requires, the following expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them—

"the Act of 1937" means the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937;

"the Teachers Acts" means the Teachers (Superannuation) Acts, 1918 to 1937; and

"superannuation allowance" means superannuation allowance under Part I of the Act of 1937.

3.—(1) In computing the reduction in the amount receivable by any person in any year in respect of superannuation allowance to be made under subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937 (a) in respect of any sum paid or payable at any time under the Teachers Acts which was or is in the nature of a capital payment, or which represents a return of contributions in respect of a period of service which has been reckoned as contributing service in calculating the superannuation allowance, account shall be taken of that sum in manner following, that is to say—

(a) the amount of any sum paid under the Teachers Acts on or before the date on which the superannuation allowance is awarded or becoming payable thereunder at any time thereafter which was or is in the nature of a capital payment shall be divided by the factor shown in the Schedule to these Regulations in relation to the class of the person and to his age at the date on which the sum was paid or becomes payable, and the resulting amount shall be treated as a sum receivable by him by virtue of the Teachers Acts in any year;

(b) the amount representing any balance of his contributions under the Teachers Acts which he has become entitled to be repaid at the date on which the superannuation allowance is awarded in respect of a period of service which has been reckoned as contributing service in calculating the superannuation allowance shall be divided by the factor shown in the Schedule to these Regulations in relation to the class of the person and to his age at the date on which the superannuation allowance is awarded, and the resulting amount shall be treated as a sum receivable by him by virtue of the Teachers Acts in any year;

(c) the amount representing any balance of his contributions under the Teachers Acts which he may become entitled to be repaid after the date on which the superannuation allowance is awarded in respect of a period of service which has been reckoned as contributing service in calculating the superannuation allowance shall be divided by the factor shown in the Schedule to these Regulations in relation to the class of the person and to his age at the date on which he so becomes entitled to be repaid that balance of his contributions, and the resulting amount shall be treated as a sum receivable by him by virtue of the Teachers Acts in any year:

Provided that if, after the provisions of either sub-paragraph (b) or (c) of this paragraph have become applicable in relation to any person, superannuation allowance under the Teachers Acts is granted to him, then—

(i) if the aggregate amount of the deductions made from his superannuation allowance by reason of the previous operation of those provisions is equal to or exceeds the amount granted to him by way of lump sum under the Teachers Acts those provisions shall cease to have any further effect in relation to him, the amount granted to him by way of lump sum under the Teachers Acts shall be deemed not to be a payment in the nature of a capital payment within the meaning of sub-paragraph (a) of this paragraph, and the amount, if any, by which the aggregate amount aforesaid exceeds the amount granted by way of lump sum aforesaid shall be divided by the factor shown in the Schedule to these Regulations in relation to the class of the person and to his age at the date on which the superannuation allowance under the Teachers Acts is granted to him and the resulting amount shall be applied in reduction of the deduction to be made in any year under subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937 in respect of the amount granted to him by way of an annual sum under the Teachers Acts;

(ii) if such aggregate amount as is mentioned in head (i) of this proviso is less than the amount granted to him by way of lump sum under the Teachers Acts such latter amount for the purpose of the application of sub-paragraph (a) of this paragraph shall be deemed to be the difference between that amount and such aggregate amount as aforesaid and sub-paragraphs (b) and (c) of this paragraph shall cease to have any further effect in relation to him.

(2) If, after the provisions of either sub-paragraph (b) or (c) of the preceding paragraph of this Article have become applicable in relation to any person, a repayment of the amount representing the balance of that person's contributions under the Teachers Acts is made to him, those provisions shall, in respect of the amount so repaid, continue to apply in the same manner as they have previously applied in relation to him for the purpose of computing the reduction to be made in his superannuation allowance in any year under subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937 and no further account for that purpose shall be taken of that amount.

(4) If a contributory employee in the calculation of whose superannuation allowance account is taken of such service under the Teachers Acts as is mentioned in subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937 surrenders or has surrendered in accordance with rules made by the Board of Education under subsection (1) of section 1 of the Teachers (Superannuation) Act, 1937, part of the annual sum granted to him by way of superannuation allowance under the Teachers Acts, the annual sum receivable by him in any year by virtue of the Teachers Acts shall for the purposes of subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act of 1937 be deemed to be the annual sum which would have been receivable by him in that year but for the surrender.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

PROVISIONS FOR THE CALCULATION OF TRANSFER VALUES AND DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF THE SUBJOINED TABLES IN CONNECTION THEREWITH.

General.

1. In this Schedule, the following expressions, unless the context otherwise requires, have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them—

"the material date" in relation to any employee in respect of whom a transfer value is being calculated means the date upon which the employee ceased to hold his former employment;

"age" in relation to any employee means his age on the material date;

"remuneration" in relation to any employee means the annual remuneration of his former employment on which contributions were payable by him to a superannuation fund on the material date or in the case of an employee exempted from liability to contribute the annual remuneration of his former employment on the material date or in the case of an employee who had been a local Act contributor the annual amount by which his former employment was remunerated and on which contributions were payable by him to a superannuation fund on the material date

Provided that if, for the purposes of the foregoing definition, account is required to be taken of any fees payable to the employee in respect of any service, the amount thereof shall be taken to be the annual average of the fees payable to him in respect of that service rendered during the five years immediately preceding the material date or, if that service was of shorter duration, such shorter period:

SUPER-ANNUA-TION

Provided also that the remuneration of an employee by whom reduced contributions were payable under a scheme in force by virtue of subsection (3) of section 28 of the Widows', Orphans' and Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1936, or the corresponding provisions of any Act repealed by that Act, shall, so far as it is attributable to the period of contributing service in respect of which reduced contributions were payable, be taken to be the amount of the reduced annual remuneration on which such contributions were payable on the material date or, if the scheme provides for a reduction of contributions by reference directly to contributions which would otherwise be payable, the remuneration of the employee as hereinbefore defined, less twenty times the difference between the aggregate contributions payable by him in respect of the year immediately preceding the material date and the aggregate contributions which would have been so payable by him had no reduction been made:

Provided further that references in the foregoing definition to contributions payable by an employee shall include references to contributions which would have been payable by him but for any reduction or suspension of remuneration by reason of his absence from duty owing to ill-health or injury;

"service" does not include such service as is mentioned in subsection (1) of section 17 of the Act other than such service as is mentioned in proviso (a) to that subsection or in relation to a person who before he became in his former employment a contributory employee or local Act contributor had at any time been an established officer or servant within the meaning of the Asylums Officers' Superannuation Act, 1909, as extended by any subsequent enactment to whom any Regulations for the time being in force under Part V of the Second Schedule to the Act had been applicable, service prior to his entry into that former employment other than service in respect of which a transfer value was paid on his entry into that former employment and in relation to a person who in his former employment was in the whole-time employment of a single local authority means, in respect of any period of previous part-time employment, whole-time service for a proportionately reduced period:

Provided that the provision in the foregoing definition relating to part-time employment followed by whole-time employment shall not apply in the case of a transferred poor law employee who in his former employment was subject to a local Act scheme with the benefit of such provisions as are mentioned in paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of section 26 of the Act or was a contributory employee with the benefit of any of the following provisions namely paragraphs 3, 5 or 8 of Part I of the Second Schedule to the Act;

"contributing service" in relation to a person who has ceased to be a contributory employee having any non-contributing service which, in relation to his former employment, would have been reckonable for the purpose of calculating his superannuation allowance under Part I of the Act or under the Act as amended by any local Act, if on the material date he had been entitled to a superannuation allowance thereunder, at the rate of some fraction larger than one one-hundred-and-twentieth but not exceeding one-sixtieth of remuneration in respect of each such year of service or at the rate of some fraction larger than one one-hundred-and-sixtieth but not exceeding one-eightieth of remuneration in respect of each such year of service, as the case may be, includes such proportion of the actual length of that non-contributing service as is obtained by multiplying the number of years of such service by sixty or eighty, as the case may be, and dividing it by the denominator of the fraction at which that service would have been reckonable as aforesaid:

Provided that if as a condition of being so entitled to reckon the said non-contributing service or any part thereof the person had been discharging but had not fully discharged a liability to pay a sum by instalments and is not in the employment he has entered a contributory employee, such service shall be treated as if the period thereof had been one-half its actual length;

"contributing service" in relation to a person who has ceased to be employed under a local Act authority means service which, in relation to his former employment, would have been reckonable as service or as a period of contribution for the purpose of calculating his superannuation allowance under the local Act scheme if on the material date he had been entitled to a superannuation allowance thereunder:

Provided that if in the case of any such employee any such service as aforesaid was service in relation to which the employee pursuant to the provisions of the local Act scheme, as a condition of being entitled to reckon the said service for any purposes of the local Act scheme, had been discharging but had not fully discharged a liability to pay a sum by instalments to the superannuation fund maintained by the local Act authority or had been under a liability to make payments to that fund by way of a contribution of a percentage of emoluments additional to the percentage payable in respect of current service, the said service shall be treated as if the period thereof had been one-half its actual length unless in the employment he has entered he is a mental hospital employee, in which case the said service shall be disregarded;

"non-contributing service" in relation to a person who has ceased to be a contributory employee does not include any such service as is mentioned in the preceding definition of contributing service in relation to such a person.

2. The transfer value payable in respect of any employee shall be the aggregate of the sums respectively calculated in accordance with the following provisions by reference to his contributing service, if any, and by reference to his non-contributing service, if any:

Provided that such aggregate sum shall—

(a) be reduced by—

(i) an amount equal to any sum together with any interest on any sum which, when the employee ceased to hold the employment in relation to which the transfer value is payable, was paid to him by way of a return of such contributions to or additional contributory payment into a superannuation fund as are mentioned in subsection (5) of section 10 of the Act or of moneys which, pursuant to any Regulations for the time being in force under the Act, were treated as such contributions as aforesaid; and

(ii) an amount equal to the balance of any debt the right to receive which is, pursuant to any such Regulations as aforesaid, deemed to be transferred to the local authority whose employment the employee has entered;

(b) if in relation to the employment which the employee has ceased to hold he had been making any such payments to the superannuation fund concerned as are mentioned in either of the provisos to the definitions of contributing service contained in paragraph 1 of this Schedule, be increased, unless in the employments which he has respectively ceased to hold and entered he was and is a contributory employee, by an amount equal to the aggregate amount so paid, after deduction therefrom of any sum which may have been returned to the employee in respect of such payments as aforesaid.

3. If after a transfer value has been paid out of a superannuation fund relating to the former employment of a person in respect of his entry into one other employment, being a part-time employment under a local authority, that person, within twelve months after the material date, while retaining that part-time employment and without having ceased to hold any other employment which he may have held on the material date as a contributory employee or local Act contributor, enters the part-time employment of another local authority or of two or more other local authorities and becomes such an employee or contributor as aforesaid, the transfer values payable shall be calculated under the provisions of this Schedule as if the person had simultaneously entered all the employments he has entered on or after the material date and as if his remuneration in relation to each part-time employment he has entered were such proportion of his annual remuneration on the material date as the annual remuneration or emoluments of that part-time employment bears to the aggregate amount of the annual remuneration or emoluments of the part-time employments, and the transfer value already paid shall be adjusted accordingly

(2) The amounts shown in columns (2) and (3) of the relative Table in relation to an age which corresponds with that of the employee are to be multiplied respectively by the numbers of years, and of months aggregating less than one year, of contributing service completed on the material date.

(3) The sum of the two products aforesaid is an amount appropriate in respect of £100 of remuneration.

(4) A total amount is to be calculated proportionately by reference to the remuneration of the employee.

(3) The product aforesaid is an amount appropriate in respect of £100 of remuneration.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION ACT, 1937.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT SUPERANNUATION (ACTUARIAL VALUATION) REGULATIONS, 1939.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward for the information of the Authority a copy of the Provisional Regulations (a) made by him in the exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1937, in regard to the actuarial valuation of superannuation funds maintained under the Act and the form of the report to be made by an actuary after any valuation of a fund. An additional copy of the Provisional Regulations and of this Circular are enclosed for the information of the Chief Financial Officer.

Further copies of the Provisional Regulations and of this Circular may be purchased through any bookseller or directly from His Majesty's Stationery Office at the addresses shown thereon.

The reports made on the superannuation funds maintained under the Local Government and other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922, were of a very varied nature and as no standard forms were laid down for use in connection therewith the results were not capable of satisfactory aggregation. The adoption of a standard form of valuation report and the accompanying statistical information will secure that in every case a reasonable amount of information is given regarding the basis adopted in the particular valuation, and the statistics will be of great assistance in any general review of the financial structure of the Act which may be undertaken in the future.

The Regulations provide that the Authority shall supply the actuary with all the information required within three months of the date at which the fund is being valued, and that the valuation shall be completed within one year following that date. It is evident that if no arrangements were made in advance to prepare the information required by the actuary, it would probably be found impracticable, in many cases, to comply with these requirements. It is suggested accordingly that the Authority should consult the actuary whom they employ with a view to the institution forthwith of suitable forms of record for producing the valuation statistics provided for in the Regulations and that arrangements should be made to keep these records continuously up-to-date as a matter of normal routine. The Authority should then experience no difficulty in providing the actuary with all the information required within a comparatively short period after the date at which the fund is being valued.

There is an important difference between the Act of 1937 and the Act of 1922, which will have a considerable effect on the valuation of a superannuation fund under the new conditions. Under the Act of 1922 an authority maintaining a fund were required, subject to a dispensing power in the Minister, to obtain from an actuary a certificate as to the estimated liability of the fund on each occasion on which an employee's post was designated and the report on the periodical valuation made under Section 19 (1) of that Act recorded the condition of the fund as a whole. Under the Act of 1937 the certification of intervaluation liabilities is not required, the extent of such additional liabilities being left to be estimated at the time the fund is being valued. As moreover there will in many instances be several authorities interested in the same fund it will be necessary for the respective interests and liabilities of the several employing authorities to be considered by the actuary and dealt with in his report.

It is essential that, in order to secure that each Authority should pay its proper charges, the report, before recording the result of the valuation and any consequential variations required in existing charges, should indicate clearly any additional liabilities imposed on the fund in respect of the employees of each of the interested Authorities who have become superannuable in the fund since the appointed day or since the date as at which the fund was last valued whichever is later. Article 6 of the Provisional Regulations is accordingly designed to secure that proper provision may be made for such liabilities before the ascertainment of the surplus or deficiency in the fund as a whole. The actuary may have received instructions to investigate the possibility of additional liabilities having arisen from causes other than those specified in that Article for which, also, special provision ought properly to be made. The certificate to be given under Article 6 may include such liabilities, provided that the reason therefor is stated.

Where, after account has been taken of all unsecured liabilities which the actuary estimates to have been imposed as a result of the causes specified, there is found to be a surplus or a deficiency, the actuary should, in accordance with Article 8, consider all the circumstances which have contributed to this result before making his recommendation for the division of such part (if any) of the surplus as he may certify to be disposable or for making good the deficiency, and he should include therein sufficient details of the incidence of benefit and burden as between the various authorities interested in the fund to enable the administering authority to proceed forthwith to make a scheme under Section 22 (6) of the Act.

A disposable surplus should normally be applied:

Firstly, to reduce the amount of any existing deficiency charge over its outstanding term, or to reduce its outstanding term, or to reduce both;

Secondly, if a balance of disposable surplus then remains, to reduce the equivalent contributions of any authority or authorities by a constant annual sum or sums over a period of forty years from the valuation date or such shorter period as is reasonable, regard being had to the amount of surplus thus to be disposed of.

A deficiency should normally be liquidated by increasing any existing deficiency charge over its outstanding term or by a new annual charge payable over a specified period not exceeding forty years from the valuation date.

While the Regulations prescribe the essential matters and statistics which are to be included in the report, it should be distinctly understood that the actuary may, and should, if he considers it necessary, give further observations and statistics.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
A. W. NEVILLE,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

(b) persons who ceased to be employees of that authority and became, by virtue of section 30 (2) of the Act, contributory employees of other authorities in such circumstances that transfer values became payable in respect of them or would have become so payable but for the fact that the authorities in whose employment they became contributory employees are also interested in the superannuation fund;

(c) officers who became contributory employees of that authority by virtue of section 30 (2) of the Act, but—

(i) in respect of whom transfer values were not receivable and, in cases in which such officers had previously been employed by authorities also interested in the superannuation fund, would not have been receivable apart from that fact;

(ii) in respect of whom any transfer values receivable related to part only of the previous service which they became entitled to reckon as service;

(i) the amount (if any) of the estimated liabilities which were imposed on any fund maintained under the Act of 1922 and for which no provision was made therein in respect of persons who became designated employees of that authority between the date when such fund was last valued under the Act of 1922 or, if there was no such valuation thereunder, the date on which that fund was established and the appointed day;

(ii) in a case in which no action was taken under section 22 (2) of the Act, what part (if any) of any estimated liability which would have been included in a certificate under the subsection had one been obtained is not included in the liabilities certified under paragraph (1) of this Article;

(iii) the amount (if any) of the estimated liabilities which have been imposed on the superannuation fund and for which provision is not being made therein in respect of persons who became contributory employees on or within twelve months after the appointed day having been within twelve months before so becoming contributory employees subject to the Act of 1896 or the Act of 1922 and who are entitled by virtue of a determination by that authority under section 12 (6) of the Act to reckon as non-contributing service any periods during which they had previously been employed in the personal service of officers of local authorities;

(c) if a deficiency is disclosed, a statement indicating generally the factors which have caused the deficiency and a recommendation for the allocation of the deficiency among the authorities interested in the superannuation fund, indicating the basis adopted for the proposed allocation and the manner in which the deficiency should be liquidated.

(2) Should it be impracticable to furnish any of the information provided for in paragraph (1) of this Article, the reason should be stated and a recommendation added as to any steps that might be taken with a view to the ascertainment of the information.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING.

CIRCULAR 1305.

Local Authorities and Joint Town Planning Committees.
(England and Wales.)

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
4th March, 1933.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT (a).

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to inform you that a statement will be sent to you within a few days summarising the principal provisions of the new Act. Section 34 of the Act, which gives certain powers to Authorities and owners to enter into agreements, came into operation on the passing of the Act. The remainder of the Act will come into operation on April 1st next, and as from that date the Town Planning Act of 1925 will be repealed and also the provisions in Local Acts extending planning powers, except certain provisions expressly preserved.

Extension of Powers.

The new Act extends materially the planning powers of Local Authorities and places new opportunities within their reach. The gains to the community will depend on how the powers are exercised. Town and country planning is a means by which individual activities may be directed towards larger benefits and economies may be effected, for the individual and for the community. It is not primarily a means by which the Local Authority itself undertakes services, since the principal object of a scheme is to provide a plan within which initiative and enterprise, whether private or public may be exercised to the best advantage.

Contents of Schemes.

Schemes should not enter into more detail than is fully warranted at the time. What is primarily needed is a broad framework for guiding and regulating development. By keeping to the principal requirements, schemes can be more quickly put forward, the necessity for revision is reduced, and attention will be concentrated on the matters which count most for securing a good scheme.

There will be the less reason for including in schemes provisions for the detailed regulation of development, unless the time is ripe for them, because the Act provides means for filling details into the general framework of a plan. In the case of regional schemes, supplementary schemes may be made for this purpose, and in the case of all schemes, supplementary orders may be prepared. Provisions which may be desirable for regulating details of development can, therefore, be put forward when the measures likely to prove best in the general interest can be better foreseen. There has, for instance, been a tendency in some schemes to lay down the lines of new roads too much in advance of the time when the siting of them is either necessary or useful.

Provisions in schemes should, of course, be based on sound understanding of, and be closely adapted to, local conditions, prospects and interests. Vague recommendations, however admirable in intention, only waste time and cause irritation. A scheme must above all be practical.

(a) That is, the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932, which came into operation (apart from section 34, mentioned at the beginning of this Circular) on April 1st, 1933. See the Act and notes, ante, pp. 1879 et seq.

Regional Schemes.

One of the most significant developments of recent years has been the growth of Regional Committees. They are a response to the pressure of current conditions. Where neighbouring districts have common interests or where they form one economic unit, there is obvious advantage in having one master plan for the whole unit providing at least for the large matters of regional importance, with freedom to each Local Authority, if that be the general wish, to fit into the master plan, by supplementary schemes or orders, matters which are primarily of local concern.

The prosperity of each district will depend largely upon the prosperity of the region of which it forms part, and any sectional advantage is dearly bought if the price be lessened efficiency of the region as a whole, whether as a unit for the production of goods or as a unit within which amenities are to be preserved. Differences between Authorities are far more readily composed where joint committees are established. The smaller Authorities need not fear that co-operation may be a prelude to absorption by larger neighbours.

The better practice is to appoint an executive Regional Committee, with powers to prepare an operative master plan. There may, however, be local reasons why it may be expedient to rest content with an Advisory Committee as, for instance, where some Authorities within the region have already proceeded far with local schemes or where a sufficient body of support cannot be obtained for an executive committee. Whichever course is adopted, there should be systematic means for consultation with important interests not represented on the committee.

County Councils.

The range of functions now exercised by County Councils renders imperative their active co-operation in preparing schemes. Except the London County Council, they are not themselves planning Authorities unless powers are relinquished to them or conferred on default, but they have the right to participate in Joint Committees and are expressly enabled to assist in the preparation of schemes. They may also be made Responsible Authorities for particular proposals in schemes.

A number of County Councils have already taken a leading part in preparing proposals. The Minister hopes that County Councils will not hesitate to take advantage of the opportunities which are available to them and that other Authorities will not fail to make full use of their assistance. With the inter-locking of functions between County Councils and other Authorities, the best schemes can be obtained only in this spirit.

Planning is of first importance for County Councils for their own work. It is only by the exercise of informed foresight, the fruits of which can be embodied in schemes, that they can hope to carry out their duties to the best advantage of the community and with the largest measure of economy. By timely negotiation with owners, compensation in such matters as the lines of new streets or building or improvement lines can be avoided or kept within narrow limits.

Built Areas.

Local Authorities will now be empowered to prepare schemes for areas already developed and will thus be enabled to deal with difficulties which have confronted them. The Act provides, in the case of any land already built upon, that the Minister shall not approve a resolution to prepare a scheme unless he is satisfied " that public improvements are likely to be made, or other development is likely to take place, within such a period of time and on such a scale as to make the inclusion of the land in a scheme expedient, or that the land comprises buildings or other objects of architectural, historic, or artistic interest, or that the land is so situate that the general object of the scheme would be better secured by its inclusion." The object of this limitation is to exclude from the powers of planning what have been described as " static areas," that is, areas where such changes are not to be expected as to justify the making of schemes for them. In deciding whether " development is likely to take place within such a period of time and on such a scale as to make the inclusion of the land in a scheme expedient," it will be right, of course, to take account not only of development which has already occurred or is contemplated in the area, but also what has happened in areas similarly situated. Development as defined in section 53 of the Act includes, with certain specified exceptions, " any use of the land or any building thereon for a purpose which is different from the purpose for which the land or building was last being used."

As regards the last part of the provision quoted from the Act ("land . . . so situate that the general object of the scheme would be better secured by its inclusion "), this will enable areas to be included where such development is not so likely as to justify the preparation of a scheme for the areas as independent units, but where there are reasons for the efficiency of the scheme why they should be included—where, for example, areas of land would be left uncovered by the scheme in the midst of other areas, or where the area contains special features, such as open spaces, which should be preserved as part of the general plan, or, in the general case, where an area in which new development is taking place or is likely is being planned and there is another area on its borders and the extension of planning provisions to that area is necessary for the efficient planning of the first area, as, for instance, a residential area in proximity to an industrial or business area for which provision is made in the scheme.

These extensive new powers, as indeed all the other powers of the Act, will, of course, have to be exercised with care. Local Authorities should confine their proposals to what is not only desirable but reasonably practicable, not attempting to secure what might have been feasible if the land had not already been developed but may, in view of the existing development, be beyond available public means or unfair to existing interests.

In the case of some areas, and certainly for many parts of areas covered by schemes, more may not be required than zoning and the preservation of existing amenities—provisions relating to the use and kinds of buildings which may be erected, space about buildings, preservation of open spaces and the like. In other cases it will be advisable also to provide for street improvements by laying down the lines of contemplated widenings or of new streets. Any new works would not, of course, be carried out until the time is opportune (as when private redevelopment takes place) and means are available, and they can then be carried out more easily and at less cost because of the provision made in the scheme.

When a new building has to be set back in order to provide for a future street improvement which is not likely to be carried out for some time, measures should be adopted, wherever practicable, for reducing the cost, as by arranging with the owner that the business premises, at least on the ground floor, may be brought out to the line of the existing street by means of a temporary front. Arrangements satisfactory to the owner and to the Local Authority can usually be effected.

Special safeguards are contained in the Act to protect the interests of the owners of existing buildings. These are set out in pages 7 and 12 of the summary of the Act (a).

Country Planning.

A large amount of rural land is now included in schemes as land likely to be developed, particularly because of modern transport facilities. The Act extends the powers. As with land already built upon, so in the case of rural land there is a limitation on the kind of land which may be included in schemes, the general object being the same, to exclude from schemes "static areas" where changes are not so likely as to justify the preparation of a scheme. The Act provides that the Minister shall not approve a resolution to prepare a scheme unless he is satisfied "in the case of land which is neither already built upon nor in course of development, nor likely to be developed, that the land is so situated in relation to land which is already built upon, or in course of development, or on which development is likely to take place, as to make its inclusion in a scheme expedient, or that it comprises objects or places of natural interest or beauty."

The object of this provision is to define land for which the protection of a scheme may be desirable for preserving rural amenities, quite independently of any development which has taken place or may be taking place or be likely to take place. Broadly speaking, it enables a scheme to be prepared for any rural land which is so much within the sphere of influence of land already built upon or being developed or likely to be developed that either there may be a threat to rural amenities or that special measures for protecting rural amenities may be warranted because of the importance of preserving them by reason of that proximity.

With modern transport, this power will obviously extend, for example, to a wide area of rural land outside any large town. The Minister wishes to emphasise that this special power can be exercised for preserving amenities, apart from control of prospective development. Land which is in course of development or on which development is likely to take place can, of course, be included in schemes in virtue of that fact, whether the district be rural or urban.

The power to prepare schemes also extends to land which "comprises objects or places of natural interest or beauty." This power enables schemes to be prepared not only for the objects or places themselves and their immediate surroundings, but also for adjoining areas of land the protection of which may reasonably be held to be an integral part of protecting the objects or places of natural interest or beauty.

Schemes for rural areas where development of an urban character is not to be anticipated may be expected to be directed chiefly to protecting rural amenities, to securing, so far as reasonably practicable, grouped instead of scattered development where the development is substantial, or preventing development in areas where insanitary conditions would be likely to ensue or where the cost of providing the necessary public services would be prohibitive, or in so regulating the development as to avoid these consequences.

The Act gives additional opportunities of preventing unsightly and wasteful ribbon development, both in rural areas and in the neighbourhood of towns. There is a general demand that more should be done to prevent this kind of development, in the interest of economy no less than of amenity. The object must be achieved with fairness to owners. This may be possible, for instance:

(a) By grouped development adjoining but off the arterial road, care being taken to avoid too numerous side streets into that road. Instances will occur where grouped development can be encouraged by concessions which reduce the cost of street works where an estate is developed as a whole and the future use of the streets is fixed by the development;

(b) Where development abutting on the road cannot reasonably be prevented, by securing that buildings shall be erected with direct access not to the arterial road but to a service road parallel with the arterial road and communicating with it at suitable intervals. In this way not only may serious reduction in the traffic value of the arterial road be avoided but the amenity and value of buildings, especially residences, may be increased, by siting them some distance away from the noise and bustle of the main road;

(c) By use of the powers to which reference is made in the next section.

When submitting for the approval of the Minister a resolution to prepare a scheme under the Act (after the Act comes into operation all resolutions, other than those relating to supplementary or varying schemes, will require approval), Authorities will be required to set out the grounds on which they are satisfied that the area covered by the resolution comes within the terms of the Act and to forward, with their comments, copies of any suggestions which may have been deceived and not met or withdrawn for including or excluding land.

General Development Orders.

Many complaints have been made in recent years of sporadic development, apart from ill-considered ribbon development. Some sporadic development has been so lacking in modern decencies as to be scarcely credible in this country in the twentieth century.

In addition, there is often waste and injury from development which is not undertaken in an orderly fashion, probably much more in the aggregate than from development which is definitely bad. Public services may have to be provided, for instance, long before they will be largely used; they may have to be on a scale sufficient also for intervening development, which may not occur for many years. The Act contains provisions which should help materially in dealing with this problem. A scheme may specify areas where general building development is not permitted until an Order has been issued. By general building development is meant building development which may take place as a matter of course if it complies with conditions laid down in the scheme or order, in contrast with particular development for which express permission is required, as provided by the Act.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

The interests of owners are safeguarded by the Act, which provides that an application for particular development may be refused only if certain specified conditions prevail which make refusal reasonable and fair.

The object of these new powers is to prevent development which is likely to lead to insanitary conditions without public services which it would be too costly and unfair to other ratepayers to provide at the time or which would be likely seriously to injure the amenities of the locality. Provisions applying the powers must be reasonable. It is not intended to prevent development in new areas until partially developed areas have been filled. Reasonable elasticity must be permitted and due regard paid to the interests of owners.

It will be expedient that the scheme itself should lay down the kind of general development which may take place in a restricted area when a General Development Order is issued if this can then be done with assurance, but not if to do so would be premature.

Design and External Appearance.

Schemes may include provisions for regulating the design and external appearance of buildings, subject to a right of appeal. The powers cover control of materials, but only as part of control of design or external appearance. Taste is not a matter for dogmatism. The powers should be used for preventing what may reasonably be regarded as "outrages," buildings out of keeping with their surroundings and an offence to the neighbourhood. Much can be achieved by education and friendly guidance.

As indicated in a previous circular, the Royal Institute of British Architects and the Council for the Preservation of Rural England have appointed voluntary panels of architects up and down the country, and these panels are prepared to advise Local Authorities and private developers. There are still many places where use has not been made of these panels. In some places simple leaflets have been issued for the help and guidance of builders, and, in some, arrangements have been made with the local representative group of architects for the preparation of a number of designs of buildings suitable for the locality, the designs being obtainable at a moderate price.

It should be well known by this time that well-designed buildings should not usually cost more than those ill-designed; on the contrary, they are likely to be cheaper. There are instances where builders at first resented criticisms of their plans, but have since become convinced from practical experience of the value of help and guidance, and have become among the most vigorous in maintaining standards. An ugly building, out of keeping with its surroundings, may be not only an eyesore and injurious to local amenities, but may reduce the value of neighbouring property.

Local Authorities should bear in mind that for new public buildings of importance the advice of the Royal Fine Art Commission* is available. The Commission are also prepared, if invited, and if they think their intervention likely to be in the public interest, to offer advice on questions of principle which may arise in the case of new private buildings of special importance for the locality.

Preservation of Special Buildings.

County Councils and Borough and Urban and Rural District Councils are empowered to make orders, subject to the approval of the Minister, for preventing the demolition of buildings of special architectural or historic interest. The powers are limited to areas for which resolutions have taken effect. Compensation may be claimed where an order has come into operation.

These new powers supplement those of the Ancient Monuments Acts, and the Minister is required to consult the Commissioners of Works before approving orders. The exercise of the two sets of powers can thus be kept in line. It may be mentioned that the Minister is also required to consult with the Commissioners of Works where it is represented to him that a provision in a proposed scheme will involve the removal, pulling down, or alteration of a building of special architectural or historic interest. Provisions may still be included in schemes for preserving buildings.

* Communications should be addressed to the Secretary, Royal Fine Art Commission, 6, Burlington Gardens, W.1.

The powers should be used only where there is a strong case. Orders will not prove of service unless the buildings will be maintained. Before putting forward orders, Authorities should satisfy themselves so far as practicable what their liabilities are likely to be and should do their utmost to come to satisfactory arrangements with the owners.

Compensation.

The right to claim compensation continues broadly as under the existing Act. It is expressly provided that, in the case of property on which a trade or business or profession is carried on, the claim for compensation may include the amount of any resulting damage to that trade, business or profession. Reference is made later to claims that may be made in respect of injurious affection due to interim decisions.

The periods within which claims may be made are specified in the Act. Special provision is made for cases where a building line is fixed in the scheme for land on which there is already a building or on which there was a building within two years before the material date.

Substantial changes have been made in the provisions relating to the exclusion of compensation. The vague term "character" of buildings has been dropped, and in its place the subjects which it covers have been expressly enumerated—design, external appearance and use of buildings. Compensation may be excluded in respect of some additional matters, which are set out in the summary of the Act (pages 10 to 12). There are provisions to secure that the right to exclude compensation shall not be unfairly exercised.

The Act also provides that the exclusion of compensation in respect of specified provisions in a scheme shall be contained in the scheme itself, instead of in a declaration of the Minister, so that interested parties will have full opportunity of making representations.

Betterment.

The law as to betterment is materially changed. The percentage of increased value which may be claimed has been raised from 50 to 75. Any person on whom a claim for betterment is made has the right to have it deferred until the increased value is realised in one of the ways specified in the Act (see page 13 of the summary), unless he has made a claim for compensation for injurious affection which is not immediately suffered. Where a claim is deferred, the value of the land for determining the amount of the increase in value will be the value at the time when the fresh claim is made.

Parliamentary Procedure.

Under the Town Planning Act of 1925 a scheme comes into operation as soon as it has been approved by the Minister. Under the new Act, every scheme has to be laid before each House of Parliament, with power to either House within twenty-one sitting days to pass a resolution that the scheme, or any particular provision in the scheme, ought not to come into operation.

If such a resolution is passed, the Minister may then treat the scheme as though it were a scheme which had not been approved by him. This procedure is necessary because amendments consequential on and additional to those made by Parliament may be required by reason of those amendments. The Authority who submitted the scheme and any interested parties will be consulted in due course if additional amendments are proposed. Any scheme so amended has then to be submitted again to Parliament. The same procedure may be adopted if the Minister considers it expedient to withdraw from Parliament a scheme after it has been submitted.

Further, any provision in a scheme which suspends a statutory enactment is not valid until it has been passed by both Houses by affirmative resolutions, unless the enactment is one of those excepted by the Act.

Legal Validity.

The new Act provides a simple procedure by which the legal validity of a scheme or any provision in it may be determined. Proceedings for this purpose may be taken within six weeks after the publication of a notice that the scheme has passed through the Parliamentary procedure required by the Act. The period of six weeks should afford ample time, because the provisions of a scheme will have been before the public for a long time before it has passed through Parliament.

After the expiration of that period the legal validity of any provision in a scheme cannot be questioned. Finality is essential since owners who have undertaken development in reliance on the scheme cannot fairly be left in uncertainty. The scheme cannot become operative until the expiration of the six weeks during which its validity may be questioned.

Interim Development.

The relatively small number of appeals made in past years against interim decisions indicates that Local Authorities have generally exercised their powers with discretion. The further fact that a large proportion of these appeals have been settled to the satisfaction of both parties shows that there are not many cases where agreement cannot be reached by negotiation.

The Act contains a number of new provisions important for interim applications. In the first place, in order to avoid delay, an application is to be deemed to have been granted if it is not decided within two months, unless the applicant has agreed to extend this time. Applications must be decided as soon as possible after receipt; the two months is a limit. Where another Authority may be concerned in a decision, arrangements should be made so that decision may be reached well within the limit of time. Local Authorities are required to state their reasons where an application is refused, or granted subject to conditions.

Secondly, Authorities are empowered to contribute towards any loss or damage suffered by an applicant by an interim decision. The Minister cannot compel an Authority to make a contribution, but in deciding an appeal he is required to consider any offer which has been made. Cases have occurred where the Minister has considered that the reasons for the decision of the Local Authority have been good, but he has not felt able to uphold it because of undue hardship to the applicant without some contribution, which Authorities at present have no power to make. They will now be able to provide equitably for any such case.

Attention is drawn to the new provisions in the Act giving a right to claim compensation in certain classes of cases in respect of interim decisions, and to the provision giving the owner in certain circumstances the right to require purchase of land proposed to be preserved for a public open space where permission for interim development is refused (see pages 3, 6 and 10 of the summary).

As stated on previous occasions, Authorities cannot expect to regulate development as closely during the interim period as when a scheme is in force (which is one reason why the preparation of schemes should not be delayed after a resolution has been passed), and there must be a reasonable spirit of give and take in dealing with applications consistently with the interests of other owners.

At present interim control extends only to the development of estates and building operations. Under the Act, the control may also cover use of land (other than agricultural use), whether or not buildings are to be erected. It will probably be wise ordinarily to limit any control of this kind to preventing uses likely to be dangerous to health or detrimental to the neighbourhood or likely to involve the ratepayers in unreasonable expense.

The effect of interim control continues to be the same. The erection of buildings or the use of land cannot be prohibited, provided the byelaws and other like requirements are complied with. But an owner who develops on land covered by a resolution without the permission of the Authority does so subject to this risk, that if the development is not in conformity with the scheme as it comes into operation, the Responsible Authority can bring it into conformity at his cost and without compensation. On the other hand, he is protected if he has obtained permission, and, should the permitted development not conform with the scheme (which would be exceptional), as in the case of existing buildings and uses, conformity could be required only subject to a right to claim compensation.

It has been represented to the Minister that in some cases formal written permission has not been granted when applications have been made, and that informal assurances that the proposed development can proceed have been considered sufficient and have been accepted by applicants. It is right that an applicant should have the protection of a formal permission in every case where the development is permitted, and this should always be given, in writing.

Time Limits.

Local Authorities should take particular note of the time limits provided in the Act. Where a resolution to prepare a scheme under the Act has been approved, the Minister is required by the Fourth Schedule of the Act to provide in regulations that—

(1) Where a Preliminary Statement is prepared, the Statement shall be submitted within not more than eighteen months of the approval of the resolution and the draft scheme within not more than a further eighteen months of the approval of the Preliminary Statement; and

(2) Where the Authority proceed immediately to the preparation of a draft scheme (without a Preliminary Statement), the draft scheme shall be submitted within not more than three years of the approval of the resolution.

The Minister is authorised to extend these periods only where satisfied that there are special circumstances to warrant an extension, and he will require to be assured that the Authority has a reasonable prospect of complying with the time limits before he approves a resolution. Resolutions should not be passed until the Authority are satisfied that they can comply with the time limits, barring unforeseen circumstances.

In the past, a long time has usually elapsed between the passing of the resolution and the submission of proposals. The Minister is well aware of the various circumstances which have prevented Authorities from preparing schemes more speedily, many of them beyond the control of the Authorities. He is well aware also of the time which is taken up in the necessary consultations and negotiations with owners, and that delays occur for which the Authorities are in no way responsible. Allowing, however, for these facts, in many cases sufficient effort has not been made to bring proposals to a head. Authorities must so arrange their work as to comply with the time limits. A definite time-programme should be settled, with a margin for contingencies. If all that is desired cannot be included in schemes within the period, then proposals should be put forward, after the necessary consultations, covering as much as is practicable, leaving outstanding matters to be dealt with by supplementary schemes or orders. Authorities should concentrate from the outset on matters of essential importance, thus making sure of the main framework of the scheme.

It will generally be necessary that Authorities should do more preliminary work before resolutions are passed. It may be objected that difficulties may occur if proposals are disclosed before a resolution has been passed. But a good deal of preliminary work, including the survey of local conditions, general consultation with owners and negotiations with other Authorities, can be undertaken without disclosing proposals, and progress will be greatly facilitated if this work is well done before a resolution is passed.

General Procedure.

Local Authorities will usually find it convenient to delegate the work of preparation, and of dealing with interim applications and other incidental matters, to a Committee appointed for the purpose. The Committee should preferably be small, and be given ample powers. A scheme is of such supreme importance for the future of the district that too much care cannot be taken in appointing a suitable body for its preparation. The scheme itself must always be adopted by the Council (or Joint Committee) as a whole, at a meeting of which special notice has been given that the business will be considered.

It is important also that applications for development shall be considered and decided by a body of persons who are familiar with the considerations of which account should be taken and that, so far as practicable, all applications shall be dealt with by the same persons, so as to secure uniformity. The considerations which arise will be primarily of an administrative nature, but all applications must be decided in a judicial spirit.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Notices.

One cause of delay in the past, and of expense, has been the onerous burden of "referencing," of ascertaining individual owners and of serving notices on them. This procedure will be replaced by a simpler system, which is described in pages 3 and 4 of the summary. Briefly, public advertisement will have to be issued as soon as a resolution has taken effect. Individual notices will afterwards have to be served on owners and occupiers in the area whose names appear in the assessments to income tax; a period of six months after the date on which the resolution comes into effect is allowed for this purpose, the object being to enable the Authority to send out the notices with the Rate Demand Notes if they so desire. Further, opportunity is given for owners and associations representing owners or business or industry to be registered, and those registered are then to receive individual notice at each stage of the scheme of which public notice has to be given. This register will have to be kept with care to ensure that notice is sent to every owner and association entitled to it.

The Act provides that where, for instance, under a scheme an Authority other than that by which the scheme was prepared becomes the Responsible Authority for part of the area, the scheme may provide for the transfer of the relative portion of the register to that other Authority. The register should be so kept as to facilitate the transfer.

The new system of notices will be not only simpler and cheaper but will also have the advantage that owners will receive individual notice at the earliest stage of the scheme instead of, as now, at a late stage.

Resolutions now in force.

Resolutions passed under the Act of 1925 or previous Acts continue in force. The Minister proposes to issue an order to bring the procedure in these cases into general conformity with that under the new Act, with a saving for cases where action has already been taken.

Where a Local Authority or Joint Committee propose to prepare one scheme for an area for which a resolution is already in force and for an area for which a resolution is passed under the new Act, it will not be necessary to rescind the first resolution because the Act provides that a scheme may be prepared for areas covered by two or more resolutions or any part of those areas. The "material date" for any area will depend, of course, on the date on which the resolution for that area came into effect.

Schemes should be submitted with all reasonable despatch in the many cases where resolutions have already been passed, consistently with the circumstances of the present time. The reduced amount of public work which is now being carried out may provide an opportunity in a number of places of pressing forward with planning schemes already in hand, because little expenditure is involved and the future savings may be large.

Aerodromes.

The reservation of land for areodromes is expressly included in the Second Schedule of the Act as one of the purposes for which a scheme may provide. The growth of air travel has necessitated increased attention to the subject. Reservation of land for this purpose needs to be timely, otherwise suitable land may be difficult to obtain. The Air Ministry wish to stress the importance of reserving land convenient of access and free of instructions in the vicinity dangerous to flying, such as electric cables. It is necessary also to arrange with owners that neighbouring development which would interfere with the use of the aerodrome shall be avoided, and that buildings and other structures in the immediate vicinity shall be kept comparatively low. These and other precautions are best ensured if land is set aside for the aerodrome before much development has taken place in the neighbourhood.

The Air Ministry advise that planning Authorities will as a rule find it desirable to obtain the advice of an aerodrome consultant as to suitable land, its general lay-out and the safeguards desirable in neighbouring development. A list of consultants approved by that Ministry can be obtained from them.

Agreements with Owners.

Section 34 of the Act (this section came into force on the passing of the Act) enables owners to enter into agreements with Authorities, including County Councils, for the planning, development or use of land permanently or for a specified period. Many agreements of this nature have been made in the past, but most of them have depended for their validity on inclusion in the scheme. Under the Act an agreement of the kind can be made before the scheme has come into operation. It may be convenient to incorporate in the scheme agreements made in advance of it, or to schedule them to the scheme, in order that the latter may give a complete picture of the arrangements made for the development of the area.

There is advantage in entering into definite agreements wherever possible. In deciding on proposed agreements, Authorities should have careful regard to the interests of neighbouring owners. Agreements under the section must be entered in the Local Land Charges Register. Local Authorities will probably find it convenient and economical, in addition, to keep for their own use a readily available record of agreements, as of interim decisions or other interim arrangements. Where an Authority other than that preparing a scheme proposes to enter into an agreement for land within the area of the proposed scheme, they should consult with that Authority, and should afterwards notify them of any agreement made.

Crown Lands.

A scheme is not enforceable in respect of land in the occupation of the Crown, but it is desirable that, so far as reasonable, such land should be developed in harmony with the scheme, and the Act enables Government Departments to enter into agreements with planning Authorities for this purpose.

As with private owners so also with Government Departments, Planning Authorities should enter into negotiations at the very earliest stages of the preparation of a scheme, before proposals are definitely formulated. There is everything to be gained by so doing. Crown land in the occupation of, for example, a Defence Department or the Post Office, will probably have been acquired for a specific purpose and the use of the land for that purpose may crucially affect the right planning of neighbouring lands. On the other hand, Crown lands under the management of the Commissioners of Crown Lands may be intended for general development, and the Commissioners will be desirous of co-operating with Local Authorities in securing the best use of the land. By timely negotiations, and by appreciating national, as well as local, needs, there should be few cases, if any, where satisfactory arrangements cannot be made. Land includes foreshore. The larger part of the foreshore belonging to the Crown is under the management of the Board of Trade. The Board of Trade are also responsible for safeguarding the public right of navigation, which extends over all foreshore, irrespective of ownership.

Enquiries with regard to lands owned by Service Departments should be addressed to the Admiralty, War Office or Air Ministry and not to Local Commands or units. In respect of Territorial Army Association properties enquiries should be addressed to the Secretary of the County Association, who will receive general instructions to consult the War Office in all cases.

Mention may be made that for many places the Postmaster-General can give advanced indication where new telephone exchanges may be located. This information is useful for planning. Enquiry should be made of the Post Office Superintending Engineer, whose address may be obtained from the local Post Office or Telephone Exchange. Any information provided will be intended solely to assist in preparing plans and must be treated as strictly confidential.

Model Clauses.

A new set of model clauses is being prepared, to bring them into line with the new Act. The Minister will be glad to receive any suggestions on the subject from Local Authorities or Joint Committees or their officials.

Experience indicates that, with the help of the model clauses, Authorities should now often be able readily to proceed without undue delay to the draft scheme, without a Preliminary Statement. There is advantage in reaching finality as soon as reasonably practicable, and the Minister hopes that an increasing number of Authorities will follow this procedure.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Authorities should not often find it necessary to depart from the model Preliminary Statement or the model clauses, which are periodically revised in the light of the latest experience. The Minister will be glad if they will always indicate where they do propose to depart from the models, with the reasons, and thus facilitate decision.

Advisory Committee.

In the course of the discussion on the Bill, the Minister stated that he intended to appoint an Advisory Committee to assist in the carrying out of the work under the Act. He proposes that the Committee shall contain persons from the local government associations, from bodies representatives of the interests of owners and of business and industry and from bodies concerned with planning and with amenities.

Elasticity.

The Ministry have always insisted on reasonable elasticity in schemes. A scheme has to fit conditions and should not be more rigid than the conditions permit. Needless difficulties will arise if unreasonable rigidity is attempted.

Reasonable elasticity, however, does not involve either uncertainty of what is intended or absence of definite proposals. Elasticity both in detailed planning and in zoning can the more readily be secured under the Act, without incurring the dangers of indefiniteness, because of the provisions enabling supplementary schemes or orders to be made to add to or to modify in an orderly and well-considered manner the provisions embodied in the scheme. For example, an area zoned for residential purposes might be ruined by the casual erection of some other type of building. On the other hand, its erection as part of a well-considered detailed plan, allocating immediately adjacent land to suitable purposes, may leave the residential character of the remainder of the land uninjured.

Elasticity is especially desirable in zoning. To reserve an area of land solely for any one class of buildings, rigidly excluding others, will usually be justified only if it is clear that the land will be so used at an early date or if there are special reasons, such as scarcity of other suitable land for the purpose. Industrial and commercial development covers a wide range of activities, some of which can be carried on in areas which are predominantly residential, under suitable conditions, and may indeed have to be carried on in or near such areas if they are to prosper. In all proposals, the wishes of the owners of the land as well as the general interest must be fully considered.

Every scheme should be periodically reviewed, say once every five years, to see whether any changes are necessary, changes being effected, of course, only if really required. Proper account must be taken also of any interests which have grown up in reliance on the scheme, and, it should not be changed except for fully adequate reasons. The need for revision will be reduced where schemes are reasonably elastic and where they do not contain details in advance of the appropriate time, these being left, as already indicated, to supplementary schemes or orders so far as that is expedient.

Consultation of Interests.

The Act requires that schemes shall be prepared in co-operation with persons interested in the land proposed to be included in the scheme. The Ministry have always emphasised that the closest co-operation of this kind is essential for the best results.

The Minister wishes to stress that the consultation should be undertaken from the very earliest stages, before proposals are publicly formulated. It will generally be advisable that, before owners are consulted, the local committee or officials shall have prepared sketch outlines of a plan, but any outline at that stage should be wholly provisional and should not be made public either by any formal issue or through discussions in council or committee. It is usually neither fair nor sensible to publish proposals before owners have been consulted, and the atmosphere conducive to friendly negotiation is not promoted if owners first hear through the Press or otherwise, before they have been consulted, of proposals which may closely affect them. On the other hand, if frank consultation is undertaken right from the outset in a reasonable spirit of give and take, experience shows that proposals can usually be formulated satisfactory to the public and to the owner, and the preparation and fulfilment of schemes thus be materially facilitated. Furthermore, in this way questions of compensation may be wholly removed or much reduced; broadly, the measure in which a scheme is good is also the measure in which questions of compensation are removed, except where land is reserved or acquired for public purposes.

In putting forward proposals reasonable regard should be paid to commitments already entered into by owners. Agreements with owners should be reduced to writing; it is not enough to assume agreement, as is sometimes done, simply because objection is not raised or vague general concurrence expressed.

The Authority preparing a scheme should also ascertain the views of other bodies in their districts who are concerned in planning. Steps should be taken to ascertain any proposals which are likely materially to affect development. It is important to ascertain, for instance, the views and intentions of statutory undertakers, and in this connection attention is drawn to section 31, by which statutory undertakers are empowered to indemnify planning Authorities in respect of provisions inserted in a scheme for their benefit. Thus, a new railway line or a new station may crucially affect the development of the neighbouring area; where any provision of this kind can be foreseen the scheme should be formulated with this prospect in mind, and, where desired, suitable arrangements can be made with the railway company for reserving the necessary land.

It is well that Authorities should let the general public, as well as owners and others directly concerned, know what they are aiming to do in their proposals. Regional reports have been useful in spreading this information. Leaflets which have been prepared by some Authorities have proved of much service. The local Press can be more used. A Preliminary Statement or a scheme is in itself unavoidably a rather dry document to the ordinary man. Authorities through the Press and otherwise should show the living purpose behind them.

Industry and Commerce.

More consultation is needed with representatives of industry and commerce. A scheme is above all a business proposition: this cannot be too strongly emphasised. It stands or falls according to the measure in which it contributes to the prosperity of the district, the measure in which it facilitates the activities on which that prosperity depends, whether industrial or commercial, and preserves and develops local amenities.

A good scheme is as much the concern of local business interests as of the public authority. For instance, it is to the gain of industry that well-planned industrial sites should be provided, conveniently situated with the best facilities for transport, by road, rail and, where available, water. The costs of production can thus be reduced, and also a material contribution made towards solving transport problems. Appropriate provisions in schemes, determined after consultation and in co-operation with the interests concerned, can facilitate the development of such sites by private enterprise. In this connection it is necessary also to bear in mind the advantage of providing housing sites within ready reach of industrial sites, and in this way helping to reduce the waste which too often occurs in long journeys to and from work. Endeavour should be made so far as practicable to secure well-planned units of development, with industrial, commercial and residential areas existing or prospective all in proper relationship so as to facilitate business, convenience and amenity.

Help and Guidance to Developers.

There are other directions in which developers may be helped. By reason of the many plans which come before them and from knowledge of what is done elsewhere, local officials should become a rich storehouse of experience. Authorities should not be content with an attitude of negation aimed at preventing what is injurious to the community and other owners, but should be constructive, ready to help developers with suggestions how land may be put to better use. There are numerous instances where advice has been tendered to developers which has enabled them to develop their land not only with more amenity but with less cost, to the benefit of the private owner and of the community.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

There is advantage if sketch plans are available at the local office for areas which are ripe for general development, not necessarily plans formally embodied in schemes or supplementary orders but suggestions available for private developers. At the same time it is necessary to avoid stereotyping any particular form of development. A drab uniformity even of what is in itself good may be depressing. If progress is to be maintained, individual initiative must have plenty of scope and the aim of Local Authorities should be to help and to stimulate, not to impose more than is essential.

Copies of this Circular and of the Summary referred to in paragraph 1 have been placed on sale and may be obtained from the Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
I. G. GIBBON,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Authority.

SUMMARY REFERRED TO IN MINISTRY OF HEALTH CIRCULAR 1305.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT.

Summary of Provisions.

This summary is not intended to be more than a general indication of what the Act provides, and it is not exhaustive. The terms of the Act itself must be consulted for the precise effect of its provisions (a).

Sec. 1: Scope.

A scheme may be made for any land, whether there are or are not buildings upon it.

The general objects for which a scheme may be made are—to control development; to secure proper sanitary conditions, amenity and convenience; to preserve existing buildings or other objects of architectural, historic or artistic interest and places of natural interest or beauty; and generally to protect existing amenities.

These powers are subject to the limitations set out in section 6.

The Local Authorities for the purposes of the Act are:—in the City of London, the Common Council; in the County of London, the London County Council; elsewhere, Borough and Urban District and Rural District Councils.

Any County District Council may relinquish its powers and duties, or some of them, to the County Council, on such conditions and for such time as may be agreed. Where such an agreement is made, or is rescinded or varied, the County Council has to send a copy to the Minister.

Sec. 3: Joint Committees.

Two or more Authorities, including County Councils, may form a Joint Committee for the exercise of such powers and duties in connection with the preparation or adoption of schemes as may be agreed, but not the powers of borrowing money or of levying a rate.

Every appointed member of the Committee must be a member of one or other of the Authorities, but the same person may represent two or more Authorities. He may be appointed for so long as he remains a member of one of the Authorities or for a shorter term.

A Joint Committee may co-opt members, but three-fourths of the members must be "appointed members," that is, members appointed as representatives of constituent Authorities. The Joint Committee may appoint sub-committees, consisting wholly or partly of members of the Joint Committee, but three-fourths of the members of a sub-committee must be "appointed members" of the Joint Committee.

The expenses of a Joint Committee may be defrayed by one or more constituent Authorities as may be agreed or, failing agreement, determined by the Minister.

The accounts of Joint Committees are subject to Government audit except where none of the constituent Authorities is under Government audit.

Sec. 4: Compulsory Combinations.

The Minister may by Order constitute a Joint Committee of two or more Authorities (including County Councils), at the request of one or more of them. He must hold a local inquiry before he does so, unless all the Authorities assent to the proposal. The Order may dissolve any existing Joint Committee, if that appears to the Minister to be necessary.

Sec. 5: Joint Committees: Right to Join.

The County Council has the right to become a member of any Joint Committee of which any County District Council in the County is a member.

The Minister may add to a Joint Committee any Local Authority whose district adjoins that of any constituent Authority of the Joint Committee.

Sec. 6: Resolutions.

A Local Authority or Joint Committee may resolve to prepare a scheme for any land in, or in the neighbourhood of, their area, or may adopt a scheme proposed by all or any of the owners of such land. A resolution (other than a resolution to prepare a varying or supplementary scheme) is not to take effect unless approved by the Minister.

Land which may be planned.

The Minister is not to approve a resolution unless satisfied—

(a) "in the case of any land already built upon, that public improvements are likely to be made, or other development is likely to take place, within such a period of time and on such a scale as to make the inclusion of the land in a scheme expedient, or that the land comprises buildings or other objects of architectural, historic or artistic interest, or that the land is so situate that the general object of the scheme would be better secured by its inclusion;

(b) in the case of land which is neither already built upon nor in course of development, nor likely to be developed, that the land is so situated in relation to land which is already built upon, or in course of development, or on which development is likely to take place, as to make its inclusion in a scheme expedient, or that it comprises objects or places of natural interest or beauty."

These limitations do not apply to any scheme proposed by the owners of not less than two-thirds of the land to be planned and approved by not less than three-fourths of the owners.

An Authority before passing a resolution must consult with other Authorities affected where the resolution covers land outside their district or for which a resolution or scheme by another Authority is in force.

Revocation of Resolution.

An Authority may revoke a resolution, with the approval of the Minister; or the Minister may revoke a resolution, after a local inquiry if an inquiry is requested.

A resolution is not to be revoked except subject to the condition that compensation may be claimed, if compensation could have been claimed had a scheme been made, in respect of any (a) injurious affection of property by reason of an interim decision on appeal, (b) expenditure incurred to comply with conditions imposed on an interim application and rendered abortive by the revocation, provided that the decision has been given or the expenditure incurred since the commencement of the Act.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Area of Scheme.

One scheme may be prepared for two or more areas covered by resolutions; a conversely more than one scheme for the area covered by one resolution.

Sec. 7: Notices.

Where a resolution has taken effect, notice must be—

(a) published, within fourteen days, in the London Gazette and in a local new paper, the notice in the latter twice, once during each of two successi weeks, with six clear days between each publication;

(b) served, within six months, on each owner and occupier of any hereditame in the area of the resolution as shown by the latest assessment to incor tax under Schedule A of the Income Tax Act. The Surveyor of Tax may be required to supply the names and addresses on payment.

These notices have to contain the information specified in the section.

Any owner of property in the area and any association of owners or represe tative of business or industry in the district of the Authority may register with t Authority; and any registered owner or association is then entitled to receive in vidually at each stage of the preparation of the scheme a copy of any public noti which has to be given. It is the duty of the Authority to maintain the register. the end of three years after registration, the Authority may ask the owner (or associ tion) whether he still desires to be registered and may remove the name from t register if he does not reply that he does so desire.

Sec. 8 and First Schedule: Validity of Schemes.

Any scheme is subject to the approval of the Minister. He may approve wi modifications, but he must inform the Local Authority (or Joint Committee) of t modifications and must hold a local inquiry if requested by them.

Any scheme prepared by a Local Authority (or Joint Committee) must be pass by the Local Authority (or Joint Committee), not by a committee of the Loc Authority (or Joint Committee), at a meeting of which special notice of the busine has been given to each member.

Parliament.

Each scheme has to be laid before Parliament. Two different procedures are la down—

(1) for provisions in a scheme which suspend a statutory enactment, whether in general or local Act, other than certain enactments mentioned below; ar

(2) other provisions of a scheme.

Under the first procedure, suspensory provisions require to be approved affirmative resolutions of both Houses of Parliament.

Under the second procedure, either House of Parliament is empowered with twenty-one sitting days to pass a resolution that the scheme, or some provision of ought not to come into operation.

If the necessary affirmative resolutions are passed under the first procedure and resolution to annul is passed under the second procedure, the scheme goes forwa and becomes "capable of coming into operation."

If in the case of suspensory provisions the necessary affirmative resolutions are r passed, or if in the case of other provisions a resolution to annul is passed, or if either case upon a resolution being moved the Minister undertakes to withdraw a modify the scheme, the scheme is treated as reverting to the stage immediately bef the Minister's approval. Thereupon the Minister can modify it in order to bring into conformity with the wishes of Parliament or, if the scheme is one made by t Minister himself, he can proceed, with the like object, to make a new scheme.

The suspensory provisions to which the affirmative procedure does not apply are

(1) provisions suspending section 112 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as extend by section 51 of the Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1907 (th relate to control of offensive trades); the Public Health (Buildings Streets) Act, 1888 (prohibiting the bringing forward of any building in street beyond the line of neighbouring buildings); sections 30 to 34 of the Public Health Act, 1925 (relating to declaration of an existing highway to be a new street, requiring extra width of street and fixing improvement lines); and section 5 of the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 (fixing building lines):

(2) any enactment making provisions which could have been covered by a byelaw, order or regulation, not requiring Parliamentary confirmation:

(3) any enactment suspended by a previous scheme or one substantially to the same effect.

Legal Proceedings.

When a scheme has passed through Parliament and is capable of coming into operation, notice has to be published by the Authority in a local newspaper and individual notice has also to be given where required by the Act or regulations.

Within six weeks of the date of the published notice, any aggrieved person may apply to the High Court on the ground that the scheme, or a provision in it, is not within the powers of the Act or that a requirement has not been complied with and the Court is empowered in proper cases to suspend or quash the scheme or any of its provisions. Appeal to the House of Lords from the Court of Appeal lies only with the leave of the latter. Subject to the power of the Court the scheme becomes operative at the end of six weeks from the publication of the notice, and cannot thereafter be questioned in the Courts.

A provision confirmed by Parliament suspending a statutory enactment cannot be questioned in the Courts.

Variation or Revocation.

A scheme may be varied, otherwise than by extension of area, or revoked by a subsequent scheme. The Minister may vary or revoke a scheme if application is made to him by any Responsible Authority under the scheme or by any Authority or Joint Committee or person concerned; but he cannot vary a scheme if to do so would throw substantial additional expenditure on a Responsible Authority and that Authority objects.

Sec. 9: Supplementary Schemes.

Where a regional scheme (that is, a scheme made by a Joint Committee) has come into operation, a supplementary scheme may be made. The supplementary scheme is to incorporate with or without modifications the relative provisions of the regional scheme which are not inconsistent with the supplementary scheme, and may include additional provisions; the regional scheme will be revoked for the area covered by the supplementary scheme. The passing of a resolution to prepare a supplementary scheme does not carry with it interim control; the area will continue under the regional scheme until the supplementary scheme comes into force.

Sec. 10: Interim Development.

The Minister must make a general order with respect to interim development (that is, development between the date on which the resolution takes effect and the date on which the scheme comes into operation) and may make special orders. An Interim Development Order may itself permit development or may empower any Authority to permit development.

An application for interim development may be granted, with or without conditions, or may be refused. It is to be deemed to have been granted without conditions if the contrary is not notified, with reasons, within two months or such longer period as may be agreed in writing.

The Authority may make a contribution towards damage or expense when an application is refused or granted subject to conditions.

Appeal from an interim decision may be made to the Minister, within twenty-eight days of the notice of decision or such longer period as the Minister may allow. The decision of the Minister is final. He has to consider any offer of contribution by the Authority. The Minister must give the parties an opportunity of being heard, if requested by either of them.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

When an appeal is dismissed solely because the land ought to be reserved for a public open space and the land is suitable for immediate development and the Minister is satisfied that, if the application had been granted, the development would have taken place within a reasonable time, the appellant may require the Authority within six months to purchase the land, if he can dispose of the fee simple of the land with vacant possession.

A scheme must provide a right to claim compensation where expenditure has been necessarily incurred on buildings or works to comply with a condition confirmed or imposed by the Minister on appeal, the condition having been imposed in anticipation of a provision to be inserted in the scheme for reserving land for a public purpose or for the execution of works, and the scheme does not in fact contain such a provision, and the Minister, on representations made to him, is satisfied that the expenditure has on that account been rendered abortive, in whole or in part. The compensation which may be claimed is so much of the expenditure as is abortive.

An Interim Development Order may authorise any specified Authority to suspend the operation of any enactments in local Acts or of any orders, byelaws or regulations, where expedient to promote permitted development.

Interim control of development does not operate where the resolution is for a supplementary or varying scheme.

Existing Buildings.

Except as stated below, application to permit the erection of a new building in place of a building existing at the date on which the resolution takes effect (or a building which was standing within two years of the date on which the resolution takes effect) cannot be refused, or conditions imposed which would render it impossible (a) to erect on the site a new building of at least equal cubic content above the level of the ground and, where the premises were used for business or industry, also of not less superficial area on the ground floor, or (b) if the new building is commenced within two years of the destruction or demolition of the previous building, to use the building for any purpose of the same or similar character, unless the use would be of a noxious or otherwise offensive character. The obligation to permit the erection of the new building does not apply when the new building would project beyond a proposed building line or would be erected on land which the Authority propose to reserve in the scheme for a purpose for which the new building, if erected, would have to be removed or altered.

The obligation to permit the erection applies only where the application is made within two years of the destruction or demolition of the previous building or twelve months of the date on which the resolution takes effect, whichever is the later.

Sec. 11: Contents of Scheme.

A scheme must define the area to which it applies and specify the Authorities who are to be responsible for carrying provisions into effect.

The scheme may specify as a Responsible Authority the Local Authority for any area within the scheme, or the Local Authority for a neighbouring district, or the County Council, or may specify two or more such Authorities as Responsible Authorities for different purposes or for different parts of the area, or may constitute a joint body for the purpose. The joint body may be incorporated and authorised to borrow money and co-opt members, but three-fourths of the members must be persons who are members of the constituent Authorities.

Schemes are to contain such provisions as are necessary for prohibiting or regulating development, for carrying out the objects of the scheme and for dealing with any of the matters mentioned in the Second Schedule of the Act.

The scheme may suspend provisions in a statutory enactment, order, byelaw or regulation, subject to the provisions contained in the First Schedule, to which reference has already been made.

Sec. 12: Buildings and Building Operations.

The section sets out provisions which may be included in schemes relating to buildings and building operations.

A scheme which contains provisions for regulating the design and external appearance of buildings must provide for a right of appeal to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction or to a tribunal specially constituted, and one of the grounds of appeal may be that the cost of complying with the decision would be unreasonable having regard to the character of the locality and of the neighbouring buildings.

Provisions may be made applicable to existing, as well as to new, buildings (but there are safeguards for existing buildings, in other sections).

A scheme may contain provisions which are to operate only until a General Development Order is issued (see also section 15).

A special saving is provided for agricultural buildings. Unless the site of the building is reserved for a purpose the carrying out of which would necessitate the removal or the alteration of the building, no provision is to apply to a building, or to the erection of any building, which is used for any of the following purposes and is occupied together with land mainly or exclusively used for any of the purposes, namely, for agriculture, as arable, meadow, pasture ground or orchard, or for the purposes of a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood.

Sec. 13: Enforcing and Carrying out Schemes.

The section contains provisions enabling the Responsible Authority to take action in the case of buildings or the use of buildings, whether existing or new, in order to bring them into conformity with the scheme or to prohibit the use of land at variance with the scheme. Land which is put to any use which contravenes a scheme can be reinstated, if the use is not an existing use. The Responsible Authority can also execute any work which it is the duty of any person to execute under the scheme, where delay has occurred and the efficiency of the scheme has been or will be prejudiced.

Due notice is to be given of any action proposed, not less than six months in the case of an existing building or work or an existing use, not less than twenty-eight days in other cases (that is, where something has been done in contravention of the scheme). An appeal lies to the Court of Summary Jurisdiction and, where the Court decides for the Responsible Authority, they may extend the time which must elapse before action can be taken to secure conformity with the scheme.

Reasonable expenses may be recovered by the Responsible Authority, except where they remove, pull down or alter an existing building or work. Penalties are provided for the use of buildings or land in a prohibited manner.

Sec. 14: Supplementary Orders.

A scheme may empower supplementary orders to be made, to supplement the provisions of the scheme. The orders are subject to the approval of the Minister, and are to be laid before Parliament and to be subject to question in the High Court, as in the case of schemes. They are also subject to the same provisions as schemes in the matter of the date of operation. An order may be revoked or varied by a later order.

Sec. 15: General Development Orders.

Where a scheme contains a provision prohibiting or restricting building operations on specified land until a general development order is made, the Responsible Authority may at any time make a general development order for the whole or part of the land. The order is subject to the approval of the Minister. An order may be revoked or varied by a subsequent order.

The Responsible Authority must consider at least once in every three years whether a general development order shall be made for any such land. An appeal lies to the Minister if the Authority decide not to make a general development order.

Sec. 16: Permission to build.

An application may be made to the Responsible Authority to permit particular building operations on land which is not open to general development until an order has been issued in that behalf. The application may be granted, with or without conditions, if the proposed operations will not contravene any permanent provisions of the scheme.

In deciding an application regard has to be paid to the injury likely to be caused to the applicant, as well as to the public advantage; and it is important to note that an application may not be refused unless the Authority is satisfied (1) that other suitable land is available on reasonable terms, and (2) either (a) that the operations would involve danger or injury to health because of the lack of roads, sewers, water supply or other public services, and that the provision of the necessary services would be premature or likely to involve excessive expenditure of public money, or (b) that the operations would be likely seriously to injure the amenity of the locality. Appeal lies to the Minister against a refusal of permission or against conditions imposed.

Sec. 17: Preservation of Special Buildings.

The County Council or the Borough, Urban District or Rural District Council may make an order prohibiting the demolition of a building of special architectural or historic interest in an area for which a resolution to prepare or adopt a scheme has taken effect. The order will not become operative unless and until approved by the Minister, who has to consult the Commissioners of Works, except that, in cases of special urgency, an order may be brought into effect as soon as a copy of the order and of the declaration of urgency is served on the owner and occupier of the building. In that case the order is to cease to have effect at the end of two months, unless in the meantime it has been approved by the Minister.

The owner of a building for which an order has been made may appeal to the Minister against a refusal of the Authority to vary or revoke the order or to consent to the demolition of the building, and the Minister must consult the Commissioners of Works before giving his decision.

The coming into operation of a scheme covering the area to which the order applies will not revoke the order unless the scheme so provides.

Orders cannot be made for an ecclesiastical building used for ecclesiastical purposes, any building to which a scheme or order under the Ancient Monuments Acts applies, or any building included in the list of monuments published by the Commissioners of Works under those Acts.

Sec. 18: Compensation.

Except as otherwise provided compensation may be claimed by any person (a) whose property is injuriously affected by a provision in a scheme, or the execution of any work under a scheme, or by an order under section 17 of the Act, if the provision, work or order infringes or curtails ihs legal rights in respect of the property; (b) who suffers damage by action taken under section 13 of the Act; or (c) who has incurred expenditure in order to comply with a provision in a scheme or in making or resisting a claim for compensation or betterment, and that expenditure is rendered abortive by subsequent variation or revocation of the scheme. In the case of property on which trade or business or a profession is carried on, compensation may be claimed for the amount of any resulting injury to that trade or business or profession.

Where compensation is awarded in respect of injurious affection by the coming into operation of a provision in a scheme, account has to be taken of any additional injurious affection because since the commencement of the Act the Minister has refused, on an interim appeal made to him, to grant the application or has imposed conditions.

Sec. 19: Exclusion of Compensation.

A scheme may provide that compensation shall not be payable in certain classes of cases. The right to exclude compensation applies only to injurious affection which comes under (a) of sub-section (1) of the preceding section and arises from a provision contained in a scheme.

The provisions in respect of which compensation may be excluded are those which:

(a) prescribe the space about buildings;

(b) limit the number of buildings;

(c) regulate the size, height, design or external appearance of buildings;

(d) prohibit or restrict building operations only pending the coming into operation of a General Development Order;

(e) prohibit or restrict building operations permanently because, by reason of the situation or nature of the land, the erection of buildings thereon would be likely to involve danger or injury to health, or excessive expenditure of public money in the provision of roads, sewers, water supply or other public services;

(f) prohibit (otherwise than by prohibiting building operations) the use of land for a purpose likely to involve danger or injury to health or serious detriment to the neighbourhood, or restrict (otherwise than by restricting building operations) the use of land so far as necessary for preventing such danger, injury or detriment. Compensation cannot be excluded in respect of a provision prohibiting or restricting the winning of minerals by underground working, and can be excluded in respect of the winning of minerals by surface working only in the limited conditions specified in the Act;

(g) restrict the manner in which buildings may be used;

(h) regulate in the interests of safety the height and position of proposed walls, hedges and fences near the corners or bends of roads, not being highways maintainable at the material date (defined in Section 53) by the Minister of Transport, a County Council, or other Highway Authority;

(i) limit the number or prescribe the sites of new roads entering a classified road or a road or the site of a proposed road declared by the Minister of Transport to be intended to be a classified road. The Minister of Health is not to approve any provision excluding compensation in this class of case unless satisfied, if representations are made to him and the case appears to him to be a proper one, that reasonable means of access from neighbouring land to a highway will be provided;

(k) in the case of land which did not form the site of a building at any time within five years immediately preceding the material date, fix a line beyond which no building in a street or a proposed street may project. But the Minister is not to approve any provision excluding compensation in such a case unless satisfied, on representations made to him, that the area of land of the owner fronting the street or proposed street will not be so diminished as to render it less suitable for erecting buildings in conformity with the scheme;

(l) require accommodation to be provided for loading or unloading or fuelling vehicles in order to prevent obstruction of traffic on a highway, in the case of the erection of any building intended for purposes of business or industry.

The Minister is not to approve a provision excluding compensation, or himself insert such a provision, unless satisfied that, having regard to the objects of the scheme, the provision is proper, reasonable and expedient having regard to the local circumstances, and unless, in the case of any provision dealing with matters coming under (a), (b), (c), (d) or (g) above, the scheme also contains provisions satisfactory to him for securing—

(1) that existing buildings may be maintained and their existing use continued;

(2) that reasonable alterations, and in proper cases extensions of existing buildings may be made;

(3) that a new building may be erected on the same site as an existing building (or a building which was standing within two years before the material date) which is destroyed or demolished, provided that the new building is commenced within two years after the previous building was destroyed or demolished, or such longer period as the Responsible Authority may permit; and that the new building may have at least an equal cubic content above the level of the ground and also, in the case of premises used for business or industry, at least an equal superficial area on the ground floor; and

(4) that a new building so substituted may be used for any purpose of the same or a similar character as that for which the previous building was last used, unless such a use is declared in the scheme to be both contrary to its provisions and also of a noxious or otherwise offensive character.

The above provisions affect only the question of compensation. They do not prevent the Responsible Authority from prohibiting the alteration or extension of an existing building or the erection of a new building in substitution for an existing one where that would not be in conformity with the scheme, or from exercising their powers under section 13 to bring existing buildings or use of buildings into conformity with the scheme, but safeguard the owner's right to claim compensation if this is done.

In approving provisions under this section the Minister must have regard to the nature and situation and existing development of the land affected and of neighbouring land not so affected, and the interests of any person affected.

Sec. 20: Exclusion or Limitation of Compensation.

Compensation is not payable in respect of a provision in the scheme if the same provision, or a provision substantially to the same effect, was already in force by virtue of some Act, other than the present Act or an Act repealed by it.

Compensation is not payable in respect of action under section 13 of the Act (action to bring buildings, etc., into conformity with the scheme) unless the building or work is an existing building or work or the use is an existing use (see definition of "existing building" and "existing work" and "existing use" in section 53).

Compensation is not payable in respect of a provision in a scheme which could have been validly included in a scheme, order, regulation or byelaw by virtue of any other Act and compensation would not have been payable had it been so included. If compensation would have been payable if it had been so included, then compensation payable under the scheme is not to exceed the compensation which would have been so payable.

Where a provision of a scheme is revoked by a subsequent scheme, no compensation is payable in respect of injurious affection due to any provision in the subsequent scheme if that provision is the same, or substantially the same, as the earlier provision so revoked, but a saving is provided for any outstanding claims under the provision which is revoked.

Sec. 21: Betterment.

Betterment may be claimed not exceeding 75 per cent. of the increase of value due to the operation of any provision in a scheme or by the execution of work under a scheme.

The person on whom a claim is made may by notice require the claim to be deferred, unless he has made a claim for compensation to an amount not less than the claim for betterment and the claim for compensation is not in respect of injurious affection immediately suffered.

Where a claim is so deferred, a fresh claim may be made (a) when the property is disposed of within fourteen years from the date of the notice requiring the claim to be deferred, (b) when within this period there is a change in use of the property, and the new use is not similar to the previous use, and (c) in th ecase of property used for business or industry, after the expiration of five years from the date of the original notice if no claim has been made under (a) or (b) within that time.

No claim is to be made under (b) if the new use is for one of the agricultural purposes specified in the section, or under (b) or (c) in respect of property belonging to a statutory undertaker.

Where the claim is made under (a) or (c), the date of the fresh claim is the date by reference to which the increase in value has to be determined. Where the claim is made under (b), the increase in value to be taken into account is the increase for the purposes of its new use; a fresh claim may be made on any subsequent change of use, or upon any disposition of the property, within the period of fourteen years, but in the case of a disposition the claim can be made only once.

In assessing betterment, account has to be taken of any sum paid or payable in respect of a claim previously made, and of any gift or concession or any works executed by arrangement with the Responsible Authority in order to facilitate the scheme by any person against whom the claim is made or his predecessors in title.

Power is given to spread any payment over a period not exceeding thirty years, with interest at such rate as may be fixed by the Treasury, with a right on the part of the owner at any time on due notice to pay off the whole of any outstanding instalments.

The person who has given notice to have a claim deferred must notify the Responsible Authority of any disposition of the property or any change of use, and must furnish particulars reasonably required by them. Where a final claim is made the Responsible Authority is to notify the person that further notice of disposition or change of use is not required.

The period within which a fresh claim may be made is set out, and it is provided that where property is disposed of by way of lease or tenancy agreement for a term of less than seven years, the claim shall be made not earlier than the expiration or the seventh year from the date on which the term commenced.

For the purposes of this section disposition is defined as disposition by sale or by way of lease or tenancy agreement for a period of not less than three years. Where devolution of property occurs after notice has been given deferring a claim for compensation, the person on whom a fresh claim may be made is the person on whom the property last devolved before the date on which the disposition takes effect or the change of use takes place.

Sec. 22 : Making of Claims.

A claim for compensation or for betterment has to be made in writing, and the ground of the claim and the amount stated.

The time within which claims for compensation may be made is specified in the section. Where the claim is for compensation in respect of a building line on a site occupied by a building at, or within two years before, the material date, the claim is to be made within twelve months after the date on which the new building is erected on the site, unless a different period is agreed. But if it is alleged and proved that the site is not reasonably sufficient for a new building, the claim may be made within twelve months after the date on which the building is demolished or the date on which the scheme comes into operation, whichever last occurs. But in that case, where the building is standing on the date on which the scheme comes into operation, the claimant must give not less than three months' notice to the Responsible Authority before he commences to demolish the building, and the Authority may within two months of the receipt of the notice require the claimant to sell to them the site and the building.

Sec. 23 : Determination of Claims.

Disputed claims for compensation or betterment, including any question whether the sum is to be paid immediately or by instalments, are to be determined by the Official Arbitrator appointed under the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, unless otherwise agreed. In determining any question, account is to be taken of any undertaking which may have been given, and, in the case of a claim under a supplementary scheme or a supplementary order, of any amount paid or payable under the original scheme or any previous supplementary scheme or supplementary order made under the scheme, and also of any contribution made by an Authority in respcet of an interim decision.

Any amount due may be recovered summarily as a civil debt.

Sec. 24 : Power to withdraw and to modify Provisions.

This re-enacts a similar provision contained in the present Act under which, after the award of compensation, the Authority may withdraw or modify the provision giving rise to the claim. In that case the Authority is to submit a varying scheme to the Minister within three months of the notice of withdrawal and, when the varying scheme as approved, with or without modifications, comes into operation and upon payment of the claimant's costs, the award of the arbitrator is to be discharged, but without prejudice to the right of the claimant to make a further claim in respect of abortive expenditure or in respect of the scheme as varied.

Sec. 25 : Acquisition of Land.

Land may be purchased by agreement, or, if need be, by compulsory purchase order, if it is required for the purposes of a scheme (whether made under this Act or under any repealed Act). Those purposes include (a) carrying out the improvement or controlling the development of frontages to, or of lands abutting on or adjacent to, any highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, or any proposed highway to be constructed wholly or partly at the public expense ; or (b) for securing satisfactory development in accordance with the provisions of the scheme where this does not appear to be reasonably practicable otherwise than by purchase of the land because the land is held in plots of inconvenient size or shape, or because the arrangement or alignment of the plots is inconvenient, or because of the multiplicity of interests in the land, or because the land is being used in a manner or for purposes inconsistent with the scheme. Land which forms the site of a highway which has been stopped up under any provision contained in the scheme may be similarly acquired. Land may also be purchased by agreement (but not compulsorily) for providing accommodation for a person whose premises have been purchased by the Authority for the purposes of the scheme, or, with the consent of the Minister, land not immediately required for the purposes of the scheme.

A compulsory purchase order is not operative unless confirmed by the Minister. The order is subject to the provisions and restrictions set out in the Third Schedule to the Act. The validity of an order may be questioned in the High Court as in the case of a scheme.

Sec. 26: Land for Open Spaces and Playing Fields.

Land may be purchased by agreement or by compulsory order by the Common Council of the City, County Council, or a Borough, Urban or Rural District Council for a public open space or playing field in an area where a scheme is in operation.

Sec. 27: Charges for Street Works.

More may not be charged on owners of adjoining land or other persons deriving benefit in respect of street works carried out under a scheme than could have been charged if the works had been carried out under the general law or any local Act in force in the area, and, as respects matters for which provision is not made in a general or local Act, in compliance with the normal specification required by the highway authority as a condition of taking over the street. Street works are defined, however, so as to include the planting, laying out, maintenance and protection of trees, shrubs and grass margins in and beside the road or street, and the cost of these operations may be included provided that the total amount charged does not exceed the amount mentioned above.

Sec. 28: Contributions towards Expenses of Owners.

A Local Authority or Joint Committee may contribute towards the expenses incurred by owners of land on a scheme proposed by them which is adopted by the Authority or Joint Committee, or in co-operating with the Local Authority or Joint Committee in preparing a scheme.

Sec. 29: County Councils: Assistance in preparing Schemes.

The Council of any county may incur expenditure in assisting Councils or Joint Committees in the preparation of schemes.

Sec. 30: Contributions by Local Authorities.

Any Local Authority may contribute towards expenses incurred by any other Authority on matters preliminary to a scheme or on the preparation or carrying into execution of a scheme, whether made under the Act or an Act repealed by it.

Sec. 31: Contributions by Statutory Undertakers.

Any statutory undertaker may pay to a Local Authority the whole or any part of the expenses incurred in the preparation or carrying into execution of a scheme, whether made under the Act or an Act repealed by it.

Sec. 32: Application of Monies.

Sums received by way of betterment or as proceeds of the sale of land purchased under the Act are to be applied towards the discharge of any debt of the Authority or otherwise for a capital purpose, as may be approved, in the case of the London County Council, by the Treasury and in other cases by the Minister.

Sec. 33 : Power of Public Departments to make Agreements.

Any Public Department may enter into an agreement, with the approval of the Treasury, in order to secure that land under their control or in their occupation or vested in them for public purposes or the public service shall be laid out and used, so far as provided in the agreement, in conformity with the general objects of a scheme. The agreement may contain such consequential and incidental provisions, including provisions of a financial character, as may be necessary or desirable.

Sec. 34 : Agreements restricting use of Land.

A Local Authority, a County Council or a Responsible Authority may enter into an agreement with an owner, if the owner so desires, for restricting the planning, development or use of land in any manner in which those matters might be dealt with by or under a scheme, and the Authority will have power to enforce such an agreement against persons deriving title under the owner.

Sec. 35 : Garden Cities.

This section is similar to that contained in the existing Act and enables the Minister to acquire on behalf of a Local Authority or of an authorised association, either by agreement or compulsorily, any land necessary or expedient for securing the development of an area as a garden city or as an extension of an existing garden city. Where the land is to be acquired compulsorily on behalf of an authorised association, the order for compulsory purchase has to be approved by Parliament. A Local Authority may acquire land for the purposes of the section in the same way as it may acquire land for the purposes of a scheme. The power of the Public Works Loan Commissioners to advance monies by way of loan to any authorised association is continued. The expression " garden city " includes a garden suburb or a garden village, and Local Authority includes County Council.

Sec. 36 : Default Powers.

This section contains similar provisions to those contained in the existing Act, enabling action to be taken by the Minister on the default of the Local Authority at their expense. In the case of the Council of a Rural District, or the Council of an Urban District with a population of less than 20,000 persons, the Council of the county may be empowered to act on default.

Sec. 37 : Regulations.

The Minister is empowered to make regulations in respect of the matters specified in this section ; and he must make regulations providing for matters which are set out in the Fourth Schedule to the Act. The provisions of that Schedulel argely follow the existing regulations. Special attention may be drawn to the provision requiring that, where a Preliminary Statement is prepared, it must be submitted to the Minister not earlier than the expiration of three months from the date on which individual notices are served on owners and occupiers and not later than eighteen months from the date when the resolution took effect, unless that period is extended by the Minister ; further, that a draft scheme is to be submitted within eighteen months from the date of the approval of the Preliminary Statement and, in any other case, three years from the date when the resolution took effect, unless the period is extended by the Minister. In each case the Minister is empowered to extend the period only where he is satisfied that there are special circumstances warranting an extension. The regulations are also to include provisions for securing co-operation with persons interested in land proposed to be included in a scheme or order, and that full information is given to the County Council concerned of the proposal to prepare a scheme or order and that the County Council is consulted with respect to the preparation of the scheme.

Sec. 38 : Local Inquiries.

The Minister is empowered to cause such local inquiries to be held as are directed by the Act or as he may think necessary and may direct by whom the costs of the inquiry shall be paid. He may, with the consent of the Treasury, appoint a person to act as an Inspector for the purpose of conducting a local inquiry.

Sec. 39: Appeal to Quarter Sessions.

A person aggrieved by a decision of a Court of Summary Jurisdiction under the Act or a scheme may appeal to Quarter Sessions.

Sec. 40: Reference of Disputes to Arbitration or to the Minister.

Where an appeal lies or an application may be made to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction, the parties to the appeal or application may agree in writing that the matter in dispute shall be determined by the Minister or shall be referred to the arbitration of a person agreed upon, or failing agreement, appointed by the Minister.

Where an appeal lies to the Minister or any question is to be determined by him, the parties may agree in writing that the matter shall be referred to the arbitration of a person agreed upon, or, failing agreement, appointed by the Minister.

The determination of the Minister is final. In the case of an arbitration, the parties may agree in writing that the award of the arbitrator shall be final on all questions, whether of law or fact.

Sec. 41: Protection of Statutory Undertakers.

No provision of a scheme is to apply to any land, or any building on it, which belongs to any statutory undertakers and is held or used by them for the purposes of their undertaking, except with their consent. Their consent is not to be unreasonably withheld, and any question whether or not it is unreasonably withheld is to be decided by the Minister. Before giving his decision the Minister is to consult with the Government Department concerned with the functions of the undertakers, if that Department be not the Ministry of Health, and, if the undertakers so desire, must afford them an opportunity of being heard by one or more persons appointed for the purpose jointly by the Minister and the other Department concerned.

Sec. 42: Provisions affecting special buildings.

The Minister is to consult with the Commissioners of Works before approving a scheme if it is represented to him that the provision of a scheme would involve the removal, pulling down or alteration of a building of special architectural or historic interest.

Sec. 43: Land in the neighbourhood of Royal Palaces and Parks.

This section repeats the provision in the present Act to cover the case where land proposed to be included in a scheme, or land proposed to be acquired under the Act, is within the distance prescribed by regulations from any of the royal palaces and parks. In any such case the Local Authority or Joint Committee are to communicate with the Commissioners of Works; and the Minister is to consider any recommendations from the Commissioners before giving his approval.

Sec. 44: Works below high water mark.

Works of construction, demolition or alteration on, over or under tidal lands below high water mark of ordinary spring tides are not to be authorised except with the consent of persons whose consent would be required if the Act had not been passed, and except in accordance with plans and sections, and subject to any restrictions and conditions, approved by the Board of Trade.

Sec. 45: Saving for Postmaster-General.

The effect of this section is to continue the present position under which alterations in telegraphic lines carried out under the provisions of a scheme are subject to the conditions set out in the Telegraph Act, 1878.

Sec. 46: Preservation of Trees.

A scheme may include provisions for preserving single trees and groups of trees, and may specify areas of woodland to be protected. The scheme may require the owner of any such specified area to undertake replanting in accordance with the practice of good forestry, if any part of the woodland is felled, but must not otherwise impose any control over forestry operations in the area. Any question between the Responsible Authority and the owner whether any replanting accords with the practice of good forestry is to be determined by the Forestry Commissioners, on the application of either party.

Sec. 47: Advertisements.

This section follows broadly the Model Clause prepared by the Ministry for advertisements.

A scheme may specify areas of land to be protected in respect of advertisements. Where it appears to the Responsible Authority that an advertisement or a hoarding in the area to which the scheme applies seriously injures the amenity of land so protected, they may by notice require the owner of the advertisement or hoarding to remove it A copy of the notice to the owner of the advertisement or hoarding is also to be served upon the owner and upon the occupier of the land on which the advertisement or hoarding is displayed or set up.

Appeal may be made to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction on the ground that the advertisement or hoarding does not seriously injure the amenity of the area.

The Authority may enter upon land and remove the advertisement or hoarding and recover from the owner the expenses of the removal, if an appeal has not been made to the Court or has not succeeded and if the advertisement or hoarding has not been removed within the period stated in the notice, or such period as may have been allowed by the Court.

A scheme may enable the Responsible Authority to authorise the display of any particular class of advertisements, either unconditionally or subject to conditions in respect of the position or manner in which or the period during which the advertisement may be displayed. The scheme may confer upon any person aggrieved by a decision in this matter a right of appeal to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction.

Some classes of advertisements are specified in respect of which action may not be taken for their removal. These include (a) advertisements relating solely to a trade or business on the land on which the advertisements are displayed, provided that they conform with the provisions in the scheme with respect to size, position and manner of display; and (b) during five years from the coming into operation of the scheme, hoardings erected or in use for advertising purposes before the date when the resolution took effect, advertising stations used by advertising contractors at that date, advertisements on any such hoarding or station at any time during that period and other advertisements displayed at the date when the resolution took effect.

The scheme is not to contain any provision prohibiting or controlling the erection or use of structures for advertising other than as provided by the section, except that nothing in the section is to prevent the insertion in the scheme of a provision prohibiting the erection on any land of buildings generally, or under which buildings generally could be removed from any land, if that provision is required for a purpose other than the prevention of injury to amenity by advertisements or hoardings.

Action taken under the section is not to give rise to claims for compensation or betterment.

Sec. 48: Appointment of Committees.

A Local Authority or a County Council may appoint a committee for any of the purposes of the Act and may delegate to the committee any of their powers, except the power of levying a rate or borrowing money or relinquishing in favour of the County Council any of their powers and duties. At least three-fourths of the members of a committee must be members of the appointing Authority.

Sec. 49: Expenses and borrowing.

This section provides for the defraying of expenses and the borrowing of money for the purposes of the Act. The expenses of a County Council may be made general or special, as the Council may determine, except that, before determining to levy as general expenses a contribution towards expenses incurred by any Authority in connection with the carrying into execution of a scheme, the County Council is required to notify every other Local Authority in the county who have passed a resolution which has become effective, and any such Authority may appeal to the

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Minister. Special provision is made as to expenses incurred by the Common Council of the City of London on schemes which form part of a general proposal for planning an area comprising land in the City and land in the County of London.

Sec. 50: Administrative County of London.

A Metropolitan Borough Council may in certain circumstances be made a Responsible Authority in a scheme or be represented on a joint body which is constituted a Responsible Authority. No Local Authority whose area is outside the Administrative County and no joint body of whom such an Authority is a constituent member shall be a Responsible Authority as regards any land within the county, except with the consent of the London County Council.

The County Council is required to consult the appropriate Metropolitan Borough Council in certain specified cases. They are also in certain classes of cases to notify the appropriate Metropolitan Borough Council of any application for permission to develop pending the coming into operation of a scheme or a General Development Order; and the County Council, and the Minister if appeal is made, are to take account of any representations made by the Council of the Borough. Provision is made for consultation between the County Council and the Common Council of the City of London.

The Common Council of the City of London within the City and the County Council within the County are to be the Authority for exercising the powers of section 17 for preserving buildings.

No scheme or order is to affect the operation of the London Squares Preservation Act, 1931, or any order made under that Act. No provision of the London Building Act, 1930, or of any Act amending or extending that Act, or any byelaw or regulation made under it, may be suspended, modified or adapted without the consent of the County Council.

Sec. 51: Compensation to Officers.

This section provides for compensation to officers who suffer direct pecuniary loss by determination of appointment or diminution or loss of fees, salary or emoluments in consequence of the relinquishment, delegation or transfer of any powers or duties under sections 2 to 5 of the Act.

Sec. 52: Transitional Provisions.

A scheme in course of preparation under section 1 (2) of the Town Planning Act. 1925 (which authorises the preparation of limited schemes for areas comprising localities of special architectural, historic or artistic interest), may be completed, without prejudice to the power of the Authority to prepare or adopt for the same area, or any part of it, a scheme for any of the purposes of the Act.

Where any scheme is in the course of preparaton or adoption before the present Act comes into force, existing provisions with regard to procedure, including provisions as to service of notices, are to remain in force; but the Minister may provide that, in specified classes of cases or in any particular case, the provisions of the Act shall apply, with such modifications as he may think fit.

Sec. 53: Interpretation.

This section contains definitions. Attention may be drawn to the following:

"Buildings" includes structures and erections:

"Development" includes any building operations or re-building operations and any use of the land or any building on it for a purpose different from the purpose for which the land or building was last being used. But the use of land for certain specified agricultural purposes and the use for any of those purposes of any building occupied together with land so used is not to be deemed development of that land or building. There is also a saving for the use of land within the curtilage of a dwelling-house for other than building operations:

"Owner" means a person, other than a mortgagee not in possession, for the time being entitled to dispose of the fee simple of the land, or of a lease or agreement the unexpired term of which exceeds three years:

"Material date" means, in the case of a scheme other than a supplementary scheme or a varying scheme, the date on which the resolution to prepare or adopt the scheme took effect, or such later date as may be specified by the scheme; and, in the case of a supplementary scheme or a varying scheme or a supplementary order, means the date on which the scheme or order came into operation, or such later date as may be fixed by the scheme or order. But where a provision of a scheme or order is revoked by a subsequent scheme or order containing the same provision or a provision substantially to the same effect, the material date for that later provision is to be the date which would have been the material date for the earlier provision had that provision continued in force:

"Existing building" and "existing work" mean a building or work erected, constructed or carried out before the material date; or erected, constructed or carried out in pursuance of a contract made before the material date; or begun before but completed after that date; or erected, constructed or carried out in accordance with the terms of an interim development order or of a permission granted under such an order. A building erected or constructed in substitution for a previous building in accordance with the provisions of the scheme relating to substituted builings is to be deemed an existing building. Further, a building is not to cease to be an existing building because it has been altered or extended in accordance with the scheme, and any such alteration or extension shall itself be deemed to be part of the existing building:

"Existing use" means a use of the building or land for any purpose of the same or a similar character to that for which it was last used before the material date or, in the case of a newly erected building which has not been used for any purpose, a use for any purpose for which it was designed. Existing use includes any use of a building or land permitted by or under an interim development order. If after the material date the existing use of a building is discontinued for eighteen months, no use of that building at any subsequent date is to be deemed an existing use. There is a saving for land which a person was entitled to use for mining, quarrying, digging of clay, gravel or sand or tipping of waste materials or refuse.

Sec. 54: Repeals.

The enactments which are repealed are set out in the Fifth Schedule. They are—the Town Planning Act, 1925; section 12 of the Crown Lands Act, 1927; and sections 40 to 45 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (which relate to town planning).

Local Acts modifying the Town Planning Act of 1925 (most of them extend planning powers to built areas) are also repealed, except as later provided.

There is a saving for things done under the repealed Acts, for outstanding claims, and for the provisions of local Acts dealing with the transfer of functions from one Authority to another (this last to meet the cases where planning functions have been transferred consequent on alteration of boundaries).

Sec. 55: Surrey.

This section contains special provisions relating to the sections of the Surrey County Council Act of 1931 which relate to planning.

Sec. 56: Lindsey, Lincs.

Saves certain provisions of the Lindsey County Council (Sandhills) Act, 1932.

Sec. 57: Scotland.

Applies the Act to Scotland with adaptations and modifications.

The Act as it relates to Scotland is to take effect as a separate Act.

Sec. 58: Title, etc.

States the title of the Act and provides that it is to come into operation on April 1st, 1933, except that section 34 (power of Authorities and owners to enter into agreements) came into operation when the Act was passed.

The Act does not extend to Northern Ireland.

MEMORANDUM.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT, 1932: REGULATIONS.

A copy is enclosed of Regulations made under the Act. The Regulations have been laid before Parliament and are subject to amendment in the event of proceedings in either House. As the Act comes into operation on April 1st next, the Minister, in the exercise of his powers under section 2 of the Rules of Publication Act, 1893, has provided as a matter of urgency that the Regulations shall be made immediately as provisional Regulations; they will take effect on April 1st (a).

The following indicates briefly the principal provisions of the Regulations:—

Articles 1, 2 and 3 state the title and commencement of the Regulations, the definitions, and the Regulations which are revoked. The Regulations of 1921 are revoked, except so far as they are applied under section 52 (2) of the Act of 1932 or any Order made by the Minister under that subsection or relate to anything required to be done under them in respect of a scheme already approved.

Articles 4, 5 and 6 deal with advertisements, the service of notices on prescribed persons, and individual notices of resolutions to prepare or adopt schemes. Under section 7 (1) (b) of the Act the Local Authority are required to serve individual notice of a resolution on the owner or occupier of any land in the area covered by the scheme, as shown in the latest assessment to income tax. In some cases the name of the owner or occupier is not shown, but the name of an agent or other representative of the owner is given. Article 6 requires that in that case notice shall be served on the agent or representative.

It is to be noted that the procedure for the publication and service of notices required by section 7 (1) and (2) of the Act and Article 6 of these Regulations must not be carried out until the resolution has taken effect, that is, until a resolution to which approval is required under section 6 has been approved by the Minister. A resolution to prepare a varying scheme or a supplementary scheme does not, however, require approval and takes effect as soon as it has been passed. In making their requisition to the Surveyor of Taxes to furnish the list of the names and addresses of the owners and occupiers shown in the assessment to income tax, the Local Authority should be careful to inform the Surveyor of Taxes that the assessment from which the list is to be obtained is the last assessment allowed by the Income Tax Commissioners before the date (specifying it) upon which the resolution took effect.

Articles 7, 8 and 9 relate to the deposit of maps, the furnishing to the Minister of a copy of advertisements and also documents and maps. The Minister will be prepared to accept a map on a scale of 6 inches to the mile for a resolution, unless some part of the boundary of the area covered by the resolution cannot be clearly defined on a map of that scale.

(a) That is, April 1st, 1933. The Provisional Regulations were superseded by S. R. & O., 1933, No. 742, post, p. 3918 (see footnote, ibid.), but this memorandum is retained as in effect explaining the substantive equally with the Provisional Regulations.

Article 10 provides that the area covered by a resolution shall be shown on a map. Opportunity is given for the making of suggestions for the inclusion or exclusion of land. The Local Authority may modify the area covered by the resolution.

Article 11. The Local Authority must send to the Minister, with other documents, a copy of all suggestions which have not been met or withdrawn and must state the grounds on which they consider that a scheme may be prepared for the land having regard to section 6 of the Act (relating to land for which resolutions may be approved). Where the area covered by a resolution has been modified, opportunity is to be given for making suggestions to the Minister. He may cause a local inquiry to be held. The Minister may approve or disapprove a resolution, or may approve it with modifications. Forms have been prepared of resolutions and advertisements and of the information which will be required by the Minister when a resolution is submitted for his approval. Copies of these forms are enclosed.

Article 12. A draft scheme must be prepared and adopted not later than twenty-four months from the date on which the resolution took effect where a Preliminary Statement is not prepared. The resolution adopting the draft scheme (as also the resolution making the scheme—see Article 14) must be passed at a meeting of the Local Authority of which special notice indicating the business has been given to each member.

Article 13. Opportunity is to be afforded for making objections or representations with regard to a draft scheme and for giving any interested Local Authority and any person making objections or representations an opportunity to be heard. The hearing may be by one or more members or one or more officers of the Local Authority as they may appoint.

Under section 7 (6) of the Act notice must be served on each registered owner and association when a notice is advertised under this Article or under any subsequent Article of the Regulations except Article 28.

Article 14. A scheme must be made within nine months from the date of the resolution adopting the draft scheme and submitted to the Minister for approval within one month of being made. Opportunity is to be given for the making of objections or representations on the scheme to the Minister.

Article 15. The Minister must hold a local inquiry if any objections or representations have not been met or withdrawn.

Articles 16 and 17. Where the Minister proposes to modify the scheme opportunity has to be given for the making of any objections or representations on the scheme as proposed to be approved. The Minister must hold a local inquiry if the Local Authority so request.

Articles 18 and 19. Notice must be given that the scheme as finally approved will be laid before Parliament and the scheme must be deposited for public inspection. [A further notice must be given in the scheduled form when the scheme has passed through the Parliamentary procedure.]

Article 20. Where the Local Authority decide to prepare a Preliminary Statement they must adopt the Preliminary Statement within fifteen months from the date on which the resolution took effect. Before adopting the Preliminary Statement opportunity is to be given for objections or representations and for the hearing of any interested Local Authority or any person making objections or representations. Opportunity is also to be given for making objections and representations to the Minister after the Preliminary Statement has been submitted to him. The Minister may cause a local inquiry to be held. He may approve or disapprove the Preliminary Statement or approve it with modifications. Any approval is to be without prejudice to any provisions of the scheme to be submitted to the Minister. A draft scheme has to be adopted within nine months from the date of the approval of the Preliminary Statement, and a scheme has to be made by the Authority within six months from the adoption of the draft scheme and submitted to the Minister for approval within one month of being made.

Article 21 deals with the procedure on owners' schemes.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Articles 22, 23 and 24 set out the modifications of procedure in connection with supplementary and varying schemes.

Articles 25, 26 and 27 set out the procedure for supplementary orders and general development orders.

Articles 28 and 29 deal with the procedure for orders under section 17 of the Act which relates to the preservation of buildings of special architectural or historic interest.

Articles 30 and 31 provide for consultation with interested Local Authorities. If any interested Local Authority consider that their administrative functions will be affected by any proposals, they are to be furnished, if they so request, with copies of any objections or representations in regard to those proposals, and representations submitted by the interested Local Authority within twenty-one days are to be considered.

Articles 32 and 33. The co-operation of owners and other persons interested in the land is to be secured by means of conferences or such other means as may be expedient. Any prescribed person, registered owner or registered association is to be furnished with copies of certain specified documents on payment of the reasonable cost.

Articles 34 and 35. The Minister is to be furnished with such information or particulars as he may require. He may extend the period within which anything is required to be done under the Regulations but only if satisfied that there are special circumstances warranting the extension. He may in certain conditions dispense with provisions of the Regulations. The Local Authority may on reasonable cause extend the time within which objections or representations may be submitted to them.

Articles 36 and 37 indicate how notices may be served.

Articles 38 and 39 set out the procedure for compulsory purchase orders.

Articles 40 and 41 deal with the service of notices in some particular cases.

Article 42 states the prescribed distances from Royal Palaces and Parks for the purposes of section 43 (1) of the Act.

Copies of the Regulations and of this Memorandum have been placed on sale and may be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT, 1932.

GENERAL INTERIM DEVELOPMENT ORDER.

A copy is enclosed of the General Interim Development Order made by the Minister under the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932. The following is a brief summary of the provisions of the Order:—

Article 1. Title and date of operation.

Article 2. Definitions. It is to be noted that the "resolution date" is that on which the resolution takes effect, not that on which it is passed.

Article 3. Revocation of existing orders.

Special Orders made under the Housing and Town Planning Act of 1919 and the Town Planning Act of 1925 are revoked, with some exceptions and subject to a saving for cases which are outstanding on April 1st. In these cases, as in others, decision should, of course, be given as promptly as possible. This revocation is necessary because the conditions appertaining to interim decisions under the new Act are in some respects materially different from those previously prevailing.

Article 7 of the Order provides, however, that the Authority before deciding an application to permit development not in general conformity with a Preliminary Statement already approved or approved in future shall give full consideration to the interests of persons owning or occupying land which has been or is being developed in general conformity with the Preliminary Statement and to representations received from persons affected.

Article 4. This Article provides that specified classes of development are permitted to proceed as a matter of course. These include development under an Act of Parliament or an Order approved by resolution of each House of Parliament on land specified in the Act or Order; development by a Local Authority approved by the Minister, whether expressly or by way of sanction to a loan or consent to the appropriation of land, provided that the interim development authority have been notified of the application to the Minister; works for maintaining an existing building or a building permitted during the interim period and works of alteration of such a building neither affecting the exterior of the building nor proposed for a different use of the building; and development in accordance with the provisions of a scheme which has passed through Parliament.

Authorities will bear in mind that the use of land "for the purpose of agriculture, whether as arable, meadow, pasture ground or orchard, or for the purposes of a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, and the use for any of those purposes of any building occupied together with land so used," is not to be deemed development under the Act (Section 53, definition of "Development"). Further, by virtue of Section 12 (3) of the Act, provisions in a scheme with respect to buildings cannot be applied to, and permission in the interim period cannot therefore properly be refused for, the erection of a building which is to be occupied with land used mainly or exclusively for any of these purposes and is to be used for any of them, with the exception that the provisions of the scheme may be applied, and therefore permission may be refused in the interim period, where it is proposed by the scheme to reserve the site of the proposed building for any purpose the carrying out of which in future would necessitate the removal or alteration of the building.

Article 5 sets out the Authorities by whom interim permissions may be given. Where a Special Order is at present in force the Authority will be the Authority under that Order; where a resolution has been passed by a County Council or a Joint Committee, the Local Authority of the district in which the land is situated; and in other cases the Local Authority who have passed the resolution. Provision is made for cases where an area is transferred from one Authority to another. It will be competent to the Minister by Special Order to specify another Authority as the interim development authority in any particular case (see Article 12).

In view especially of the time limit (two months) in the Act for deciding applications, interim development Authorities should have systematic arrangements with other Authorities in particular County Councils and Joint Committees, who may have to be consulted on applications, to secure that the consultation will be prompt.

Article 6 provides that, except in certain circumstances which are specified, permission must be granted for works of alteration of an existing building or of extension of an existing building, for the development of land as a sports or recreation ground other than a ground conducted for profit, or, if open to the public, a ground not ordinarily open free of charge, and for the erection within the curtilage of a dwelling-house of buildings ordinarily incidental to its enjoyment. The fact that these classes of applications are specified must not be considered, of course, to imply in any way that permission should not be granted in other appropriate cases. Permission should not be refused unless the proposal is in conflict with intended provisions in the scheme.

Article 7. See note on Article 3.

Article 8. Application for permission has to be made in writing with sufficient particulars. Authorities may find it useful to have forms for this purpose, and this would probably also be for the convenience of private developers.

The first proviso to the Article is to cover cases where insufficient particulars are furnished by the applicant.

The second proviso to the Article is to cover cases where an application is made in general terms, where, for instance, a person applies for permission to erect shops on specified land before he proceeds with detailed plans, a procedure which has advantages.

The third proviso to the Article relates to cases where the interim development authority is also the Authority under any Byelaws, Regulations, or Local Acts, for the approval of plans of streets or buildings. It is important to note that in these cases an application to the bye-law authority is to be deemed an application under the Order, except where the Authority notify the applicant that sufficient particulars are not given. Where the interim development authority is not the byelaw authority, it would be well that the byelaw authority, when communicating their decision, should definitely warn the applicant that planning permission is not covered, and there would be advantage if this were indicated on the plan itself.

It is open to the Authority, in granting permission to develop, to specify a time limit within which the development must be carried out, if the permission is to be valid. This course may be advantageous in some cases; but obviously too rigid a time limit should not be fixed unless there is special reason.

Where an Authority propose to pay a contribution in connection with an interim decision (see Section 10 (4) of the Act), this should be paid out of revenue other than in special circumstances. Where they propose to pay out of loan, they should make sure that the sanction of the Minister will be given. They should also bear in mind in this connection the limit of two months for decisions, unless extended time is agreed.

In the recent Circular 1305, the Minister mentioned the importance of records of interim permissions. The Authority will find it useful also to indicate permissions on a map. Further, a map kept up to date showing the latest developments in their district should be regarded by the Authority as a necessity of local administration.

Article 9 makes provision for the suspension in certain cases of Local Acts, or Byelaws, Orders or Regulations, with the consent of the Minister.

Article 10. Decisions have to be conveyed in writing, and also the reasons, where an application is refused or is granted subject to conditions.

Article 11 relates to London. It sets out the classes of cases in which the London County Council have to consult Metropolitan Borough Councils before deciding interim applications.

Article 12 provides that the Order shall apply subject to the provisions of any Special Order which may be made.

Copies of the Order and of this Memorandum have been placed on sale and may be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below.

comprising the land was passed, whether before or after the commencement of this Order, by a county council or a joint committee, the interim development authority shall be the council of the district in which the land is situate;

(c) in any other case, the interim development authority shall be the authority who passed the resolution to prepare or adopt, or were authorised to prepare or adopt, a scheme comprising the land in respect of which the application for permission to develop is made, or the authority who are deemed by virtue of any Act or order to have passed the resolution to prepare or adopt, or to have been authorised to prepare or adopt, a scheme comprising the land.

6.—(1) Where application is made to the interim development authority for permission to carry out works of alteration to an existing building, other than works of alteration proposed in connection with a different use of the building, the authority shall not refuse permission, unless the said works would—

(a) involve the pulling down of the building to the extent of more than one-half of the superficial area of the main containing walls of the building, account being taken of any previous works of alteration subsequent to the resolution date; or

(b) materially affect the design or external appearance of the building.

(2) Where application is made to the interim development authority for permission to extend an existing building and to use the extended building for a purpose the same as, or similar to, the purpose for which the building was used on the resolution date (or if the building was used for more than one purpose at the resolution date, to use the extended building for purposes the same as, or similar to, those purposes in the same relative proportions), or in the case of a newly erected building which has not been used before the resolution date, to use that building as extended for any purpose for which the building was designed, the authority shall not refuse permission, unless—

(a) either the total or the ground floor space of the extended building would exceed by more than one-eighth the total or the ground floor space of the existing building; or

(b) the extension of the building would seriously injure the amenity of the neighbourhood by reason of its design or external appearance; or

(c) the extension of the building would not conform with a provision proposed to be inserted in the scheme for fixing, in relation to any street or proposed street, a line beyond which no building in that street or proposed street may project; or

(a) a building is proposed which, or any part of which—

(i) would not conform with a provision proposed to be inserted in the schem for fixing, in relation to any street or proposed street, a line beyon which no building in that street or proposed street may project; or

(ii) would occupy land proposed to be reserved by the scheme for a purpose th carrying out of which in the future would necessitate the removal o alteration of the building; or

(iii) would seriously injure the amenity of the neighbourhood; or

(b) walls, fences or palings are proposed at or near the corner or bend of any road which would be contrary to the interests of safety:

Provided that the foregoing provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to an application for permission to develop land for the purpose of a sports or recreation ground, unless the authority are satisfied that the ground will not be conducted with a view to the making of profit and, if open to the public, will ordinarily be open to them free of charge.

(4) For the purposes of this Article the extension of a building includes the erection of an additional building on the same site to be occupied together with the building.

7. Where application is made under this Order to the interim development authority to permit development which would not be in general conformity with the proposals for development outlined in a preliminary statement, or where application has been made under any order revoked by this Order to permit development which would not be in general conformity with those proposals and the application is outstanding on the date on which this Order comes into operation, the authority shall, before arriving at their decision on the application, give full consideration to the interests of persons whose land has been, or is being, developed in general conformity with those proposals, or who occupy land so developed, and to representations received by them from any persons whose interests would be affected by the proposed development and shall, in the case of any application outstanding on the same date under any order revoked as aforesaid, notwithstanding any provision in the order restricting the power of the authority to impose requirements, have power to decide the application free from such restriction.

In this Article the expression "preliminary statement" means a preliminary statement of proposals for development approved by the Minister whether before or after the commencement of the Act.

8. A person who desires to apply for permission under Article 5 of this Order shall apply in writing to the interim development authority and shall furnish to the authority, together with his application, a plan in duplicate sufficient to identify the land to which the application relates (hereinafter called a "site plan") and particulars, illustrated where necessary by plans and drawings in duplicate, requisite to show the proposed development:

Provided that—

(i) the interim development authority shall not be entitled to refuse to entertain an application on the ground that the applicant has failed to furnish the requisite particulars, plans or drawings, but if within seven days from the receipt of the application the authority require the applicant to furnish further particulars, plans or drawings in the form specified by them, and the applicant fails to do so within seven days from the receipt of the requisition, the authority may on that ground refuse the application, and subsection (5) of section 10 of the Act which entitles the applicant to appeal to the Minister shall apply accordingly;

(ii) it shall not be necessary to furnish plans and drawings, other than a site plan, in any case in which an application is made to the interim development authority for permission which, if granted in accordance with the terms of the application, would be conditional on the subsequent approval by the authority, or by the Minister on appeal, of the particulars of the proposed development;

(iii) where the interim development authority is also the authority for approving the plans of streets or buildings under any byelaws, regulations or local Acts in force in the district, an application for the approval of a plan of streets or buildings shall be deemed to be an application made under this Order, unless the authority within seven days of receiving the application give notice to the applicant that sufficient particulars for the purposes of this Order have not been furnished.

9. Subject to the provisions of the Act, the interim development authority may, with the consent of the Minister, in any case in which it is expedient in order to promote the proposed development, suspend the operation of any enactments contained in local Acts and of any orders, byelaws or regulations under whatever authority made.

(d) before suspending the operation of any enactment, order, byelaw or regulation under the powers conferred by Article 9 of this Order in respect of land in a metropolitan borough, the London County Council shall give notice to the council of that borough of the proposed suspension, except where the enactment, order, byelaw or regulation has been previously suspended under the powers conferred by Article 9 aforesaid in respect of land in that borough which is proposed to be included in the scheme and the object of the proposed suspension is to permit a departure from the enactment, order, byelaw or regulation not greater than was permitted by the previous suspension.

12. In the event of a special interim development order being made affecting an area or any part of an area in respect of which a resolution to prepare or adopt a scheme has or is deemed to have taken effect, this Order and any general interim development order amending this Order shall, subject to the provisions of the special order, apply to such extent only, and subject to such modifications, if any, as may be specified in the special order.

Given under the Official Seal of the Minister of Health this twenty-first day of March in the year One thousand nine hundred and thirty-three.

MEMORANDUM T. & C.P. 3.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT, 1932.

GENERAL TRANSITIONAL ORDER.

Section 52 (2) of the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932, enables the Minister of Health to make a general Order applying the procedure under the Act to schemes which are already in train when the Act comes into operation. A copy of the Order which has been made for this purpose is enclosed. The following is a brief summary of the provisions of the Order :

Article 1. Title and date of operation.

Article 2. Definitions.

Article 3 relates to cases where the Authority preparing the scheme have not before April 1st reached any formal stage in the preparation of the scheme under the 1921 Regulations such as the advertisement of their intention to adopt a Preliminary Statement. In these cases the procedure of the 1933 Regulations will apply to the preparation of the scheme instead of the procedure of the 1921 Regulations, with the modifications set out in the Article.

Article 4 relates to the cases where the Authority are proceeding by way of a Preliminary Statement and have before April 1st given notice under the 1921 Regulations of their intention to adopt it, but it has not been approved by the Minister. In these cases the procedure of the 1921 Regulations will continue to apply to the adoption of the Preliminary Statement, its submission for approval, and its approval (as the case may require) unless the Minister dispenses with the Preliminary Statement. Thereafter the procedure of the 1933 Regulations will apply to the preparation of the scheme.

Article 5 deals with the cases where the Minister has before April 1st approved a Preliminary Statement or has authorised an Authority to dispense with it, but the Authority have not adopted a draft scheme under the 1921 Regulations. In these cases the procedure of the 1933 Regulations is to be followed in the preparation of the scheme instead of the procedure under the 1921 Regulations with the modification specified in the Article.

Article 6 deals with the cases where the Authority have before April 1st adopted a draft scheme under the 1921 Regulations, but the scheme has not been submitted for approval. In these cases the Authority are required to revise the draft scheme so as to secure that it conforms with the provisions of the Act, and the procedure of the 1933 Regulations is applied as respects the preparation and adoption of the revised draft scheme and the subsequent stages of the preparation of the scheme, subject to the modification set out in the Article.

Article 7 deals with the cases where a scheme has been submitted for approval under the 1921 Regulations before April 1st, but the Minister has not notified the Local Authority of his intention to approve it. In these cases the scheme is to be returned to the Authority for revision to secure that it conforms with the provisions of the Act, the Authority are required to revise the scheme, and the procedure of the 1933 Regulations is applied to the making of the revised scheme and its submission to the Minister, subject to the modification specified in the Article.

Article 8 contains definitions applicable to this part of the Order.

Article 9 applies the provisions of section 7 of the Act (which relates to notices, etc.) to schemes covered by the Order, subject to certain modifications.

In all these cases the Authority preparing the scheme are required to publish a notice of the grant of the application for authority to prepare the scheme or a notice of the taking effect of the resolution to prepare the scheme, as the case may be, in a local newspaper and, subject to what is stated below, in the London Gazette; these notices must be advertised within three months of April 1st. Except as hereafter mentioned, similar notices must also be served in the manner and on the persons specified in section 7 (1) and (2) of the Act and in Article 6 of the 1933 Regulations; these notices must be served within eight months of April 1st. Forms for the notices referred to above have been prepared and copies are enclosed. This procedure makes it possible to do away with the present costly procedure of "referencing."

In making their requisition to the Surveyor of Taxes under section 7 (3) of the Act to furnish the list of the names and addresses of the owners and occupiers shown in the assessment to income tax, the Authority should be careful to inform the Surveyor of Taxes that the assessment from which the list is to be obtained is the last assessment allowed by the Income Tax Commissioners before April 1st, 1933.

The first proviso to the Article affords an alternative procedure for the publication of the notices required to be advertised in the London Gazette. The Authority, instead of themselves publishing the notice, may request the Minister to do so at their expense and in that event are required to furnish the Minister with the necessary information. A form indicating the particulars to be supplied is enclosed. It appears to the Minister that the cost of the advertisements in the London Gazette can be materially reduced if this procedure is generally adopted, since it will then be possible to publish one or more notices in general terms to each of which can be appended a schedule setting out the particulars applicable to a large number of cases.

The second proviso to the Article relieves the Authority from the requirement to serve personal notices under section 7 (1) and (2) of the Act and Article 6 of the 1933 Regulations in any case where, at any time between January 1st, 1932, and June 1st, 1933, they have compiled a list of the names and addresses of owners on whom notices are required to be served under the 1921 Regulations. The names and addresses of all these owners are to be added to the register compiled under section 7 of the Act.

The third proviso to the Article makes a similar provision in the case of an Authority who have served individual notices, in accordance with the provisions of a Local Act, as to the right of owners or other persons concerned to register their names and addresses with the Authority for the purpose of being served with further notices of the progress of the scheme.

The Article also provides that where the Authority have, under the provisions of a Local Act, compiled a register, but not in pursuance of individual notices intimating a right to register, the names and addresses entered in that register shall be added to the register compiled under section 7 of the Act.

Article 10 enables the Minister in certain circumstances to extend the period during which anything is required to be done under the Order or dispense with or modify the requirements of the Order.

Article 11 relates to the making of a Special Order by the Minister under section 52 (2) of the Act for particular cases.

Copies of the Order and of this Memorandum have been placed on sale and may be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below.

7. Where before the appointed day a scheme has been submitted to the Minister for approval under the provisions of the 1921 Regulations, but the Minister has not notified the local authority of his intention to approve it, with or without modifications, or to disapprove it, the Minister shall transmit the scheme to the local authority preparing the scheme for such revision as may be necessary in order to secure that it shall conform with the provisions of the Act, and thereafter that authority shall prepare and by resolution make a revised scheme, and the provisions of Articles 14 to 19, inclusive, and Parts I, II, VIII and IX of the 1933 Regulations, together with the schedules to which the said Articles refer, shall apply as respects the procedure to be followed in connection with the making of the revised scheme and its submission to the Minister, but with the substitution for the period prescribed in paragraph (1) of Article 14 for the making of the scheme, of a period of fifteen months from the day on which the scheme was returned as aforesaid.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

CIRCULAR 1495.

Local Authorities (outside London) and Joint Executive Town Planning Committees. (England and Wales.)

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
15th August, 1935.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to acquaint you of the passing of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a), which received the Royal Assent on the 2nd instant, and to enclose for the information of the Planning Authority a copy of an explanatory circular which has been addressed by the Ministry of Transport to Highway Authorities.

As its title suggests, the new Act is directed to the provision of a more expeditious and effective method of controlling ribbon development than is provided by the existing law and, as one of the principal objects of the Act is to facilitate the passage of traffic, it will in the main be administered by the Highway Authorities. The Highway Authorities are, however, directed in certain matters to keep in close touch with the Planning Authorities and the Minister has no doubt that Highway and Planning Authorities will gladly co-operate in securing their common object.

Nothing in this Act limits the existing powers of Planning Authorities to declare that a planning scheme shall be prepared or to control interim development. The power of the Minister of Transport to remove restrictions imposed under the Act upon frontage development where, by reason of the provisions of a scheme or otherwise, their continuance is unnecessary, is explained below.

A consent given under the planning law to the erection of buildings, etc., before the imposition of restrictions by a Highway Authority under the new Act is not invalidated by the passing of the new Act or the imposition of restrictions thereunder.

In addition, the new Act confers upon Local Authorities at large certain new powers which are more fully explained in paragraphs 35 and 36 of the enclosed circular.

The attention of Planning Authorities is specially drawn to the following provisions of the new Act which directly affect them in their procedure or practice:

Section 7.—Sub-section (2) requires the Highway Authority from time to time to consult with any Planning Authorities (as defined in Section 24) with a view to securing co-ordination between the exercise of their powers under the Act of giving or withholding consent to development and the exercise by the Planning Authority of their powers in relation to schemes.

For the purposes of this consultation the Planning Authority should endeavour to arrange that representatives, with full knowledge of the planning proposals, of applications before them, and of the manner in which it is proposed to deal with those applications, shall be constantly ready to confer with representatives of the Highway Authority.

It may be a matter of urgency that the new powers of the Highway Authority should be applied to unclassified roads. It is therefore to be anticipated that the Highway Authority will wish for early information of proposed provisions of a planning scheme affecting development on unclassified roads. The Planning Authority should, therefore, without delay, formulate their proposals in this regard, if this has not already been done.

Other planning proposals may require some revision in consequence of the exercise of the new powers of the Highway Authority and this issue also might with advantage be discussed at the proposed conferences. Similarly the proposals of the Highway Authority may be susceptible of modification in the light of the planning proposals. It may, for example, be the case that an agreement has been made with the Planning Authority under which no compensation will be claimed in respect of restrictions imposed under the scheme, or that an agreement restricting the planning, development or use of the land has been made under Section 34 of the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932.

Section 8, Sub-section (2).—Where the Planning Authority are also the Highway Authority, an application for permission to develop land affected by restrictions in force under Section 1 or 2 of the Act is to be treated as if it were also an application for consent under either or both those Sections, unless the applicant has otherwise requested.

Where the Planning Authority are not the Highway Authority, they must at once send sufficient particulars of any application made to them for permission to develop land affected by restrictions in force under Section 1 or 2 of the Act to the Highway Authority.

It will probably be found convenient to come to an arrangement under which the Highway Authority will communicate any observations on the application to the Planning Authority within an agreed time, which should be as short as practicable.

Section 12.—Inconsistent or duplicated restrictions under a planning scheme and under the Act must clearly be avoided. Section 12 enables the Minister of Transport, upon the application of the Highway Authority, or of the Council of any county district, by Order to remove restrictions in force under Section 1 or 2 of the Act as respects any road. Before doing so he must be satisfied that the restrictions are rendered unnecessary by reason of some other Act or some other scheme or resolution made or passed under such Act.

The Minister of Health would not feel able to approve the retention in a scheme of provisions designed to take the place of restrictions imposed by or under the Act, unless the Minister of Transport would be in a position, and would be prepared, if the scheme were approved, to issue a derestricting Order under the Section.

The attention of all Local Authorities is drawn to the provisions of Sections 16 and 17 of the new Act which are of general application and are summarised in paragraphs 35 and 36 of the enclosed circular. As regards Section 16 (which extends the power of Local Authorities to provide parking places) reference may be made to the preface to the model regulations issued for the purposes of Section 68 of the Public Health Act, 1925, and obtainable (price 4*d.*) from H.M. Stationery Office. The model regulations themselves will be replaced by model byelaws, but most of the information and suggestions in the preface will continue to be applicable.

In the administration of Section 17 (which deals with the provision of means of entrance and egress) Local Authorities should bear in mind the statutory obligation to aprove or disapprove the plans of new buildings within one month. The Minister will shortly issue a direction in pursuance of subsection (8) determining the method by which the space contained by the external or containing walls of a building shall be measured for the purposes of this Section.

An additional copy of this Circular and of the enclosure are forwarded for the use of the Surveyor or Planning Officer of the Authority.

Copies of this Circular have been placed on sale and may be obtained from the Stationery Office at the addresses shown below.

I am, Sir,

MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT,
WHITEHALL GARDENS,
LONDON, S.W.1.
15th August, 1935.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1935.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Transport to request you to draw the attention of the Council to the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act (a) which received the Royal Assent on August 2nd, 1935. This circular gives a brief indication of the general scope of the Act, but the terms of the Act itself must be consulted in their precise effect.

CONTROL OF DEVELOPMENT.

2. The Act confers important new powers upon Highway Authorities designed to enable them to exert an effective control over undesirable development along or near the frontages of roads.

Immediately upon the passing of the Act, subject to certain exceptions (see paragraph 15 below) it became unlawful under section 2 (1), without the consent of the Highway Authority:

(i) to construct, form or lay out any means of access to or from a road which, on May 17th, 1935, was a classified road; or

(ii) to erect or make any building within 220 feet from the middle of such a road.

3. While these restrictions are by the Act itself brought automatically in force in regard to all roads that were classified on May 17th, 1935, under section 2 (2) they may also be applied, by resolution of the Highway Authority approved by the Minister, to any other road. During the passage of the Bill through Parliament the view was expressed in many quarters that the imposition of control upon classified roads alone would tend at once to transfer ribbon development to the unclassified roads. The Council have doubtless already examined the probability of any such tendency on the unclassified roads in their area with a view to selecting those over which it is desirable to assume immediate powers of control and the Minister would urge that a careful survey for this purpose should be completed with the least possible delay. He will be prepared at once to consider the confirmation of resolutions passed by the Council to bring restrictions into force in respect of any roads that were not classified roads on May 17th, 1935, upon which there appears to be any danger of ribbon development. A single resolution may deal with any number of roads, but the individual roads must be specified. "Road" includes a proposed road, the plans for which have been approved by the Minister (section 24).

STANDARD WIDTHS.

4. Under section 1 a Highway Authority is enabled with the approval of the Minister to determine that one of the standard widths set out in Schedule I to the Act shall apply to any road, whether classified or not. (Special widths may be approved [under section 1 (2) (b)] to meet the requirements of embankments and cuttings, and Regulations dealing with this matter are being prepared.) Where a standard width has been approved, it becomes unlawful, without the consent of the Highway Authority:

(a) to construct, form or lay out any means of access to or from the road,

(b) to erect or make any building or permanent excavation or to construct, form or lay out any works within the approved width.

5. A further communication will be addressed to the Council at an early date ...ing the lay-out considered by the Minister to be appropriate to the differen...

standard widths; but meanwhile the Council will doubtless take the opportunity of surveying the roads to which they consider the protection of the Act should be extended and of determining, on a long view, what are likely to be the future traffic requirements in order that the lines of widening may be safeguarded. In connection with this survey the Council will, of course, have regard to the road proposals contained in any planning scheme undertaken by them or by any Planning Authority in the area.

6. The existing middle of the road will in many cases not be the most appropriate line upon which to found proposals for future improvement of the road; and the "standard width" may be based upon an altered line shown in plans approved by the Minister and duly advertised (section 24).

Application for the Minister's approval of plans for this purpose should be made by letter addressed to the Assistant Secretary, Roads Department, Ministry of Transport, 7, Whitehall Gardens, London, S.W.1, and should be accompanied by plans, in duplicate, showing the proposed road, or existing road as proposed to be improved. The plans should be on a scale of not less than $\frac{1}{500}$th.

7. In order to give due opportunity to interested parties to make representations, section 1 (1) provides for advertisement and notice of any resolution adopting a standard width before its confirmation by the Minister. The advertisement and notice should be in the form set out in the Appendix to this circular, and should allow a period of not less than 21 days from the date of the advertisement for the submission of objections to the Minister.

8. Under the powers conferred on him by section 19 (2), the Minister will be prepared to consider applications for grants out of the Road Fund towards expenditure incurred by the Highway Authority in payment of compensation for injurious affection arising out of restrictions resulting from the adoption of a standard width.

9. Where a standard width is adopted for a road that was a classified road on May 17th, 1935, or for any other road as respects which the Highway Authority have by resolution under section 2 applied restrictions up to 220 feet from the middle of the road, all restrictions on means of access are deemed to be restrictions resulting from the adoption of the standard width (section 2 (4)).

MEANS OF ACCESS.

10. Section 24 (2) provides that the mere taking away of a gate or fence does not of itself constitute the formation of a means of access. On the other hand the construction of a road or path (including a path for foot passengers only), is clearly the formation of a means of access. In cases where it is not possible to point to the definite construction of a road or path, but there is habitual user of a track, the question whether or not such user constitutes the formation of a means of access must be a matter of fact which can only be authoritatively determined in the particular case by the Courts.

11. The Council will recognise that in the proper control of means of access lies an effective safeguard against ribbon development and a means of preventing the danger and inconvenience on the road that arises from the presence of stationary vehicles.

12. By granting access only at a reasonably limited number of points, the Highway Authority can do much to facilitate, not only the convenience and safety of traffic, but also the planned and ordered development of the land in the proximity of the road.

FENCING OF ROADS.

13. Section 4 gives the Highway Authority power, where restrictions are in force, to fence roads as a means of preventing access to the road except at defined points.

BUILDINGS.

14. The term "building" does not include fences, gates, posts, masts, ornaments, or other similar erections required for the purposes of agriculture or of any dwelling-house or garden occupied with a dwelling-house, greenhouses or summerhouses required in connection with any such garden, or temporary tents or scaffolding required for any purpose (section 24). The definition is, however, designed to include "temporary" buildings, such as old railway carriages used as bungalows and roadside booths.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

EXEMPTIONS.

15. Exemptions from the restrictions of the Act are accorded to works in progress at the date of publication of the restrictions, and to works carried out in execution of a contract made, or permission granted by a Planning Authority, before that date. Land forming part of a burial ground which has been used for the purpose of interment before the passing of the Act is exempt from restrictions, and the restrictions do not apply to any permanent excavation or works necessary in connection with drainage for agricultural purposes, or to any works necessary for the repair or maintenance of sewers, drains, pipes, etc. or to the erection of advertisements as defined in the Advertisements Regulations Acts, 1907 and 1925 (section 3). Except within a standard width there is exemption for agricultural buildings (not being dwelling-houses) (section 2 (3)).

16. Section 23 contains savings for various classes of statutory undertakers.

CONSENT NOT TO BE WITHHELD.

17. The Highway Authority are not to withhold consent to new means of access required for agricultural purposes (but may impose conditions for securing that the means of access shall be used for agricultural purposes only), or to the re-erection, alteration or extension (not being a major alteration or extension as defined in the 3rd Schedule) of a building erected before the date on which the restrictions came into force, or to any excavation or works for the purpose of constructing any sewer, drain, pipe, etc. (but may impose conditions for securing that the sewer, drain or pipe shall be laid in such a manner as will not interfere with the construction or improvement of the road) (section 7 (1)).

APPLICATIONS FOR CONSENT.

18. During the progress of the Bill through Parliament, the Council have doubtless been considering the procedure which it will adopt for dealing with applications for consent. It will be observed that under section 7 (5) consent is to be deemed to have been given unconditionally if no decision has been notified in writing to the applicant within two months of the date of his application. It was felt that those desiring to build were entitled to expeditious decisions, and that it would be open to the Highway Authority to delegate their powers to an appropriate committee.

19. Where a standard width is adopted for a road that was a classified road on May 17th, 1935, or for any other road as respects which restrictions are in force by reason of a resolution under section 2, any application for consent to building within the standard width is to be treated as an application under both section 1 and section 2, unless the applicant has requested that the application shall not be so treated (section 8 (1)).

20. Where an application is made to a Planning Authority for permission to develop land affected by restrictions under sections 1 or 2, and the Planning Authority are the Highway Authority the application is to be treated as if it were an application under the Act. If the Planning Authority are not the Highway Authority, the Planning Authority are to send particulars of the application to the Highway Authority (section 8 (2)). Similarly, where an application is made to the Highway Authority for consent in respect of land which is subject to a planning scheme, the Highway Authority must send particulars to the Planning Authority (section 8 (3)).

CONTRAVENTIONS.

21. Persons carrying out works without having sought the consent of the Highway Authority and obtained that consent (either expressly or by lapse of the two months' period) are liable on conviction to penalties and the Authority after due notice, may demolish the work at the offenders' expense (section 11).

APPEALS.

22. An applicant for consent can appeal to the Minister of Transport against the decision of the Highway Authority to withhold consent or to attach conditions to the consent, except where the application is for consent to buildings, excavations or works (other than excavations or works for the purpose of constructing sewers, drains, pipes, etc.) within a standard width; there is no appeal against a decision on such an application. The Minister, if so requested by either the Highway Authority or the aggrieved party, will cause a local inquiry to be held in public (section 7).

COMPENSATION FOR RESTRICTIONS.

23. Compensation for restrictions cannot be claimed until the Highway Authority withhold consent or attach conditions to consent. Failing agreement with the Highway Authority, the claim is to be determined by an official arbitrator, in accordance with the directions given in section 9 of the Act.

DEPOSIT OF PLANS FOR PUBLIC INSPECTION.

24. Under section 6 of the Highway Authority are required to keep available for inspection at their offices (and at such other places as the Minister may direct) sufficient plans showing the lands subject to restrictions under the Act.

25. The Minister suggests that in order to comply with this requirement as regards the restrictions imposed by section 2 of the Act as respects roads that were classified roads on May 17th, 1935, the Council should cause to be marked on maps of scale not less than 6 inches to 1 mile, coloured lines distant by the equivalent of 220 feet, from the middle of all such roads for which they are the Highway Authority. The "middle of the road" is defined by section 24 as the middle point between the boundaries of the road.

REGISTER OF CONSENTS.

26. Under section 7 (6) the Highway Authority are required to keep available for inspection a register with sufficient particulars of all consents given by them.

REGISTER FOR NOTICES.

27. Under section 5 any person claiming to have an estate or interest in property within 220 feet of the middle of any road repairable by the inhabitants at large (in Scotland, any road for the maintenance and management of which a County or Town Council is responsible) may require the Highway Authority to record his name and address and to furnish him with particulars of subsequent resolutions imposing restrictions under the Act. The Authority are required to keep a register in a form approved by the Minister. Without prejudice to his power to approve alternative forms the Minister has approved a form of register giving the particulars set out in paragraph 14 of the accompanying memorandum R.R.D.1.

28. The Minister would suggest, for the sake of uniformity, that Highway Authorities should consider the desirability of supplying cards say 8 in. by 5 in. (a standard filing size) containing on the left of one side particulars of the information required—as set out in paragraph 14 of the memorandum—and leaving on the right as much space as possible for the required particulars to be inserted by the applicant. On the other side of the card should be printed the address to which the card is to be sent with an indication that a 1½*d.* stamp is necessary. The cards when completed can then be filed in an ordinary filing cabinet. If this suggestion is adopted by the Council they might consider the desirability of giving notice in the local press that application to be placed on the register should be made on the standard form, copies of which are available at the Council's offices.

DE-RESTRICTION.

29. In certain cases, the provisions of other Acts or of orders, schemes, or resolutions under those Acts, e.g. a planning scheme, may make it unnecessary that the restrictions (either as to access or buildings or both) under the present Act should continue in force. Under section 12 the Minister is empowered, upon the application of the

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Highway Authority or, in England and Wales, of the Council of a County District, to make an Order in respect of any road or part of road so that the restrictions specified in the Order shall not apply thereto.

CO-OPERATION WITH PLANNING AUTHORITIES.

30. During the passage of the Bill, hopes have been expressed that the Highway Authority in their administration of the Act will co-operate to the full with the Planning Authority in the furtherance of their common objects, and Mr. Hore-Belisha requests that the special attention of the Council may be drawn to the directions given by Parliament in section 7 (2) of the Act.

PURCHASE OF LAND.

31. Section 13 simplifies the procedure for purchase by the Highway Authority of land required for the construction or improvement of roads. Under section 9 (3), the Authority will in certain cases of construction or improvement of roads be enabled to deny access to the new or improved road without liability for compensation. In many future cases acquisition of land for road purposes will therefore be on the basis that unlimited right of access to the new road will not be given.

32. Subject to exceptions in the case of land which is required to be retained as part of a park, garden, pleasure ground or home farm, and land in regard to which an agreement has been made under section 34 of the Town and County Planning Act, 1932, section 13 also confers on the Authority power to acquire compulsorily land up to 220 yards from the middle of any road for the purpose of preventing the erection thereon of buildings detrimental to the view from the road. By section 13 (3) (c) the subsequent user of such land is strictly limited.

33. Section 13 (2) gives powers of purchase, by agreement, of any land in the neighbourhood of any road which the Highway Authority may consider it desirable to acquire for the purposes of preserving the amenities of the locality (including the purpose of preventing the erection of buildings detrimental to the view from the road).

34. Section 14 gives power to acquire compulsorily from local authorities and statutory undertakers certain easements for the construction of bridges and for road drainage.

PARKING PLACES.

35. By section 16 the powers of Local Authorities to provide parking places are now extended so as to include the provision of buildings and underground parking places for the same purpose, with power to let on hire. The Minister regards the provision of adequate parking accommodation at reasonable charges as a potent means of reducing the inconvenience to traffic and the danger to life and limb caused by the presence of waiting vehicles in the streets. Where private enterprise does not meet public needs in this regard, the Minister trusts that in all appropriate cases this important matter may receive the very early consideration of Local Authorities (in consultation with the Highway Authorities where different authorities are concerned).

MEANS OF ENTRANCE AND EGRESS.

36. Section 17 gives the Local Authority (in Scotland, a County Council, a Dean of Guild Court or any body performing the functions of a Dean of Guild Court) the power in connection with the approval of plans for certain classes of buildings to require those responsible for the erection of a new building to provide such accommodation for loading and unloading of vehicles, or picking up and setting down of passengers, as may be specified by the Local Authority for the purpose of limiting interference with traffic along the roads adjacent to the building. The Minister does not doubt that, in accordance with the Act, these Authorities will consult freely with the police and, where different authorities are concerned, with the Highway Authorities as to the exercise of their new powers, which if effectively exercised, should limit further encroachment upon the freedom of movement of persons having business in urban areas.

CLAIMING AUTHORITIES.

37. Section 18 preserves the special position of those Councils in England and Wales which are "claiming" authorities for the purposes of section 32 of the Local Government Act, 1929.

APPLICATIONS TO LONDON.

38. The Act does not apply to the Administrative County of London, except in so far as provisions relating to parking places (section 16) and to means of entrance and egress (section 17) are applied by Orders of the Minister of Health.

APPLICATION TO SCOTLAND.

39. In Scotland, references to the sections of the Act should in appropriate cases be read as references to the sections as applied to Scotland by section 25.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM.

40. Enclosed are copies of a simple explanatory memorandum, R.R.D.1, of the immediate effect of the passing of the Act upon owners and occupiers of land. Further copies of this memorandum may be obtained from this Department on request.

Your obedient Servant,

MEMO. RRD. 1.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1935.

(THIS MEMORANDUM IS IN NO SENSE A FULL DESCRIPTION OF THE ACT, BUT MAY HELP TO EXPLAIN BRIEFLY HOW IT AFFECTS PERSONS WHO OWN OR OCCUPY LAND OUTSIDE THE COUNTY OF LONDON. FOR THE PRECISE EFFECT OF THE ACT, REFERENCE MUST BE MADE TO THE TERMS OF THE ACT ITSELF (a).)

THE "220 FEET LINE" ALONG CLASSIFIED ROADS.

1. Under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, which became law on August 2nd, 1935, it is unlawful, except as explained below, to make any building (other than an agricultural building—not being a dwelling house) within 220 feet of the middle of any road that was a classified road on May 17th, 1935, or to make any new means of access to such a road.

2. Classified roads are shown on recent maps, and on all new sign posts erected on the roads, by a number and the letter "A" or "B" in front of the number, e.g. A. 123 or B. 456. Any owner or occupier of land who is in doubt whether or not a particular road was a classified road on May 17th, 1935, should apply to the Clerk of the Highway Authority.

3. The Highway Authorities responsible for classified roads (outside the County of London) are

(a) in a County Borough—the County Borough Council;

(b) in most other towns of over 20,000 inhabitants—the Borough, Town or Urban District Council of the town; in the Large Burghs in Scotland—the Town Council; and (c) elsewhere—the County Council.

(The parts of the Act dealt with in this memorandum do not apply to the County of London.)

FUTURE "220 FEET LINES" ON UNCLASSIFIED ROADS.

4. The restrictions explained above have been in force since August 2nd, 1935, in the case of roads that were classified roads on May 17th, 1935. If the Highway Authority obtain the approval of the Minister of Transport, they may apply like restrictions to any other road. The restrictions become effective after due advertisement of the Minister's approval in two local newspapers. Any owner or occupier of land, who wants to be informed when any further restrictions come into force which affect his land, can have his name put on the Highway Authority's register as explained in paragraph 13 below.

"STANDARD WIDTHS."

5. A Highway Authority may, with the approval of the Minister of Transport, adopt a "standard width" for any of their roads. The "standard width" is the width to which the road will ultimately be made, and by the adoption of a standard width greater restrictions than those applied by the 220 feet lines (as set out in paragraph 1 above) are placed on the land which is subsequently to form part of the road. This is effected by a resolution which has to be approved by the Minister. Before the resolution is submitted to the Minister it must be advertised in two local newspapers and notice must be sent to any owner or occupier who has had his name put on the Highway Authority's register as explained in paragraph 13. Should any owner or occupier object to the proposal the Minister must consider the objections before approving the resolution. If the Minister approves the resolution the approval must be advertised and further notices must be sent to the owners and occupiers whose names are on the Highway Authority's register. Thereupon it becomes unlawful for any person to erect any building (including agricultural buildings) to make any permanent excavation or to construct any works within the standard width, or to make any new means of access to the road.

BUILDINGS.

6. Buildings not affected by the Act.—The Act does not affect fences, gates, posts, masts, ornaments or other similar erections required for the purposes of agriculture or for the purposes of a dwelling house or garden occupied with a dwelling house; green-houses or summer-houses in such gardens; temporary tents; or scaffolding. Also there are some special buildings belonging to railway and water companies and the like which are not affected by the Act.

7. Consent of Highway Authority required in other cases.—For any other structure or erection (including alterations and additions) of whatever material and however made within 220 feet of the middle of a classified road or any other road to which the restrictions may be applied by the Highway Authority, the permission of the Highway Authority should be sought in writing. The form "A" on page 5 of this memorandum [post, p. 3948] may be used.

MEANS OF ACCESS.

8. The permission of the Highway Authority should also be sought in writing if it is desired to make any new road, drive, track, or path leading out on to any classified road. (No permission is needed for the mere removal of a gate or fence, if no new road, drive, track, or path is made.) The form "B" on page 6 of this memorandum [post, p. 3949] may be used as an application form.

PERMANENT EXCAVATIONS AND WORKS WITHIN A "STANDARD WIDTH."

9. Any person wishing to make a permanent excavation or to construct any works within a standard width (see paragraph 5 above) should seek the permission of the Highway Authority in writing. The form "C" on page 7 of this memorandum [post, p. 3949] may be used as an application form.

DECISIONS AND APPEALS.

10. If sufficient particulars have been given in the application and the Highway Authority gives no answer within two months, the Authority is to be taken as having consented. If the Authority refuse consent or attach conditions to their consent which the applicant thinks unreasonable, the applicant may appeal to the Minister of Transport, and the Minister may make such Order as he thinks fit. Any person wishing to appeal should write to the Assistant Secretary, Roads Department, Ministry of Transport, 7, Whitehall Gardens, London, S.W.1, setting out the grounds of the appeal and enclosing a copy of the application to the Highway Authority and of the Authority's decision.

EXEMPTIONS.

11. The restrictions within a 220 feet line or a standard width do not apply to any works in progress at the date when the restrictions were first published or to any works carried out in execution of a contract made, or permission granted by a Town Planning Authority, before that date. In the case of restrictions within the 220 feet line along roads that were classified roads on May 17th, 1935, the date of publication was August 2nd, 1935.

12. The restrictions within a standard width do not apply to any permanent excavation or works necessary in connexion with drainage for agricultural purposes or to any works necessary for the renewal, enlargement or maintenance of any sewer, drain, electric line, pipe, duct or other apparatus constructed in or upon the land before the date of the coming into force of the restrictions.

REGISTER FOR NOTICES.

13. A Highway Authority must keep a Register of persons who claim to be owners or occupiers of land lying within 220 ft. of their roads, so that notices of any further restrictions brought into force may be sent to all those on the register.

14. Any owner or occupier of such land may claim to be put on the Register. For this purpose a copy of the standard form supplied by the Highway Authority should be completed. If the Highway Authority do not supply a standard form the following particulars should be given on an ordinary postcard (size 3½ ins. by 5½ ins.) :

(a)	(a) The name of the parish within which the property is situated.
(b)	(b) The classification letter and number of the road if classified ; if the road is not classified, give the name as shown on the street name plates or on the 6 in. Ordnance Survey map. (If none of these can be given, give the names of the nearest towns or villages which the road connects or other sufficient description to enable the road to be identified in the 6 in. Ordnance map.)
(c)	(c) Name and address of the person to whom any notices are to be sent. (In BLOCK CAPITALS.)
(d)	(d) Date on which the card is sent to the Council.

15. The right half of the front of the card should be addressed to "The Clerk, Council Offices, " and in the left half of the front should be written "Please insert particulars as overleaf in your Register for Notices (R.R.D.A. Sec. 5) ".

16. If more than one road is concerned, a separate card will be required for each, and the cards should be numbered (1), (2), (3) . . . in brackets immediately after the date on the back.

Where a number of cards are sent in on behalf of one owner or occupier, they should be sent with a covering letter on these lines :

> "The Clerk to the Council is requested to incorporate in the Register maintained in accordance with the provisions of Section 5 of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935, the particulars set out on the enclosed cards numbered (1) to ( ) and bearing date on behalf of parties claiming to have an estate or interest in lands lying within 220 ft. of parts of the roads therein mentioned ".

An acknowledgment of the receipt of these requests should be received from the Council.

THE ROAD STANDARD WIDTHS REGULATIONS, 1936, DATED FEBRUARY 29TH, 1936, MADE BY THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT.

The Minister of Transport in exercise of the powers vested in him under or by virtue of section 1 of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a), and of all other powers in that behalf vested in him hereby makes the following regulations:

1. These Regulations may be cited as the Road Standard Widths Regulations, 1936, and shall come into force on the first day of March, 1936.

2. The highway authority may, by resolution, adopt as a standard width as respects any part of a road for the construction or improvement of which an embankment or a cutting is required, any width greater than 160 feet, and not exceeding 440 feet, being a multiple of 20 feet.

Provided that the standard width adopted shall not be greater than the standard width necessary in order to make provision for the cutting or embankment at its greatest width, and provided also that no standard width as herein prescribed shall be adopted as respects any part of a road where the necessary provision for the cutting or embankment does not require the adoption of a standard width in excess of 160 feet.

Given under the Seal of the Minister of Transport this twenty-ninth day of February nineteen hundred and thirty-six.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1935 (b).

SECTION I.—STANDARD WIDTHS FOR ROADS.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Transport to refer to Circular No. 428 (Roads) dated August 15th, 1935 (c), dealing with the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, and the far-reaching new powers conferred thereby on highway authorities. That circular promised a further communication on the lay-out of roads appropriate to the standard widths prescribed by the First Schedule to the Act. In circulating this further information the Minister has taken the opportunity to deal more fully with certain points arising in connection with the adoption of standard widths.

2. Determining a Standard Width.—Section 1 of the Act for the first time enables the roads of the country to be planned on principles of uniformity related to the present and future requirements of traffic. To secure that the object is not frustrated, the section gives power of control over land which will ultimately be required for the construction of a proposed new road or the improvement of an existing road, and over the construction of new means of access, and makes it possible to prevent anything being done which might seriously jeopardise the future. The Council should look well ahead when considering for submission to the Minister, the appropriate standard widths for their roads. The rate of increase of traffic ascertained by comparing the figures disclosed by the census of 1935 with those obtained on previous occasions will obviously serve as a useful indication in estimating future requirements.

3. The first step towards determining the appropriate standard width for any road is to settle the type of lay-out, and the appropriate widths of the various components of the lay-out, which will be required to meet the prospective demands of vehicular, cycle, pedestrian and other classes of traffic, with due regard to the growing need in the interests of public safety for the segregation of the different classes of traffic (e.g. motor vehicles, pedal cyclists, pedestrians) and of vehicular traffic moving in opposite directions.

4. The lay-out of roads in relation to standard widths has been considered by an ad hoc Committee appointed by the Minister, consisting of members of the Experimental Work on Highways (Technical) Committee with the addition of representatives of the County Surveyors Society and of the Institute of Municipal and County Engineers. After giving careful consideration to the Committee's recommendations Mr. Hore-Belisha has reached the following conclusions:

(a) The unit width for each lane of traffic should be 10 feet. In a road, the carriageway of which comprises not more than two traffic lanes but is likely to carry a large proportion of industrial vehicles of maximum dimensions, the unit width should generally be increased to 11 feet.

(b) Where an existing road carries, or a proposed road is expected to carry, 400 vehicles at the peak hour, dual carriageway will be desirable. In any case where more than two traffic lanes may be necessary, dual carriageways should, where practicable, be provided in preference to widening the single carriageways. Dual carriageways will often be justified solely on grounds of public safety. (In calculating the total number of vehicles, two pedal cycles may be regarded as equivalent to one vehicle.)

(c) The standard widths adopted should provide for such future widening of the carriageways, together with cycle tracks and footpaths, as may become necessary. For this purpose there should be ample central reservations, margins, and verges. Dual carriageways should be separated by a central reservation of the maximum width consistent with the lay-out of the road.

(d) Separate cycle tracks will often be justified solely on the grounds of public safety. Where the construction of cycle tracks will avoid the necessity for widening an existing carriageway, their provision may be justified on grounds of economy alone. The track should normally be 6 feet wide, but where the traffic warrants additional widths should be provided by units of 3 feet. Where practicable each track should be separated by verges from the carriageway and footpath. Should it not be practicable in the case of an existing road in a built-up area to obtain sufficient space for verges, the cycle track may be separated from the carriageway and footpath by kerbs.

5. The next step is to determine the appropriate standard width required to accommodate the proposed lay-out. The Minister, after considering the report of the Committee mentioned in the preceding paragraph, takes the view that the following minimum standard widths would be appropriate in ordinary circumstances:

Proposed lay-out.	Minimum Standard Width to be adopted. ft.
Single carriageway not exceeding 30 feet, with footpaths	60
Single carriageway not exceeding 30 feet, with footpaths and cycle tracks.	80
Dual carriageways (each of two traffic lanes), with footpaths but no cycle tracks.	80
Dual carriageways (each of two traffic lanes), with footpaths and cycle tracks.	100
Dual carriageways (each exceeding two traffic lanes), with footpaths but no cycle tracks.	100
Dual carriageways (each exceeding two traffic lanes), with footpaths and cycle tracks.	120
Where further provision is required, for wider cycle tracks, additional width of verges for improved visibility or equestrian traffic, greater space for services or improved amenities.	140

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

The above standard widths have regard to the necessity for ensuring that the road when completed shall possess a proper degree of amenity in the shape of grass margins and space for trees, shrubs, etc., and shall not consist merely of paved strips.

6. Where it is apparent that a section of the road as ultimately to be developed will be on an embankment or in a cutting the standard width for the section should be increased by one or more 20 feet units to embrace the sites of the slopes. It may be convenient to refer to this as the "extended standard width" as distinguished from the ordinary "standard width" required for the particular type of lay-out selected.

7. The greatest standard width prescribed by the Act is 160 feet but under section 1 (2) the Minister has made regulations prescribing additional widths up to 440 feet (see Appendix 1). The regulations incorporate the statutory conditions that a standard width in excess of 160 feet may be adopted only so far as may be necessary for making provision for any embankment or cutting required for the road. The Minister will not therefore be able to approve of the adoption of a standard width in excess of 160 feet save where it would be impracticable to provide for the proposed lay-out together with the embankments or cuttings within the limits of any of the standard widths specified in the First Schedule to the Act.

8. Similarly, where it will be necessary to make provision for improvements at road junctions involving an increase in the effective width of the road at these points, an extended standard width should be adopted, not only for the principal road but also for a sufficient distance along the other road or roads forming the junction with the principal road. It should, however, be borne in mind that the maximum standard width available for this purpose is 160 feet. Safeguarding to a greater depth than 160 feet (e.g. for roundabouts) can be effected by the exercise of control under section 2 of the Act and, in the event of claims for compensation arising and being met by notice served under section 9 (1) (b) of the Act, approved expenditure on the acquisition of land for the highway will be eligible for grant from the Road Fund.

9. There may be circumstances along a section of road (e.g. the existence of continuous development along a section through a town or village) which would make it impracticable, except at unwarrantable expense, to achieve the same ultimate width as that contemplated for the adjoining sections. In such circumstances, a by-pass will often be the best course; and only if a by-pass is not practicable should a smaller standard width be adopted for the section. In cases of this kind the highway authority should nevertheless preserve the main features of the lay-out (e.g. dual carriageways) intended to be constructed within the greater standard widths on the adjoining sections.

10. Measurement of Standard Width.—In view of section 34 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, standard widths should be measured in a straight line on a horizontal plane.

11. Fixing the "Middle of the Road."—A standard width must fall equally on each side of the "middle of the road" but where the road for which a standard width is proposed to be adopted is an existing road, a new middle of the road can be fixed by obtaining the Minister's approval of a plan showing the road as proposed to be improved. (See definition of "middle of the road" in section 24 of the Act.)

12. A new middle of the road should be fixed wherever development of an existing road as contemplated by the proposed standard width will involve widening the road on one side more than the other, e.g. in a case where the construction of a dual carriageway will be effected by putting down a new carriageway alongside the existing one or where, because of a sharp curve or for any other reason, it will be necessary to develop the road on a new alignment.

13. Where it is intended to construct an entirely new road and to adopt a standard width for the purpose of applying section 1 restrictions in relation to the site of the road, the "middle of the road" must first be fixed by obtaining the Minister's approval of the proposed road. (See definitions of "road" and "proposed road" in section 24 of the Act.)

14. The realignment of a winding road will often entail the fixing of a new middle for some sections and the construction of entirely new lengths of road to supersede others. In such a case a single plan entitled "Road(s) as proposed to be improved and proposed road(s)" may be submitted for the Minister's approval under Section 24.

15. Plans submitted for the purpose of fixing the middle of the road need not show the detailed lay-out of the road as proposed to be improved or constructed. It will suffice if the "width" (see following paragraphs) of the road is shown in block colour.

16. Where a standard width is to be based on the present middle of an existing road for the greater part of its length but it is necessary to fix a new middle for one or more sections of the road, the plans to be submitted for the Minister's approval need only show the new section as being of the same width as that of the adjoining sections of the existing road.

17. Where the standard width will be based on a new middle for practically the whole length of the existing road, or where the standard width is to be adopted for a new road, the plans should show the proposed effective standard width of the road (i.e. excluding the provision for slopes of embankments and cuttings or for road junctions), but as explained in paragraph 15 it is not necessary that any detail of the lay-out should be shown.

18. It will facilitate consideration of plans by the Minister and expedite his decision if, before they are formally submitted for his approval, the Divisional Road Engineer is consulted as to the line of the proposed road or road as proposed to be improved and as to the details to be shown on the plans.

19. Adopting a Standard Width.—The highway authority having determined the standard width appropriate to a road or part of a road and obtained, where necessary, the Minister's approval to plans fixing the middle of the road (see preceding paragraphs), will pass a resolution under section 1 (1) of the Act adopting the standard width. Notice of the passing of the resolution must be advertised in two or more newspapers circulating in the locality in which the road is situated and sent to any person whose name and address are, for the time being, entered in the register kept by the authority for the purpose in accordance with the provisions of section 5 of the Act.

20. Unless the standard width is to be based on the middle of the existing road, the new middle of the road must be fixed by securing the Minister's approval of the plans before the resolution to adopt the standard width is passed.

21. The Minister's approval of a proposed Standard Width.—The Minister can approve or disapprove but cannot modify a resolution to adopt a standard width. It follows that if the Minister, after considering objections to a proposed standard width, came to the conclusion that one part of the road should be developed on a slightly different line from that contemplated by the proposed standard width, he could not confine his disapproval to that part but would be bound to withhold approval of the resolution relating to the whole of the road. This would mean that the highway authority would have to commence anew, first submitting a plan for the proposed new middle of the road on the part in question and then repeating all the steps necessary to the adoption of a standard width for this and the remainder of the road.

22. In view of the foregoing it is clearly desirable that the Council when dealing with a road of some length should divide the road into convenient sections and either pass a separate resolution in respect of each section, or so word their resolution that it may properly be regarded as an omnibus resolution covering all the individual sections. If the latter course were adopted it would be competent to the Minister, if he were satisfied that his approval ought not to be given to the proposals as regards certain of the sections, to approve the resolution as regards the remaining sections.

23. Plans.—Should the Minister's approval of the plans of a new road (or of a road as proposed to be improved) be required for the purpose of fixing the "middle of the road" in relation to which a standard width is to be applied, a plan in duplicate on a scale of not less than 1/2,500 (one copy for retention by the Ministry and one for return to the Council), should be submitted with a letter addressed to the Assistant Secretary, Roads Dept., Ministry of Transport, Whitehall Gardens, London, S.W.1. The letter should make formal application for the Minister's approval and should state that the Council are constructing or are proposing to construct or improve the road, as the case may be, in accordance with the plan. The copy which is returned to the Council should be used by them for the purpose of deposit as required by section 1 (1) of the Act, i.e. after the standard width has been marked thereon, and should subsequently be submitted to the Minister with the Council's application for the Minister's approval of the resolution to adopt a standard width. The plan will then be returned to the Council with the Minister's decision and, if the resolution is approved, the plan will serve for deposit by the Council as required by section 6 of the Act.

24. Where it is proposed to adopt a standard width in relation to the existing middle of the road (i.e. where no plan has been submitted for the fixing of a new middle) the application for the Minister's approval should be accompanied by a plan in duplicate on the scale mentioned above. (One copy for the Ministry and one for the Council.) Here again the Council's copy of the plan will serve for deposit as required by section 6 of the Act.

25. Plans on a scale of not less than 1/2,500 are required so that owners and others interested in the lands affected by the adoption of a standard width may be able to see exactly what are the limits of the restrictions, and where a new middle of the road is fixed, determine where the middle of the road is for the purpose of measuring any set-back required by conditions attaching to consents.

26. Amendment of a Standard Width.—Although sub-section (3) of section 1 provides for the amendment of a standard width, landowners and others interested in the development of land will naturally expect a standard width once adopted not to be varied without the strongest reasons, such as a far-reaching alteration in traffic conditions which could not have been foreseen when the original standard width was adopted.

27. Forms of Advertisement and Notice.—Appendix 2 contains forms approved by the Minister for the purpose of the advertisement and notice of the passing of a resolution to adopt a standard width as required by section 1 (1) of the Act and of the Minister's approval of a resolution as required by the Second Schedule to the Act. The first of these forms supersedes the form of advertisement and notice to adopt a standard width contained in the Appendix to Circular No. 428 (Roads).

28. Application for Minister's Approval of Resolution.—Every application for the Minister's approval of a resolution adopting a standard width should be made by letter addressed to the Assistant Secretary, Roads Dept., Ministry of Transport, Whitehall Gardens, London, S.W.1, and should be accompanied by:

(a) A certified copy of the resolution,

(b) A plan showing the road referred to and the standard width or widths adopted (the plan should be submitted in duplicate save where it has previously been approved by the Minister for the purposes of the Act—see paragraph 23—in which event the approved copy only need be submitted),

(c) Copies of the newspapers in which notice of the passing of the resolution was advertised, and

(d) A certificate that the provisions of section 1 of the Act as regards the service of notice on registered landowners have been complied with.

29. Exercise of control.—When dealing with applications for consent to building, permanent excavation or other works within a standard width the Council will wish to have the following, among other, considerations in mind—

(i) The extent to which the works are likely—

(a) to interfere with the improvement or construction of the road, as contemplated by the standard width, or

(b) to enhance the value of the land which will ultimately be required for the road.

(ii) Whether it would be cheaper—

(a) to refuse consent or attach conditions to the consent and pay such compensation as the refusal or conditions may involve, or

(b) to give consent and pay, when the time comes for acquisition, for such enhancement, if any, in the value of the land as may have resulted from the work carried out under the consent, or

(c) to purchase the land forthwith.

As to (i), where the effective standard width has been increased by a 20 feet unit in order to accommodate a slope of an embankment or cutting that will not be more than say, 10 feet wide, the purpose of section 1 would in no way be defeated by any consent to works outside the area which will actually be required for the slope.

As to (ii), the time factor will generally determine the decision. If the land will be required for the road in the near future the Council may deem it necessary to refuse consent to everything but works of a purely temporary character and to consider the immediate purchase of the land should substantial compensation be payable as the result of the refusal of consent. On the other hand if there is likely to be a lapse of several years before the land is wanted for the road the Council may be disposed to be less rigid, especially if the owner, in consideration of the consent, is prepared to agree that he will claim no compensation in respect of the buildings provided the land is not taken for incorporation in the road until after an agreed period of years.

30. Applications for consent to new means of access will give rise to different considerations and may prove more difficult to deal with, especially in the case of land, adjacent to a classified road, which was sold before August 2nd, 1935, as a frontage strip (see section 9 (4) (c) of the Act); but Mr. Hore-Belisha trusts that in the interests of public safety every endeavour will be made, by the construction of service roads or otherwise, to limit the number and prescribe the sites of new means of access to the road. Where service roads are to be constructed parallel to the road they should where practicable be sited on land outside the standard width so as not to interfere with the development of the road for general traffic purposes.

31. A highway authority which is desirous of preventing ribbon development on any road existing before restrictions came into force will deem it wise to take all possible steps to discourage the sale of frontage strips or building plots along that road. The highway authority may agree with the town planning authority, or, if there is no planning scheme in operation or in course of preparation, determine themselves, the number and position of the new street entrances to be permitted. Given a reasonable number of new street entrances landowners will be encouraged to think of development based on the new streets rather than of ribbon development along the traffic roads. It is, of course, desirable that the highway authority's policy in this matter should be made known as soon as possible to landowners and others concerned. Attention is drawn to the provisions of section 9 (4) (c) of the Act in which the arbitrator is directed that if a piece of land in respect of which compensation is claimed "has since the date on which the restrictions came into force become or ceased to be separate from other land, the amount of compensation shall not be enhanced by reason of its having so become or ceased." Highway authorities will appreciate the importance of this provision as a measure for preventing the creation of special values by the sale of frontages.

32. In cases where new frontages will be created by the widening or construction of a road on land acquired by a highway authority after August 2nd, 1935, the authority will incur no liability by the refusal of access (see section 9 (3)) provided that the frontage lands are not part of lands which were adjacent to the road before it was widened, or, in the case of a new road, to a road incorporated in the new road. It follows that if they decide to limit the number of new street entrances and prohibit access to the road along the intervening frontages, they will incur no liability by so doing.

33. Selection of Roads for the Adoption of Standard Widths.—It is clear that some time must elapse before the surveys and other work preliminary to the adoption of standard widths can be completed even for the more important roads. I am, therefore, to suggest that priority of consideration should be given to:

(b) proposed new roads, or roads proposed to be widened, in respect of which an application for grant has been, or is about to be, submitted to the Minister.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(c) roads serving areas which are zoned for building development in planning schemes, particularly where the schemes are in an advanced stage of preparation.

For the purposes of the Act, the expression "road" includes any part of a road, and I am to suggest that so soon as the Council have determined the effective standard width for any road, they should pass a resolution adopting that width as the standard width for all sections of the road, the future development of which will be based on the existing middle of the road and will not require a cutting or embankment. The remaining sections of the road can then be dealt with as and when the necessary surveys required for fixing the new middle of the road or determining the extended standard widths necessary for accommodating the slope of the cuttings or embankments, as the case may be, are completed.

34. I am further to suggest for the consideration of the Council that they may find it desirable in order to expedite the adoption of standard widths to delegate to a committee their powers to pass the necessary resolutions. The Minister is advised that in England and Wales such delegation would be competent under the provisions of section 85 of the Local Government Act, 1933, and in Scotland under section 73 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, or section 13 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, or section 74 of the Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900.

35. Co-operation with Town Planning Authorities.—Finally I am to draw attention to section 7 (2) of the Act which requires that with a view to securing that the exercise of their powers as to the giving of consents under sections 1 or 2 shall be co-ordinated with the exercise by planning authorities of their powers in relation to planning schemes, the highway authority shall from time to time consult with any planning authorities concerned. The Minister attaches importance to this provision, and hopes that should there be any planning scheme or schemes in operation or in course of preparation in their area, the Council will make every effort to co-ordinate their activities under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act with those of the planning authorities.

36. It is essential that the planning authority should be informed as quickly as possible of standard widths proposed to be adopted for roads in the area covered by the planning scheme, as this may have considerable bearing upon the planning of the lands adjacent to the roads.

37. The highway authority should bring the planning authority into consultation upon the important matter of access to the roads, as the proposals of the highway authority will require careful consideration from the planning aspect. Provisions in a planning scheme limiting the number and prescribing the sites of new street entrances should prove of great assistance to highway authorities in the exercise of control over access.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
CYRIL HURCOMB,
Secretary.

The Clerk of the Council.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1935.

ACQUISITION OF LAND.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Transport to bring to the notice of your Council the provisions of Sections 13, 14 and 15 of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a), dealing with the acquisition of land and rights by a highway authority for road purposes.

2. Powers.—Under sub-section (1) of Section 13 highway authorities are authorised to acquire land within 220 yards from the middle of any road the acquisition of which is in their opinion necessary for the purposes of:

(a) the construction or improvement of the road, or

3. If land for these purposes cannot be obtained by agreement on terms which are in the opinion of the highway authority reasonable the authority may be authorised to purchase the land compulsorily by means of a Compulsory Purchase Order.

4. In addition highway authorities are authorised by sub-section (2) of Section 13 to acquire by agreement only any land in the neighbourhood of any road being land which they consider it desirable to acquire for the purpose of preserving the amenities of the locality in which the road is situated (including the purpose of preventing the erection of buildings detrimental to the view from the road). It will be noted that where land is being acquired by agreement under this sub-section for the purpose of preventing the erection of buildings there is no limit to the distance from the middle of the road within which the land may be purchased. It is only where land for this purpose is purchased compulsorily under sub-section (1) that the limit of 220 yards from the middle of the road applies.

5. The expression " Road " is defined in Section 24 of the Act as including any proposed road. " Proposed road " is defined as meaning land upon which, in accordance with plans approved by the Minister, a highway authority are for the time being constructing or intending to construct a highway or part of a highway shown in the plans which will be repairable by the inhabitants at large. From this it follows that before land can be acquired under Section 13 either for the purposes of the construction of a road or for other purposes referred to in Section 13 relating to a new road, plans of the proposed road must first have been approved by the Minister. Information regarding the submission of plans for approval is given in Circular No. 454 (Roads).

6. Procedure for compulsory purchase.—The procedure to be followed in connection with the making of a Compulsory Purchase Order is given in detail in Section 161 of the Local Government Act, 1933, and should be carefully followed by the highway authority. In particular it should be noted that all references to the " Minister " in Section 161 should be read as meaning the Minister of Transport.

7. Regulations (S.R. & O., 389) (a) have been made by the Minister prescribing forms of Orders and Notices and a copy of the Regulations is enclosed with this Circular. While it has not been considered necessary to require specifically in the First Schedule and the First and Third Schedules to the Forms (Nos. 1 and 4) of Order that the " quantity " of land shall be stated, it will be open to the highway authority to insert this information, if readily available, as part of the " description " and there may be cases in which a notification that only a few yards are concerned will save trouble to all parties.

8. The Minister is not required to prescribe the form of notice of the making of a Compulsory Purchase Order for publication in local newspapers but for the guidance of highway authorities a form is given in Appendix 1.

9. The manner in which any notice required to be served on any person is to be served is set out in Section 22 of the Act of 1935.

10. An Order should be made by the highway authority and, after the notices referred to in sub-section (3) of Section 161 of the Act of 1933 have been published and served, submitted to the Minister for confirmation. If objections are duly made and not withdrawn a public inquiry must be held before the Minister confirms the Order, unless the Minister is satisfied that every such objection relates exclusively to matters which can be dealt with by the tribunal by whom the compensation is to be assessed.

11. When submitting an Order for confirmation, the highway authority should at the same time forward to the Minister:

(a) a certified copy of the Council's resolution authorising the making of the Order;

(b) three additional copies of the Order;

(c) a duplicate of the sealed map, referred to in the Order;

(d) a copy of the newspaper or newspapers in which the notice of the making of the Order was published;

(e) a copy of the notice served on the owners, lessees and occupiers; and

(f) a certificate by the Clerk of the authority to the effect that the procedure laid down by sub-section (3) of Section 161 of the Act of 1933 has been complied with.

12. The Order becomes operative at the date on which notice of its confirmation is published in a local newspaper.

13. By means of the special provisions contained in sub-section (5) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935, entry may be made on the land authorised to be purchased compulsorily by giving to the owner and occupier not less than 14 days notice at any time after notice to treat has been served. This is similar in effect to the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 2 of the Public Works Facilities Act, 1930. Highway Authorities will note that in the form of Compulsory Purchase Order (paragraph 4 (1) of Form 1 and paragraph 6 (1) of Form No. 4 in the Schedule to the Regulations) it is provided that Section 85 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (a), shall have effect with certain modifications. Authorities will appreciate that these paragraphs are rendered necessary by reason of the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 161 and the Sixth Schedule of the Act of 1933 (b). If, however, entry is made on land in pursuance of the powers conferred by sub-section (5) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935 compliance with Section 85 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, will not be necessary.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

14. The validity of a Compulsory Purchase Order may be questioned by means of an application to the High Court by any person aggrieved within two months after the Order comes into operation (Local Government Act, 1933, Section 162).

15. Restrictions on compulsory acquisition.—Under Section 174 of the Act of 1933, where a Compulsory Purchase Order includes land forming part of a common, open space or allotment as defined in that Section the Order shall be provisional only and have no effect unless and until confirmed by Parliament. But this does not apply where the Order provides for giving in exchange for such land, other land not being less in area, certified by the Minister, after consultation with the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, to be equally advantageous to the persons, if any, entitled to commonable or other rights and to the public.

16. In the form of Compulsory Purchase Order printed as Form No. 1 of the Schedule to the Regulations, paragraphs 6 and 7 are included to deal with a case where it is decided to provide in a Compulsory Purchase Order for the acquisition of land forming part of a common, open space or allotment and for other land to be given in exchange for such land, and paragraph 9 is included to meet the case where common etc. land is to be acquired and no land given in exchange. These paragraphs are to be omitted where not appropriate as indicated by the footnotes to the Form.

17. Section 175 of the Act of 1933 which applies, contains the usual reservation with regard to land in the neighbourhood of Royal Palaces or Parks. The prescribed distance is given in Article 4 of the Regulations. Section 179 (a) of the same Act prohibits the compulsory acquisition by means of a Compulsory Purchase Order of land which is the site of an ancient monument or other object of archaeological interest.

18. Under paragraph (a) of sub-section (3) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935, the compulsory acquisition of certain classes of land such as private parks or gardens is prohibited except where that land is required for the purposes of the construction or improvement of a road.

19. Sub-section (6) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935 prohibits the compulsory acquisition of land belonging to a local authority (including any drainage board) or which has been acquired by any statutory undertakers (as defined in Section 24 of that Act) for the purposes of their undertaking.

20. Compensation.—Highway authorities will note that in addition to the modifications made by the Act of 1933 (see sub-section (2) of Section 161 of and the Sixth Schedule to that Act), the Lands Clauses Acts and the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, as incorporated in a Compulsory Purchase Order are also modified by the directions to the arbitrator contained in paragraphs (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935.

21. Highway authorities will also note that special provisions dealing with the payment of compensation for land which is subject to restrictions under Section 1 or Section 2 of the Act of 1935, are contained in Section 15 of that Act. Where such land is acquired by means of an Order under the Act of 1935 or any other Act if compensation has not been paid in respect of injurious affection due to the restrictions, then compensation for the acquisition of the land is to be assessed as if restrictions were not in force.

22. Provisions relating to land acquired.—Under paragraph (b) of sub-section (3) of Section 13 of the Act of 1935 highway authorities are required to furnish to the Minister in an approved form sufficient particulars of the purposes for which any land is acquired under the Section and of the manner in which it is intended to be used for those purposes.

23. If land is acquired by means of a Compulsory Purchase Order the necessary particulars are to be given in the Order (see paragrapy 2 of Form No. 1 and paragraph 4 of Form No. 4 of the Schedule to the Regulations) and no other form giving these particulars is required. Where, however, land is acquired by agreement under the powers conferred by the Section the particulars should be furnished to the Minister by means of the approved form which is set out in Appendix 2 to this Circular.

24. Paragraph (c) of sub-section (3) of Section 13 provides that a highway authority shall not have power to use in any manner other than that specified in the particulars furnished to the Minister or to let, sell or exchange any land which has been acquired for the purpose of preventing the erection of buildings detrimental to the view from a road or for the purpose of preserving the amenities of the locality unless the authority are authorised to do so by a Provisional Order made by the Minister of Health and confirmed by Parliament. The highway authority may, however, be authorised by means of an Order which does not require to be confirmed by Parliament to let such land for a term not exceeding seven years for purposes which in the opinion of the Minister of Health are consistent with the preservation of the amenities of the locality.

25. Sub-section (4) of Section 13 extends the powers of highway authorities under Section 1 of the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 (which relates to the planting of trees and shrubs and the laying out of grass margins), to land acquired under Section 13 notwithstanding that the land does not form part of a highway.

26. Compulsory Acquisition of Rights.—As already stated, land which is the property of any local authority (including any drainage board) or which has been acquired by statutory undertakers for the purposes of their undertaking may not be acquired compulsorily but Section 14 provides that a Compulsory Purchase Order may authorise a highway authority to acquire compulsorily a right upon, under or over any such land if the acquisition is

(a) for the purposes of the construction of any bridge (not including the reconstruction or alteration of an existing bridge) upon, under or over such land or of the approaches to any such bridge ; or

It will be noted that purpose (a) is limited to the construction of new bridges. Highway authorities already have powers in connection with existing bridges over statutory undertakings under the Bridges Act, 1929.

27. Appropriate forms for use in connection with the compulsory acquisition of rights (with or without the acquisition of land in the same Order) are contained in the Schedule to the Regulations.

28. Conditions.—A Compulsory Purchase Order for the acquisition of any such right must be made subject to such conditions as the Minister considers necessary for securing that unreasonable interference with the functions and future development of the local authority or statutory undertakers shall be avoided and must provide for the bridge and approaches or the drainage system to be constructed and maintained, except so far as may be otherwise agreed, at the expense of the highway authority. Where, however, a right is acquired for the purpose of substituting a bridge for any level crossing over a railway the expenses of construction and maintenance are to be apportioned as may be agreed between the parties or failing agreement settled by arbitration. The provisions of Sections 6 and 7 of the Bridges Act, 1929, as set out with modifications in the Fourth Schedule to the Act of 1935 apply to the apportionment of cost and arbitration.

29. It will also be observed that under sub-section (3) of Section 14 any additional expense which in consequence of the construction of a bridge or approaches or of a drainage system, may be incurred by the local authority or statutory undertakers in connection with the subsequent widening or alteration of any railway, canal or other works or apparatus belonging to them upon land vested in them before the confirmation of the Order shall be defrayed by the highway authority. Any question whether such additional expense has been so incurred or as to the amount, in default of agreement, is to be determined by arbitration.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

30. Where a right upon, under or over land is acquired for the purpose of any system of road drainage the Order must be made subject to such conditions as the Minister considers necessary for securing that no road shall be drained into any watercourse under the control of a Drainage Board without the consent of that Board or into any reservoir, river, canal or other works belonging to or under the jurisdiction of any local authority or statutory undertakers without their consent.

31. Savings.—Following the precedent of Section 11 of the Bridges Act, 1929, the special position of the Manchester Ship Canal has been recognised and no right may be acquired compulsorily in under or over any land for the purposes of the construction of a bridge under or over the Manchester Ship Canal.

32. "Claimed" County Roads.—Section 18 of the Act of 1935 provides that in relation to any road as respects which the functions of maintenance and repair are under Section 32 of the Local Government Act, 1929, for the time being exercisable by the council of a borough or urban district, the functions conferred by the Act of 1935 on highway authorities shall be exercised by that council and not by the county council. In the case of a "claimed" road the borough or urban district council as the case may be is therefore the appropriate authority to exercise powers of acquisition and to take conveyance of any land required for the improvement of such road.

33. "Delegated" roads.—The Minister is advised that the delegation by the county council to a district council pursuant to Section 35 of the Act of 1929 does not include the delegation of any of the county council's functions under the Act of 1935. It is considered therefore that the county council are the proper authority to exercise in relation to a "delegated" road, the powers of acquisition of land required for any of the purposes referred to in Section 13 of the Act of 1935.

34. Specimen Forms.—Specimen forms of Notice to Treat, Form of Claim and Notice of Intention to Enter, are given in Appendix 3.

35. Appointment of Official Arbitrator.—Applications for the appointment of an official arbitrator under the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, or for information in connection with such appointments should be addressed to the Secretary, Reference Committee for England and Wales, Law Courts, London, W.C.2.

36. Arbitration without prior Compulsory Powers.—It is understood that the Reference Committee and the official arbitrators are prepared to accept voluntary references for the assessment of compensation when the acquiring authority is either a Government Department or a local authority and that application may be made in the usual way to the Reference Committee for the appointment of an arbitrator in such cases. This facility is of use where the only dispute between the owner or other person who has an interest in the land and the acquiring authority is the amount of compensation to be paid. It should be agreed between the parties that the reference to the arbitrator is to be made in all respects as if a notice to treat had been served in pursuance of a compulsory purchase order duly made and confirmed under Section 13 of the Act of 1935.

The Committee will, however, require that the procedure in these voluntary references shall, as far as possible, be regulated by the rules governing official references, and that the arbitrators shall be paid on the scale approved for official references.

37. Crown Lands.—Compulsory purchase powers cannot be exercised in respect of any estate or interest held by the Crown, or by a Government Department.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

CYRIL HURCOMB,

Secretary.

The Clerk of the Council.

CIRCULAR 1750.

Local Authorities and Joint Town and Country Planning Committees (England and Wales).

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
WHITEHALL, S.W.1.
15th December, 1938.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT, 1932.

Control of Premature or Unsightly Development in the Country and on the Sea Coast.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to draw the attention of your Authority to the report on the Preservation of the Countryside recently made to him by his Advisory Committee on Town and Country Planning.* The Minister hopes that this report will be carefully studied by all members and officers of Local Authorities who are concerned with planning, and in particular commends to the attention of Authorities responsible for rural planning the observations of the Committee on the destruction of rural amenities and the suggestions made for safeguarding these amenities more effectively in the future.

In the present Circular the Minister proposes to deal in particular with the question of the zoning of the countryside and the sea coast.

In preparing their planning schemes Authorities appear hitherto to have been proposing to include the rural or agricultural land in their area either in a low density zone (one house to 5 acres, 10 acres, 50 acres), or in a zone in which all development is temporarily restricted pending the coming into operation of a General Development Order. Both these methods may be appropriate in certain circumstances. The low density may be useful in an area whose character is primarily " rural residential," such as many in the south of England, where land is held in large ownerships and owners are willing to agree to fairly drastic restrictions provided that a few houses are allowed. The method of temporary restriction may be suitable where the proper future of the area is uncertain and some small development should probably be permitted in the meanwhile, subject to control of siting. This latter zoning is particularly appropriate to rural areas within the influence of growing towns or villages.

Another method has been suggested for areas where rural land is held in large ownerships. Under this method an agreement would be made between an owner and the local authority for a very restrictive zoning or reservation of the bulk of an estate without compensation, on the understanding that the local authority would not only allow development on the rest of the estate in and around villages but would undertake to provide various public services for the development permitted there as and when required. There seems to be no objection to such an arrangement provided that the amount of compensation likely to be saved would justify the cost of providing the services.

In their Report the Committee have reviewed the methods which have been adopted for rural zoning, but they have come to the conclusion that none of these arrangements is adequate for the genuinely rural or agricultural areas which it is desirable in the general public interest to maintain as such and that a special form of zoning is desirable for such areas. The Committee have indicated generally the form which such zoning might take.

The Minister concurs in their recommendation, and the modifications of the Model Clauses necessary to give effect to the recommendation are set out in Appendix A to this Circular, while Appendix B contains a brief memorandum on the scope and intention of the new zone.

If there is any rural land of this kind within the area of your Authority's Scheme, the Minister trusts that the Authority will lose no time in considering the application to it of the new rural zoning.

Preservation of the Sea Coast.

The sea coast of our Island is a most important factor in the life and recreation of the people and will become even more so with the advent of holidays with pay. Suitable accommodation of various kinds must be provided for the increased numbers of people who may be expected to visit the coast, and unless adequate control over the location and type of building is exercised in time, the very characteristics which make the coast so attractive and valuable in the national life are in danger of being overwhelmed by a tide of misplaced building. By the exercise of proper control it should be possible to direct development on to sites where it will be least damaging to the general amenities and to secure that in design and external appearance, such development as is permitted conforms to standards suitable to its surroundings. Ample land must, of course, be allocated for the extension of existing seaside towns and villages; but the Minister feels no doubt but that a check should with the least possible delay be put on the ribbon development which has already ruined the charm of so many miles of beautiful coast.

Some suggestions for the planning of sea coast areas, including the provision of public access, are given in Appendix C, and the Minister desires me to urge all Authorities who are planning such areas, to give early and careful consideration to these suggestions. So far as zoning is concerned, the suggestions consist in appropriate modifications of the new Rural Zone, the general principles of which, however, are maintained.

It is recognised that these new zones may require modification in the light of experience, or adaptation to particular circumstances; and in these matters and generally in the application of the new zoning the Minister desires me to say that the services of his Officers will always be available to give help and advice to Planning Authorities.

An additional copy of this Circular is forwarded for the use of the Surveyor or Planning Officer of the Authority.

Copies of this Circular have been placed on sale and may be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office at any of the addresses shown below, or through any bookseller.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. C. WRIGLEY,
Director of Housing and Town Planning.

To the Clerk to the Authority.

APPENDIX A.

AMENDMENTS REQUIRED TO THE MODEL CLAUSES TO GIVE EFFECT TO THE NEW RURAL ZONE.

(1) Clause 28 (Interpretation).

Add to definitions :—

" Country dwelling " means a dwelling-house with not less than [ ] acres of land within its curtilage, or a dwelling-house occupied in conjunction with not less than [ ] acres of neighbouring land on which no building operations are to be undertaken other than the erection of buildings ordinarily incidental to the enjoyment of a country dwelling-house ;

"Agriculture" for the purpose of use zone X includes, in addition to the purposes mentioned in Section 12 (3) of the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932, dairy farming, poultry farming and pig farming, and the use of land for osier beds, market gardens, nursery grounds or allotments, for the breeding of horses, dogs and other domestic animals, for bee keeping, and for the rearing and preservation of game and for scientific agricultural research;

"Horticulture" includes the growing of plants, fruit or vegetables under glass and the use of land for scientific horticultural research;

"Pisciculture" includes the breeding and preservation of fish and the use of land for scientific piscicultural research;

"Forestry" includes arboriculture, the cutting, dressing and preparation for sale of wood and the use of land for scientific forestry research;

"Rural industry" means a local industry connected with agriculture, horticulture, pisciculture or forestry, and includes any industry the staple material employed in which is grown or reared, or is the product of some thing or animal grown or reared, on land in the locality.

(2) Clause 30 (Erection and Use of Buildings and Use of Land).

(i) Add to Table C—

Use Zone.	Reference to Map.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used without Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used only with Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may not be erected and used.

X Rural	Edged green with wide-spaced green hatching.	Buildings required in connection with agriculture, horticulture, pisciculture, or forestry. Dwelling-houses for the occupation of persons employed locally in agriculture, horticulture, pisciculture or forestry and out-buildings ordinarily incidental to the enjoyment or use of such dwelling-houses. Buildings other than special industrial buildings required for rural industry, having a floor space (whether on one or more floors or in one or more buildings) not exceeding [ ]* square yards. Buildings required in connection with the winning of minerals.	Buildings other than those specified in column 3.	—

* It is suggested that 500 square yards would ordinarily be suitable.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(ii) Amend the proviso to Sub-clause (4) as follows:

Provided that before consent to the erection and use of a building in use zones [and] X is given or withheld, or conditions are imposed thereon, consideration shall be given—

(a) in use zones to the question whether the use for which the building is intended or designed is likely to cause injury to the amenity of the neighbourhood, including, in the case of an industrial building, injury due to the emission of smoke or fumes or to dust, noise or smell;

(b) in use zone X to the question whether the building is likely to injure the amenity of the neighbourhood, or to involve danger or injury to health by reason of the lack of roads, sewers, water supply or any public services and the provision of the necessary services would be premature or likely to involve excessive expenditure of public money.

(3) Clause 32 (Advertisement and third party appeal).

Amend Sub-clauses (1) and (2) to read—

(1) If an application is made to the Council for their consent to the erection and use of a building or the use of land, whether wholly or partially, for the purposes of a—

Dwelling-house (not being a country dwelling) residential building, place of assembly, shop, business premises, petroleum filling station, industrial building (not being intended or designed for a rural industry), special industrial building, special building in use zone X.

the Council shall, as soon as may be, give notice of their receipt of the application and of their proposal to determine the same by advertisement in some local newspaper circulating in the Area.

The notice shall be at the cost of the applicant, and shall state that any objections, including in the case of applications for consent to a building in use zone X, objections from any local association formed for the purpose of protecting rural amenities, addressed to the Council in writing, within fourteen days after the date of the advertisement will be considered.

(2) The Council shall take into consideration any objections received within the said period of fourteen days and shall notify the persons, if any, from whom objections were received of their decision at the same time as they notify the applicant, and any of the persons aforesaid, including the applicant, if aggrieved by the decision, may appeal.

(4) Clause 35 (Declaration of land units).

Amend Sub-clause (1) by inserting after the word "Area" in line 3, the words "other than land in use zone X."

(5) Clause 39 (Minimum size of plots).

39. Except where under Sub-clause (2) or Sub-clause (4) of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) the Council permit an increase in the number of dwelling-houses which may be erected, no dwelling-house shall have a site of an area less than square yards in density zone or square yards in density zone, and no dwelling-house which may be erected in use zone X without the consent of the Council shall have a site with an area of less than 400 square yards.

Provided that the Council shall have power to allow dwelling-houses to have sites less in area than is required by the foregoing provisions where the buildings are arranged to the satisfaction of the Council.

Note.—The following clauses will apply, or should be applied, to use zone X:

Clause 42 (Space about buildings), 43 (Breaks in buildings), 44 (Height of buildings), 45 (External appearance of buildings), 46 (Siting of buildings), 51 (Maintenance of private gardens, etc.), and 52 (Advertisements).

Words in italics are Model.

APPENDIX B.

NOTE ON RURAL ZONE.

Rural Zone.

This zone should be applied only to land which is genuinely rural in character and is likely to retain that character in the future. While allowing freely every form of rural activity, the zoning enables a fairly strict control to be maintained over all other forms of development. The justification for imposing this control will lie in the adequacy of the provision made for ordinary development in and around existing centres of population.

Around most of these centres an adequate amount of land should be zoned for immediate development—residential, business, and also industrial if there is land suitable for industry, although it is not necessary that every hamlet or aggregation of houses should be so treated. Those centres which have appropriate land available and which already have services capable of economical expansion and those for which services could, if necessary, be economically provided, are normally the nuclei to which it is most desirable to divert further development. The area of land required for immediate development does not amount to a great quantity in the aggregate, but a sufficient area must be allocated to allow a reasonable freedom of choice. Also in order to meet unforeseen needs a reasonably substantial area of land between the zone for immediate development and the Rural Zone might be made subject to a General Development Order restriction without any underlying zoning. In fixing the limits of such an area consideration should be given to the likelihood of services having at some time to be provided at the public expense.

In exercising control in the Rural Zone the Responsible Authority should bear in mind the nature of the zone, which is to provide primarily for the use of the land on normal rural lines with as little interference as possible.

The zone provides for three classes of buildings :—

(a) Those entitled to free entry, namely, buildings for agriculture, horticulture, etc., houses for persons in those occupations, and buildings for the smaller type of rural industry and the winning of minerals.

(b) Buildings permitted only with the consent of the Responsible Authority, the application for consent being advertised and a right of appeal against consent being given to aggrieved third parties, including local bodies interested in preserving amenities.

(c) An intermediate class of buildings requiring the consent of the authority, but without the necessity for advertisement or the third party right of appeal. This intermediate class includes country dwellings, and buildings for rural industries of a more extensive kind.

Houses for workers in rural industries are controlled because it is desirable, if possible, to secure their erection in village centres within reasonable distance of the industry ; but, if this is not practicable, they must clearly be allowed in the Rural Zone. Again, the control of the more extensive rural industries should be used, not to keep the industries out of the zone (to which they are quite appropriate), but to secure the best siting, design and arrangement of the necessary buildings.

It is important, moreover, to recognise that industries of certain types are better placed in rural than in urban surroundings, and indeed sometimes a rural siting may be essential. In such cases the question for the Responsible Authority will be to ensure that in the inception and carrying out of the proposed development proper regard is had to preserving the character and desirable features of the district. The Responsible Authority must nevertheless realise that choice of site and arrangement and design of buildings depend upon industrial considerations and must make allowance for this fact.

Definitions.

"Country dwelling."

It is thought that five acres might be the normal figure for the purposes of this definition. Some local authorities may wish to include "country dwellings" in column 3 of Table C in Clause 30 ; and in that case the acreage of land specified should normally not be less than five.

APPENDIX C.

CONTROL OF DEVELOPMENT ON THE SEA COAST.

The following notes apply primarily to stretches of coast land (including sometimes the borders of rivers and lakes) which do not yet carry a general and substantial building value ; but they may be applicable to any length of coast land which is not fully developed.

As a preliminary it is desirable to obtain sufficient information on the following points :—(a) topography (especially in relation to the configuration of the coast, the area of landscape related to the sea, and the contours as affecting the conspicuousness of any possible building) ; (b) ownership of lands above H.W.M.O.T. to which it may appear desirable to apply special control other than Rural Zoning (see paragraph 3 (1) below ; (c) outstanding natural features or historic buildings or monuments ; (d) existing use of soil (e.g. arable, pasture or heath) ; (e) details of existing footpaths ; (f) erosion or accretion ; (g) points of access to beach ; (h) distance of the coastal road from beach ; (i) commons (noting the nature of the common rights in each case) and existing public open spaces ; (j) restrictions against building development, e.g. National Trust covenants; (k) existing services and areas to which they can be economically extended; (l) present methods of sewage disposal with particular attention to cases where areas of sea are fouled by the discharge of untreated effluent; (m) particulars of any areas which should be protected as Nature Reserves.

Normally the seaward boundary of a coastal scheme should be L.W.M.O.T. H.W.M.O.T. is not likely to be safe in view of the possibility of building on tidal lands and will obviously be inappropriate where accretion is taking place. Care should be taken to see that the L.W.M.O.T. shown on the Resolution Map is substantially the present L.W.M.O.T.

On the landward side the depth to which coastal control should be carried will vary according to the physical features of the coast and of the country adjoining. Much more than the coastal area will often be included in one planning scheme, and the question will arise whether a scheme for the part comprising the coastal area should be proceeded with first, in view of the urgency of securing its protection. A decision on this point must depend on local circumstances, but it is most important that the urgency of protecting the coastal area should not be lost sight of. If division of the scheme is found expedient, it will probably be convenient to include in the coastal scheme the whole of coastal parishes rather than to attempt to define an arbitrary boundary.

The two main considerations are—

(1) the control of development, including prevention of premature or incongruous development, and

(2) the provision of public access.

(1) Control of Development, including prevention of premature or incongruous development.

For the purposes of zoning the various types of coast may be broadly classified as—

(a) high cliff with no dry beach below;

(b) high cliff with dry beach below; and

(c) flat coast, coombe, or low cliff accessible from dry beach.

For (a) the appropriate zoning appears to be the Rural Zone, modified in respect of a substantial strip along the cliff so as to provide control of any form of building except, of course, agricultural within the meaning of Section 12 (3) of the Act.

The main modification will be in Table C in Clause 30 as follows:

Use Zone.	Reference to Map.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used without Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used only with Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may not be erected and used.
X Rural	Edged green with wide-spaced green hatching.	(As in the full Rural Zone.)
XI Coastal	Edged green with wide-spaced green cross hatching.	—	Any buildings.	—

For (b) a zoning similar to (a) might be applied up to the cliff edge, but for the dry beach the rural zoning requires to be further modified so as to allow for development appropriate to the locality. The dry beach and the foreshore down to L.W.M.O.T. might accordingly form a separate zone—Sea-shore Zone, and for the purpose of this zone the principles of the Rural Zone might be followed with these modifications:

Clause 28 (Interpretation) (additional definition).

"Marine industry" means the taking of fish or shell-fish or other marine creatures or marine plants or the making, repairing, storing or letting of boats, and includes any local industry ordinarily carried on near the sea wholly or mainly for the purpose of supplying articles required in connection with those operations or any of them.

CLAUSE 30, TABLE C.

Use Zone.	Reference to Map.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used without Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used only with Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may not be erected and used.
XII Seashore.	Fine hatched alternately green and purple.	Buildings required for the purposes of marine industry.	Other buildings.	—

Though marine industry is allowed free entry, the buildings should be subjected to reasonable control under Model Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings) and Model Clause 46 (Siting of buildings).

For the type of coast (c) it will depend largely on the ease of access from the land to the shore whether the three zones suggested under (b) above should be applied or whether zones X and XII would suffice, the latter zone being carried back over land which would otherwise have been covered by the Coastal Zone.

It will be appreciated that following on the major modifications of the Rural Zone suggested above certain consequential amendments of other clauses relating to the zone will be necessary.

Other zoning control.—In addition to the above-mentioned zonings building on saltings, marshland, and other similar areas might in many cases be permanently prohibited or restricted under Section 19 (1) (c) of the Act.

Permanent Holiday Camps.

Where any of the zones above-mentioned is applied, the erection of a permanent holiday camp will always require consent. There will no doubt be a demand for such camps, even in areas far removed from the regular holiday resorts, and the demand will have to be met within reason. The Planning Authority should consider, therefore, whether it is practicable to specify areas in which on grounds of amenity the erection of camps should be prohibited, leaving them to come elsewhere with consent, or whether the requirement of consent generally is sufficient by itself. If the first method is adopted it will clearly be essential that the land remaining available for camps should be land suitable for the purpose of a camp and should have ready access to the sea.

Interspersed among the stretches of coast to which these notes refer, there will be areas allotted to building development in which the zoning applied will be one under which dwelling-houses have free entry. In such a zone the erection of permanent holiday camps can be controlled under Model Clause 31 (3) (Use of land) and a special clause can be inserted giving control of the extent of the camps as follows:

"(1) The number of buildings to be erected in connection with a permanent holiday camp to which consent is required under Model Clause 31 shall not exceed the number to be decided by the Council upon the application for approval of the person proposing to erect the camp, which application shall be accompanied, in addition to the plans and particulars required by Model Clause 61 (Submission of plans), by information showing the number of persons which the buildings are designed to accommodate.

(2) The Council shall give notice to the applicant of any decision under this Clause, and the applicant, if aggrieved by their decision, may appeal."

An addition will also be needed to Model Clause 28 (Interpretation) providing that Model Clauses 35 to 43 shall not apply to buildings erected in connection with permanent holiday camps.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Tents, Vans and other Moveable Dwellings.

These erections are now controllable under Sections 268 and 269 of the Public Health Act, 1936. Special control under Model Clause 31 (3) (Use of land) should not be attempted, but it may sometimes be desirable to make use of Model Clause 31 (1) and specify certain limited areas as land, the use of which for the erection of moveable dwellings is to be prohibited on the ground of serious detriment to the neighbourhood. For example, much of the land included in the Coastal Zone might be so specified.

Beach and Bathing Huts.

The ribbon development of the coast with this type of building is doing much to destroy amenity, and it is desirable to secure the grouping of huts and the siting of groups or of individual huts in the most inconspicuous places that the type of coast affords.

The Minister is advised that huts of this kind are not "moveable dwellings" under Section 269 of the Public Health Act, 1936, but in order to remove any possible doubt on the matter and to make it clear that these huts are to be controlled by the Scheme, it is suggested that the following addition should be made to the definitions in Model Clause 28 (Interpretation):

"Beach hut" means a building designed for use by persons bathing or intending to bathe in the sea or frequenting any land in use zone(s) [XI] [XII] [XI and XII] for the purpose of rest or recreation, but does not include a dwelling-house or residential building.

The Minister does not think that a third party right of appeal should normally be given in respect of beach huts.

(a) Reservations for Open Spaces and Car Parks.—Besides zoning control there will be need for open spaces, public or private. If possible, a strip of land right along the cliff top or immediately adjoining the beach should be reserved for a public or private open space or partly for one and partly for the other. If complete reservation is not practicable, efforts should be made to secure for the public view points or limited areas of special attractiveness, as, for example, headlands.

There is a growing tendency to bring motor vehicles down on to the sea-shore or as far down the approach to the shore as possible. This practice often goes so far as to interfere with the enjoyment of visitors and to cause congestion and inconvenience; and, where this is likely to occur, it is suggested that land should be reserved for free parking places in situations reasonably convenient for the shore, and such steps as are available should be taken to prevent parking on the beach or its approaches. Where a car park is provided, especially if it is free, the use of the sea-shore and part of the coastal zone for parking might be prohibited under Model Clause 31 (1) (Use of land) subject to a saving for vehicles being used for local business or industry.

In some circumstances permission to establish a private parking place, for the use of which a charge might be made, may be a useful factor in negotiating for public access to coast lands.

(b) Public Walks and rights of way.—In so far as public open spaces adjoining the sea-shore cannot be secured, provision for public access coastwise or to the shore is of great importance. For coastwise access it is desirable to have a right of way for pedestrians all along the coast. Efforts might be made to secure a strip of land covering old coastguard paths where they exist; elsewhere a strip of land should be reserved for a public walk along the coast, and seaward of the strip the land should be kept so far as possible to agricultural or similar uses without buildings. The strip will not necessarily follow every irregularity of the coast. Where, e.g. access to a headland would not be of value as a view point, the strip might well cut across behind it; or where a private open space abuts on the coast, the strip may have to be carried round behind it.

The necessary reservations of land could of course be effected by the highway authority, but it is thought preferable, as amenity is the chief consideration, that the land should be provided by the District Council as a public walk within the meaning of Section 164 of the Public Health Act, 1875. It is only necessary that the land should be made available for a way; it will be quite unnecessary generally speaking to make up a path; given the land the public can be left to make it. In choosing the site of the strip of land the convenience and safety of the general public should be kept in mind.

Ideally, the walk should always be through open ground, over stiles where it passes through fields. It may, however, often be necessary to fence a walk in order to provide protection for animals; and where this is the case the strip of land provided should be of a substantial width, at least 20 or 30 feet, as a narrow fenced footway for any considerable distance is undesirable. Fences should where possible be of local materials.

When the coast is liable to erosion, the walk should be sited at some distance from the cliff edge.

The map notation suggested for a public walk of this kind is alternate red and green colourings.

The following modifications of the Model Clauses will be required :

Model Clause 5 (Reservation of lands).

Table A.

Part IIA.

Coloured alternate red and green and numbered	Public Walks.

Model Clause 6 (Buildings, etc., not to be erected on reserved lands).

Sub-Clause (5).

Model Clause 7 (Acquisition of land).

Add " or for public walks " after "playing fields."

Model Clause (8) (Power to maintain open spaces).

It is assumed that public rights of way will be safeguarded and that every effort will be made to restore rights of way which have been obstructed or have fallen into disuse.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING.

RESTRICTION OF RIBBON DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1935.

Reservation of land for new streets and widenings.

1. Memorandum T. & C.P.10, issued in June, 1936, expressed the joint views of the Ministers of Health and Transport as to the best means of co-ordinating the powers available under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935, with those of the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932. Experience since then has shown that in the main the principles laid down in that memorandum were sound. In detail, however, they have proved to need alteration, and the present memorandum accordingly expresses somewhat modified views which should govern future practice.

2. Under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act highway authorities can, with the approval of the Minister of Transport, adopt a " standard width " of 60 ft. or upwards for any new or existing road for which they are the highway authority, and once the width is approved nobody may build, construct any works, or excavate on the land within the proposed width, or make any access to it, without the consent of the highway authority The approval of a standard width under the Act of 1935 has, therefore, much the same effect as reserving land for a new road or widening under a planning scheme—with the addition of the restriction on individual access—and, as duplication is undesirable, the question arises which of the two powers, those of the Act of 1935 or the scheme, are the more appropriate for the purpose.

3. The Ministers of Health and Transport are agreed that major roads should ordinarily be dealt with under the Act in preference to reservation by planning schemes Major roads include all roads which are, or are intended to be ultimately, of a width of 60 ft. or more, and along which individual access will normally be restricted. There is administrative convenience if, by the use of the Act of 1935, the lines of these roads can be settled in advance of and without delaying schemes, and in addition highway authorities may find the procedure of the Act of 1935 more attractive financially. The Minister of Transport attaches great importance to the restriction of access along major roads, and he is not ordinarily prepared to contribute to the construction of a new road, or to the improvement of an existing one, unless he is satisfied that in appropriate cases the highway authority intend to limit access—access from individual buildings as well as access by streets—to such extent as may be requisite in the interests of traffic and public safety, paying compensation where necessary.

In the case of new roads constructed by the highway authority on land acquired by them after the passing of the Act of 1935, compensation for restriction of access is expressly excluded under Section 9 (3) of the Act. Restrictions along existing roads may, however, result in claims, and to be eligible for Exchequer assistance towards meeting these, a highway authority must have had a standard width approved for the road in question under Section 1 of the Act before agreement has been reached as to the amount of compensation payable or the arbitrator has made his award, as the Minister of Transport's only power to make advances for the purpose is contained in Section 19 (2) and is limited to Section 1 cases

4. Planning authorities should show on the planning map any "standard width" roads approved under the Act of 1935 by means of a special notation. The notation suggested is two solid violet lines showing the limits of the standard width over the appropriate colour for use or density zones. The reference on the map should be "Standard widths approved under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935" No reference should be made to standard widths in the clauses of the scheme except for the two special clauses mentioned below.

As soon as a standard width is approved, the highway authority should furnish the planning authority with sufficient particulars to enable them to show the standard width on the map of any planning scheme in course of preparation. If the planning scheme is already operative, a plan showing the standard width should be attached to the scheme map for information.

5. It is being found in practice that schemes are often ready for submission to the Minister of Health before standard widths in the area have been approved. In general, before the actual approval of a standard width there is no protection for the line of a proposed new road under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act and there is consequently advantage in protecting the line, or approximate line, of any such road under planning powers until the standard width has been approved.

6. Where a widening only is proposed and the road is one to which Section 2 of the Act of 1935 is, or has been made applicable, development can be controlled under that section even if no standard width has yet been approved. Concurrent control of development will, however, be available under the Planning Act and there may be advantage in showing the widening in the planning scheme.

7. Without prejudice to the policy of eventually adopting standard widths, therefore, highway authorities should consider the question of asking planning authorities to reserve land in the scheme for suitable road proposals.

8. It was suggested in the first Memorandum T. & C.P.10 that where a standard width was proposed, but had not been approved, it should be indicated on the planning map by a broken purple line. This method has not proved satisfactory, since it is feared that the notation prejudices land without enabling the owners to defend their position by objecting to the planning scheme or making claims for compensation. It is now thought that road proposals, which are reasonably well settled, though standard widths have not actually been adopted, should be shown by means of reservations in the planning scheme, the highway authority, of course, accepting responsibility for any compensation resulting. Model Clauses 10 and 25 provide machinery for adjusting the provisions of the scheme relating to a new road or widening when a standard width becomes operative in respect of the same road.

9. The reservation of land for existing or proposed minor roads will continue to be the responsibility of the planning authority. These include roads required principally for estate development, or for links of mainly local interest, along which the restriction of individual access is not appropriate; and even where such roads are as wide as the minimum standard width of 60 ft., the machinery of planning should be preferred to the Act, since the scheme will enable the authority, in suitable circumstances, to recover a proportion of the costs of the construction of the road from frontagers.

Restriction of access by streets and building lines.

10. Restriction of access by streets to classified roads or roads declared by the Minister of Transport to be intended to be classified roads will continue to be a matter for the schemes, and planning authorities should ascertain in advance from highway authorities what their requirements are in this respect, notwithstanding that the latter have their own powers under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act. Compensation for limited restrictions can be excluded under planning, and in addition the location of new street entrances is of vital importance to the authority responsible for controlling development behind the main road.

11. Building lines for major roads should take account of the fact that the highway authority will presumably restrict access to the road from individual buildings. This will mean the provision of service roads if building is to be permitted fronting the major road, and where this is contemplated the building line should allow for the extra depth required for the site of the service road. Building lines should not be omitted simply because a proposed new road or road improvement is shown by means of a standard width and not as a scheme reservation.

12. In conclusion, it is emphasised that, though major roads will ultimately be dealt with under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, the necessity of considering them in relation to the general planning of the area is not thereby diminished. The normal procedure should still be for the highway authority to confer with the planning authority as to the general proposals for controlling development, and then to arrange their proposals accordingly.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to state that representations have been made to him with regard to the undesirable situation which may arise in an area where a Planning Scheme is being prepared by a Joint Committee or the County Council if decisions as to interim development are issued by the Interim Development Authority which conflict with the proposals of the Planning Authority.

The provision in the Town and Country Planning (General Interim Development) Order, 1933, under which the Interim Development Authority in respect of any land in regard to which a scheme is being prepared by a County Council or a Joint Committee is, with certain exceptions, the Council of the District in which the land is situate, was devised primarily for the sake of expedition and administrative simplicity and for the convenience of the persons desirous of undertaking development. Proposals for development must necessarily be referred to the Local Authority of the District in compliance with the local byelaws as to new streets and buildings, and it is of manifest advantage that the authorities to whom a developer must apply for the necessary consents to proceed should be as few as possible. It is, however, contemplated that Interim Development Authorities will at all times work in close liaison with the Planning Authority, and it is of the utmost importance that in dealing with proposals for interim development the Interim Development Authorities should be aware of, and pay due regard to, the intentions of the Planning Authority with respect to the planning of the area as a whole.

While the responsibility for the control of interim development rests with the District Council and it is not suggested that their position is merely that of agents for conveying the decisions of the Planning Authority, none the less a serious conflict of views between the two bodies must necessarily create difficulties for the latter. It is indeed obvious that the work of the Planning Authority would be largely wasted if interim decisions out of harmony with the intentions of the proposed scheme were given with any frequency, and in the event of a situation of this kind developing the Minister might well have to consider the question of transferring the control of interim development to the County Council or some other appropriate Authority.

I am Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
H. H. GEORGE,
Assistant Secretary.

The Clerk to the Council.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

PLANNING SCHEME.

PART I.—GENERAL.

1. This Scheme may be cited as the Planning Scheme and is divided into the following Parts:

Part I.	. .	General.
Part II.	. .	Reservation of Lands.
Part III.	. .	Streets and Buildings Lines.
Part IV.	. .	Building Restrictions and Use of Land.
Part V.	. .	General Amenity and Convenience.
Part VI.	. .	Maintenance, Use, Alteration, Extension and Replacement of Existing Buildings and Continuance of Existing Use of Land.
Part VII.	. .	Plans, Approvals, Appeals.
Part VIII.	. .	Miscellaneous.

2.—(1) In this Scheme, except where the context otherwise requires or it is otherwise expressly provided, the following words and expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them:

"the Borough [District]" means the ;

"the Borough [District] Council" means the ;

"the County Council" means the ;

"the Council" means in relation to any provision of this Scheme the authority responsible for enforcing and carrying into effect that provision;

"the Minister" means the Minister of Health;

"the Act" means the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932 (22 & 23 Geo. 5, c. 48);

"the Regulations" means the Regulations made by the Minister under Section 37 of the Act and for the time being in force in the Borough [District];

"the Map" means the map which has been prepared in duplicate, each map being sealed with the official seal of the Minister and with the common seal of the Borough [District] Council, and marked "Map referred to in the Planning Scheme," of which one is deposited in the office of the Minister and the other in the offices of the said Council;

"the Area" means the area described in Clause 3 (Area of Scheme);

"interim development order" includes an order relating to interim development made under any Act repealed by the Act;

"the Public Health Acts" means the Public Health Acts, 1875 to 1932, or any enactments amending or extending those Acts;

"the byelaws and local Acts" means the byelaws, local Acts, orders and regulations for the time being in force in the Area;

"person having control" in relation to any land or building means the person who receives the rack-rent of the land or building, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person, or who would so receive it, if the land or building were let at a rack-rent;

"the material date" means the day of 19 ;

"the erection of a building" includes the structural alteration of, or the making of any addition to, a building;

"street" has the same meaning as in the Public Health Acts, and includes part of a street;

Any reference to land is limited to land in the Area.

(2) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of this Scheme as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

"the Map."—In large areas it will usually be convenient to prepare the Map in sections. The definition should then be amended to read—

"the Map" means the Map, in sections (numbered to consecutively), which has been prepared in duplicate, each of such sections being sealed with the official seal of the Minister and with the common seal of the Council and marked "Map referred to in the Planning Scheme." One duplicate of the Map is deposited in the office of the Minister and the other in the offices of the said Council.

[If the Map of the area has been prepared on a six-inch scale and there are also sheets on a twenty-five inch scale the following should be substituted for the definition given above:—

"the Map" means the plan of the area prepared in duplicate on sheets drawn to a scale of six inches to one mile, sealed with the official seal of the Minister and with the common seal of the , and marked "Map referred to in the ", one duplicate being deposited in the office of the Minister and the other in the offices of the ;

Provided that in relation to such parts of the area as are also shown on the plan prepared in duplicate on sheets drawn to a scale of 1/2500 and similarly sealed, marked and deposited, "the Map" means that plan;]

"person having control."—This expression has the same meaning as "owner" in the Public Health Act, 1875. "Owner" in the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932, means a person, other than a mortgagee not in possession, who is for the time being entitled to dispose of the fee simple of the land, or of any term of years therein granted or agreed to be granted by a lease or agreement the unexpired term whereof exceeds three years, and the expression is used in the same sense in the Model Clauses. The expression "persons interested in the land" is used where still other interests have to be covered.

"the material date."—The date to be inserted is the date on which the resolution took effect or such later date as may be appropriate either generally or for the purposes of any particular provision. Where a Scheme covers more than one resolution area each area can have its own "material date", and in that case the separate areas will be defined on the Map. An alternative is to apply the latest date to the whole area of the Scheme, but as buildings erected before the "material date" rank as "existing buildings", this alternative would be inappropriate if buildings have been erected or commenced between the date when the resolution took effect and the latest date proposed to be applied without permission, and in contravention of the Scheme provisions, and it is desired to deal with them under Section 13 of the Act.

Expressions not defined have the same meaning as in the Act. For convenience definitions in the Act are reproduced in Appendix I to these clauses and might with advantage be similarly printed with the Scheme.

3. The Area to which this Scheme applies shall consist of that part of the Borough [District] which lies within the inner edge of the boundary line coloured dark blue on the Map [excluding the parts edged black and hatched in black lines on the Map].

4.—(1) Except as hereafter in this Clause provided, the Borough [District] Council shall be the authority responsible for enforcing and carrying into effect the provisions of the Scheme.

(2) The County Council shall be the authority responsible for enforcing and carrying into effect the provisions of the Scheme in relation to—

(a) roads chargeable to the county and building lines thereon;

(b) the site and levels of the approaches of a new street not chargeable to the county to a road chargeable thereto;

(c) the imposition under Clause 27 (Prevention of obstruction to view at corners and bends) of restrictions in regard to the height and position of proposed fences or other obstructions to view at the junction of a road or proposed road with a road chargeable to the county.

(3) The whole of the powers and duties of the County Council as responsible authority under the last preceding Sub-clause shall be deemed to have been delegated by the County Council to the Borough [District] Council subject to such conditions as have been agreed between the two Councils or to such other conditions as may from time to time be agreed between them or in default of agreement as the Minister may on the application of either Council determine.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(4) The Borough [District] Council in discharging the powers and duties delegated to them under this Clause shall act as agents for the County Council, and a person entering into any transaction with the Borough [District] Council in relation to any of those powers or duties shall not be bound to inquire whether the Borough [District] Council have authority to enter into the transaction on behalf of the County Council.

(5) The provisions of Section 33 of the Local Government Act, 1929, relating to the repayment by County Councils to District Councils of the expenses of the improvement of roads the maintenance and improvement of which have been claimed by District Councils under that Act shall extend to expenses incurred by the Borough [District] Council under this Scheme or the Act in respect of the widening of, and the fixing of building lines on, any road the maintenance and improvement of which have been so claimed.

(6) The expression "road chargeable to the county" means—

(a) any road for the time being vested in the County Council under the Local Government Act, 1929, or any enactment amending that Act; and

(b) any street or proposed street on land reserved for streets and numbered on the Map.

For an area wholly included in a county borough, this Sub-clause only, omitting the opening seven words, is all that is needed.

In all other cases the whole of this Sub-clause should be included, except that where any road in the area vests in the County Council and there is no delegation of highway functions under the Local Government Act, 1929, the alternative Sub-clause (1) on page 123 [post, p. 4050] should be substituted.

Where there is only partial delegation of highway functions the authority should consider in consultation with the Minister how best to correlate the scheme proposals with the position under the Act of 1929.

For an area wholly included in a rural district where there is no delegation of highway functions the County Council can deal with the matters mentioned in the latter part of alternative Sub-clause (1), in the agreement made under Sub-clause (3), which would enable a variation to be made more readily, and accordingly the alternative Sub-clause should in such an area end with the words "Responsible Authority" in line 9 and "the restriction that with" should be substituted for "the following restrictions—(a) With . . . ."

For an area wholly included in a rural district substitute for the words after "Scheme" the words "in relation to roads and building lines thereon and the imposition of restrictions under Clause 27 (Prevention of obstruction to view at corners and bends)."

Where there is no delegation of highway functions the alternative Sub-clause (3) on page 123 [post, p. 4050] should be substituted.

Should be included only where the area includes a district or part of a district the council of which have claimed their classified roads or are likely to be able to do so in the near future.

If all classified roads have already been claimed and the County Council are not taking responsibility for any new roads under the Scheme, Sub-clauses (2), (3) and (4) should be omitted.

Is not required for an area wholly included in a rural district.

Where Sub-clause (6) is used the numbers to be inserted under (b) should be those of the new streets (excluding widenings) for which the county council are taking responsibility under the Scheme.

In schemes covering the areas of more than one authority, composite forms of Clause 4 and the alternative Sub-clauses are often necessary. If it is desired to consult the Ministry of Health as to the proper drafting of such a composite clause full particulars as to the extent of the delegation, claiming, etc., of highway functions in the areas of each authority should be given.

PART II.—RESERVATION OF LANDS.

5. The several pieces of land specified in column 1 of the following Table are reserved for use for the respective purposes indicated in column 2 of the Table.

TABLE A.

Indication on Map of lands reserved. 1.	Uses for which lands are reserved. 2.
Part I.
Coloured and numbered	New streets and widenings of existing highways which upon the execution by the Council of any necessary street works become repairable by the inhabitants at large.
Part II.
Coloured and numbered	New streets and widenings of existing highways which upon declaration become private streets.
Part III.
Coloured and numbered	Public open spaces.
Part IV.
Coloured and coloured	Private open spaces.

Reservations for purposes other than those indicated in column 2 of the Table (allotments, cemeteries, etc.) should be arranged in successive Parts.

Public Walks.—Land reserved for public walks in the manner suggested in Circular 1750 should be included in a separate Part IIA of the Table.

Green belts, agricultural reservations, etc.—Lands reserved for these or similar purposes, which the authority may not be proposing to acquire at all, or if they do propose to acquire them may not be intending to throw open generally to the public, should be shown in the Table under a separate heading and not as ordinary public open space. The "appointed day" for such reservations will as a rule be the date on which the Scheme comes into operation, and the lands should accordingly be specified in Sub-clause (5) (a) of Clause 6. It will be desirable also to include them in Sub-clause (1) of Clause 7.

See in addition the note to Clause 8.

Private open spaces.—The object of the reservation of land as a private open space is to prohibit its use for building purposes generally, but, subject to that, to allow any use which will not injure the amenity of the locality. The uses specified in sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) of paragraph (1) of Clause 9 are selected as being unlikely to injure amenity. In particular cases it may be desirable to allow private open spaces to be used for other purposes, for example, market gardens or allotments, or a sports ground ordinarily open or intended to be ordinarily open to the public on payment of a charge, and provision is made for expanding the clause, as indicated by the square brackets, to include any such case. It may, however, sometimes be more convenient to provide for cases of this kind by means of an agreement scheduled to the Scheme allowing the particular use.

Clause 9 is open to modification in other respects to meet the facts in a particular Scheme. For example, paragraph (b) would ordinarily be inappropriate in the case of a Scheme relating wholly to built areas.

Proposals to reserve land as private open space should be fully discussed with owners, so that they may be aware of the implications of the reservation. Ordinarily it will not be desirable to reserve land for a private open space except in agreement with the owner, and in some cases it may be desirable to make an agreement under Section 34 of the Act in anticipation of the Scheme.

Cemeteries.—Where land is reserved for cemeteries, Supplementary Clause 7A. (No. 2, Appendix II) should be included in the Scheme. Under the Cemeteries Clauses Act, 1847, as amended by the Burial Act, 1906, a cemetery may not be constructed within a hundred yards of dwelling-houses without the consent of the owners, lessees and occupiers; and if there is any reason to fear that the necessary consents may be withheld so that a part of the proposed cemetery will be sterilised, the authority should consider reserving rather more land than is actually needed. In appropriate circumstances the surplus land can subsequently be sold for development subject to the condition that consent to the cemetery will be forthcoming, and where this is intended the surplus land should be specially hatched on the Map and a Sub-clause added to Clause 6 as follows :—

(7) If the Minister signifies his consent to the sale by the Council, under Clause 69 (Disposal of land), of the part of the land reserved for a cemetery which is hatched ..... on the Map, the provisions of this Clause shall cease to apply to the land so hatched, and the land shall thereafter be deemed to be coloured ..... on the Map.

The blank in the last line should be filled in by reference to the colour of the adjoining use and density zone.

6.—(1) Before the appointed day no person shall, except with the consent of the Council, erect a building, or execute works of a permanent character, on land reserved under this Part of the Scheme, and no person shall, except with the like consent, make any permanent excavation on or near such land, if it would be necessary to remove or alter the building or works or to re-instate the land in order to enable the land to be used for the purpose for which it is reserved.

Sub-clause (1) does not preclude the continuance of the existing use of any reserved land until the appointed day, but the consent of the Council is required to the erection of buildings or the execution of works of a permanent character or to the making of excavations.

(2) After the appointed day no person shall—

(i) erect a building or execute works or make any permanent excavation upon land reserved under this Part of the Scheme, other than buildings or works required for or incidental to the purpose for which the land is reserved ;

(ii) use any land specified in Part IV of the Table in the preceding Clause otherwise than as a private open space, or use any building on such land for any purpose other than that for which it was used before the appointed day except a purpose which is incidental to or required in connection with the private open space.

(3) Save as provided by Sub-clause (1) of this Clause, no person shall, whether before or after the appointed day, spoil or waste land reserved under this Part of the Scheme so as to destroy or impair its use for the purpose for which it is reserved:

Provided that the Council may consent to the deposit on such land of waste materials or refuse before the appointed day.

It would be a breach of this Clause to carry on mining operations which had the result of leaving insufficient support for land reserved for streets and for streets constructed on reserved lands. As this Part of the Scheme carries a right to claim compensation within twelve months of the coming into operation of the Scheme, the unqualified insistence on a right of support may be thought in some areas—particularly in mining areas—to be too expensive. The inclusion of the amendments set out in No. 3, Appendix II, should then be considered ; they provide that the underground working of minerals may be carried on freely, under or near land reserved for streets, and under streets constructed on such land, except where, subject to compensation, the Council serve a notice prohibiting the working.

(4) In giving consent under this Clause the Council may impose conditions with respect to the removal or alteration of the building or works or the re-instatement of the land, or the removal of the waste materials or refuse, or otherwise as they think fit.

(5) For the purposes of this Clause the "appointed day" means—

(a) in the case of land reserved for use as a private open space and numbered , the date on which this Scheme comes into operation ;

(b) in the case of any other land reserved for use as a private open space, such later date as the Council may in any particular case determine, not being less than six months after the date on which they have notified the person having control of the land of their determination ;

(c) in the case of land reserved for use as a street, the date on which the land is declared by the Council under this Scheme to be a street ; and

(d) in the case of land reserved for any other use, the date on which the land is laid out or appropriated by the Council for the use in question.

"the appointed day" in relation to private open spaces should be deferred in cases, such as quarrying, in which it is expedient to permit for a time after the Scheme comes into operation, the continuance of a use which is not in conformity with Clause 9. The private open space reservations which can conveniently become effective on the coming into operation of the Scheme should be specified in paragraph (a) of the Sub-clause.

If land is reserved for public walks the words " or as a public walk and numbered " should be inserted before the comma in paragraph (a).

(6) Nothing in this Clause shall be construed as prohibiting the reasonable fencing of the land.

7.—(1) Land reserved in the foregoing Table for new streets and widenings of existing highways or for public open spaces or playing fields may be purchased by the Council, whether by agreement or compulsorily, under and in accordance with the provisions of Section 25 of the Act.

(2) The reservation of land as a private open space shall not prevent the Council from purchasing the land, or any part thereof, by agreement (but not otherwise) for the purpose of a public open space or playing field.

This Clause should not be extended to authorise the purchase, under Section 25 of the Act, of land reserved, e.g. for allotments or aerodromes, where full powers of purchase exist in the general law but are there subject to a rather different procedure from that contemplated by Section 25.

If land is reserved for public walks the words " or for public walks " should be added after " playing fields " in Sub-clause (1).

8. As soon as any land reserved as a public or private open space or as a playing field has been acquired by the Council, the Council shall have the like powers and duties as if the land had been acquired for the purposes of public walks, parks and pleasure grounds or playing fields under the Public Health Acts.

If land is being reserved for public open space or playing fields, which the Council do not propose to throw open to the public as soon as it is acquired, it should be expressly excepted from the operation of this Clause. See also the note to Clause 5 under the heading of green belts, etc. It is ordinarily inappropriate that the provisions of Clause 8 should be applied to lands reserved for green belt or agricultural purposes, and this is another reason why such lands should not be included under the heading of public open spaces in Table A.

Add " or as a public walk " after " playing field " if similar amendments are made elsewhere.

9. For the purposes of this Part of the Scheme land shall be deemed to be used as a private open space if, and only if, it is used—

[(2) in the case of any of the lands numbered]

(a) as an ornamental garden or pleasure ground or as a private ground for sports, play, rest or recreation, other than a sports or recreation ground ordinarily open or intended to be ordinarily open to the public on payment of a charge; or

(b) as arable, meadow or pasture land, osier land, orchards or nursery grounds, other than land used wholly or principally for the purpose of cultivation under glass, or as a plantation or wood or for the growth of saleable underwood; [and

(2) in the case of any of the lands numbered as ; and

See note on Clause 5.

10.—(1) If at any time after the coming into operation of this Scheme a standard width is, with the approval of the Minister of Transport, adopted for a road under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935, or any enactment amending that Act, and such standard width is intended to take the place of a new street or widening (including any section of a new street or widening) for which land is reserved under Clause 5 (Reservation of lands), or is adopted for the purpose of a route alternative to the new street or widening, the Council may by resolution determine that the provisions of this Part of the Scheme relating to the reservation of lands shall no longer apply to the new street or widening, or the section thereof, and thereupon the said provisions shall cease to apply.

(2) Where the standard width so adopted includes part only of the new street or widening or of the section of the new street or widening which it is intended to replace, or to which it is intended to form an alternative route, so much of the land released from its reservation as is not included in the standard width shall be deemed to be included in the use zone or density zone (if any) which adjoins it, and the provisions of this Scheme shall apply to the land so released accordingly:

Provided that where the released land adjoins more than one zone the released land shall be divided proportionately between the zones.

(3) Where the standard width so adopted includes land other than that included in the whole width of the new street or widening or of the section of the new street or widening it is intended to replace, or to which it is intended to form an alternative route, so much of the land included in the standard width as it not included in the land released from its reservation shall be deemed to be no longer included in any use zone or density zone and the provisions of this Scheme shall cease to apply to the land included in the standard width accordingly.

(4) As soon as may be after making a decision under Sub-clause (1) of this Clause the Council shall cause to be prepared in duplicate a plan showing the land to which the decision applies and the use zone and density zone (if any) in which it or any part of it is deemed to be included, or from which it is deemed to be excluded, as the case may be, and within one month of making the decision they shall inform the person having control of any such land that the reservation has been removed and as to the use zone and density zone (if any) in which the land or any part of it is deemed to be included, or from which it is deemed to be excluded, as the case may be, and they shall further inform him where the plan prepared in accordance with the provisions of this Sub-clause may be inspected.

(5) The duplicate plans prepared under the provisions of the last preceding Sub-clause shall be sealed with the seal of the Council and thereafter one plan shall be attached to the Map and the other shall be forwarded to the Minister.

Where the County Council are the responsible authority for roads and the District Council are responsible for the zoning provisions of the Scheme, it is considered that the plan required by Sub-clause (4) should be prepared by the District Council. In this event the opening lines of Sub-clause (4) will need to be amended as follows:

(4) As soon as may be after making a decision under Sub-clause (1) of this clause the County Council shall notify the District Council of their decision and the District Council shall cause to be prepared in duplicate a plan . . . .

In Sub-clause (5) the word "District" will need to be inserted before the word "Council."

PART III.—STREETS AND BUILDING LINES.

11. In this Part of the Scheme, except where the context otherwise requires or it is otherwise expressly provided, the following words and expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them:

"the Act of 1892" means the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (a), as amended by any subsequent Acts, whether public, local or private, which are in operation in the Area;

"a byelaw street" means a street constructed so as to comply with any enactments, regulations or byelaws in operation in the Area;

"private street" means a street as defined by the Public Health Acts not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large;

"incidental works" means any slopes, approaches, embankments, cuttings, retaining walls, bridges, arches, girders, culverts, drains or other works necessary and incidental to the construction of a street, and includes any works required for fencing the street;

" the cost of a standard street " means—

(i) in relation to a proposed new street or an existing private street widened in accordance with the provisions of the Scheme, the amount which would at the date of the commencement of the works have been the cost of the execution of street works (as defined in Section 27 of the Act), in the course of the construction of the street, if it had been carried out so as to comply with any enactments, byelaws or regulations in operation in the Area ; and as respects matters for which no provision is made in any such enactments, byelaws or regulations, so as to comply with such specification as a highway authority for the Area would at the date of the commencement of the works have required as a condition of declaring a street to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large ; and

(ii) in relation to an existing highway repairable by the inhabitants at large which is widened in accordance with the provisions of this Scheme, such proportion of the amount which would at the commencement of the works have been the cost of the execution of street works (as defined in Section 27 of the Act) on a street the construction of which had been carried out in the manner referred to in the last preceding paragraph, as the width of the added strip bears to the width of a byelaws street. For this purpose the term " added strip " means the extent, if any, by which the existing highway is less in width than a byelaw street ;

" The cost of a standard street."—The definition is appropriate only in areas where byelaws with respect to new streets or corresponding provisions in local Acts are in force. It is expected, however, that byelaws with respect to new streets or corresponding provisions in local Acts will ordinarily be in force in areas in which schemes are made ; and the Minister has intimated that the fact that a scheme is being prepared will be considered prima facie evidence that byelaws should be made.

Clauses 11, 15 and 17 are drafted on the assumption that the Private Street Works Act, 1892, is in operation in the Area. Alternative forms of Clauses 15 and 17 are set out in Appendix II for use where the Public Health Act, 1875, is in operation.

If these alternative forms are used the first definition in Clause 11 should be amended to read :

" the Act of 1875 " means the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by any subsequent Acts, whether public, local or private, which are in operation in the Area

If both Acts are in operation in different parts of the Area or if there are special local Acts the Ministry of Health should be consulted as to the form of these Clauses.

" street works " includes, in addition to the works mentioned in Section 27 of the Act, incidental works and works required for planting a street with grass, trees or shrubs, and erecting guards therefor, or treating it in other suitable manner ;

" the making " of a street means the execution of all necessary street works from the commencement to the final completion of the street.

Streets.

Clauses 12, 13, 14 and 15 provide for the construction by the Responsible Authority, at any time after declaration, of new streets and widenings for which land is reserved by Clause 5, and for the recovery, in proper cases, and subject to the limit of the cost of a standard street, of the cost of construction from owners.

Streets should be included in Part I of the Table if the circumstances are such that it is impossible or unlikely that a charge would become recoverable from frontagers in respect of the works provided for by the Scheme, e.g. the widening of a street which is already of byelaw width, or the construction of a new street on a high embankment, or of a street to which access is to be refused.

12.—(1) The Council may declare any land reserved for new streets and widenings of existing highways in Part I or Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands) to be a street either—

(a) with the consent of the persons interested in the land, including persons having a mortgage or charge on the land ; or

(b) after acquiring the land.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(2) If the land so declared is reserved in Part I of the Table, it shall, upon the Council's executing any necessary street works, become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large.

(3) If the land so declared is reserved in Part II of the Table, it shall, upon the declaration being made, be deemed to have been dedicated to the public and shall become a private street.

13.—(1) The Council shall have power under this Scheme to execute street works upon the land reserved in Part I or Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands) and subject to the provisions of Clause 14 (Land adjoining sites of streets) and Clause 15 (Application of Private Street Works Act, 1892 [Section 150, etc., of the Public Health Act, 1875]), they shall in the exercise of that power have the same rights and be subject to the same liabilities as they would have had or been subject to if the works had been executed under the Public Health Acts.

(2) Not less than twenty-eight days before commencing to execute street works upon any of the land reserved in Part I or Part II of the Table, whether under this Clause or under the Public Health Acts, the Council shall serve on any statutory undertakers whose apparatus is situate in or under any part of such land or is otherwise in such a position that it will or may be affected by the execution of such works, notice in writing of their intention so to commence, with particulars of the proposed works and of the manner in which they are to be executed, together, where necessary, with plans and sections thereof.

(3) Where the removal or alteration of apparatus belonging to statutory undertakers, or the execution of works for the provision of substituted apparatus whether permanent or temporary, is in their opinion reasonably necessary or expedient for the purposes of their undertaking by reason of any proposal to execute street works of which notice is given under the preceding Sub-clause, the undertakers may within fourteen days of receiving the notice serve a counter-notice in writing on the Council, declaring their intention of removing or altering the apparatus, or executing works for the provision of substituted apparatus; and, unless it is agreed between the Council and the undertakers that the Council shall carry out the operations of removal, alteration or substitution, the Council shall give the undertakers reasonable facilities for carrying out the operations at whatever time during the execution of the street works is most convenient for such operations.

(4) In this Clause—

"apparatus" means mains, pipes, wires, tubes, valves, cables, syphons, transformers, standards, poles or other works or apparatus laid down, constructed or used for, or in connection with the carrying, conveying or supplying of water, water for hydraulic power, gas or electricity; and references to the alteration of apparatus include references to diversion and to alterations of position or level.

14.—(1) The council may, after giving not less than three months' notice to the owners and occupiers of any land which adjoins land reserved for a new street or widening of an existing highway and is required for the purpose of executing incidental works, enter upon that land for the purpose of executing the works.

(2) The Council may at any time after giving reasonable notice to the owners and occupiers of the land upon which incidental works have been executed enter upon that land for the purpose of maintaining the works.

(3) Where land which is reserved in Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands) becomes a private street, the Council may declare any adjoining land belonging to them and required for the execution of incidental works to be, and the land shall thereupon become, a part of the private street.

15. If the Council decide to execute street works under the power conferred on them by Sub-clause (1) of Clause 13 (Execution of street works on reserved land) upon any land reserved in Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands) and the land has become a private street by virtue of Clause 12 (Sites of new streets and widenings) the provisions of the Act of 1892 shall in relation to streets or proposed streets which are roads chargeable to the county within the meaning of Clause 4 (Responsible Authorities) apply as though the County Council were an urban authority who had adopted that Act and shall in any case apply subject to the following modifications, as though they were incorporated in this Clause:

(1) The Council shall not be entitled to apportion—

(i) any sum in respect of the execution of street works for the purpose of widening an existing highway of which the width is equal to or greater than the width of a byelaw street; or

(ii) a sum in excess of the cost of a standard street made on the site of the street;

(2) The grounds of objection set out in Section 7 and Section 12 of the Act of 1892 shall be deemed to include the ground that expenses which under this Clause are to be borne by the Council have been provisionally or finally, as the case may be, apportioned against the premises of the objector;

(3) If the land so reserved and becoming a private street in manner aforesaid abuts on and is intended to form the site of a widening of an existing highway, and the existing highway is less in width than a byelaw street, the part of the existing highway upon which the land abuts shall as to its whole width be deemed to be part of the private street;

(4) As soon as the Council have made the street, it shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large;

(5)—(i) No expenses incurred in the execution of street works and apportioned against land or buildings which at the time of apportionment are agricultural land or buildings within the meaning of Section 67 of the Local Government Act, 1929, shall be recoverable until the land or buildings cease to be agricultural land or buildings as aforesaid;

(ii) No expenses incurred in the execution of street works for the purpose of making a new street shall be recoverable in respect of land (whether the site of a building or not) unless and until access is provided for and used by persons or vehicles from that land to the new street;

(iii) No expenses incurred in the execution of street works for the purpose of widening an existing highway repairable by the inhabitants at large and apportioned against any land abutting on that highway shall be recoverable unless after the day of 19 a building has been erected on the land other than an agricultural building within the meaning of the said Section 67 or a building—

(a) begun before the said date; or

(b) erected in pursuance of a contract made before the said date; or

(c) erected within the site of a building existing at that date and ordinarily incidental to the purpose for which that building is used; or

(d) the erection of which is permitted under Clause 57 (Replacement of existing and certain other buildings); and the amount recoverable shall in any case be limited to so much of the apportioned sum as is properly attributable to the land forming the site of the building.

Interest shall not be payable to the Council on any money in respect of a period during which under this Clause the money is irrecoverable.

Where Section 150, etc., of the Public Health Act, 1875, is in operation the alternative form of this Clause on page 125 [post, p. 4052] should be used.

The words in italics are required in a borough or urban district where some of the roads to be widened or constructed under the Scheme as private streets vest in the County Council.

Paragraph (1), in conjunction with the definition of the cost of a standard street in Clause 11, is intended to give effect to the provisions of Section 27 of the Town and Country Planning Act, 1932.

The other paragraphs are necessary because the Clause applies to streets laid out and made on the initiative of the Responsible Authority, which may be constructed in advance of development and to a higher standard than would be required simply for estate development, and extends to a widening by the Responsible Authority of an existing highway to which the Act of 1892 does not apply. The general effect is—

(1) where land reserved for the widening of an existing highway, which is less in width than a byelaw street, becomes on declaration a private street, the highway as widened is deemed to be a private street for its whole width, with the result that—

(a) an apportionment in respect of the widening may be made upon the frontagers on both sides of the road and not merely on the side on which the widening is carried out;

(b) the works as a whole, including any reconstruction of the existing highway which may be necessary, may be carried out under the same powers;

(2) the expenses incurred in the execution of street works (whether the construction of a new street or the widening of an existing highway) may be apportioned upon any land or buildings upon which an apportionment could be made under the general law. The right of the Responsible Authority to recover the amount apportioned is, however, postponed—

(a) if the land or buildings upon which the apportionment is made are agricultural land or buildings within the meaning of Section 67 of the Local Government Act, 1929, until they cease to be agricultural land or buildings;

(b) in the case of a new street, unless and until access to the new street is provided for and used by persons or vehicles from the land subject to the apportionment (whether the site of a building or not);

(c) in the case of a widening of a highway repairable, unless a building (other than an agricultural building, or a building of some other class specified in sub-paragraph (iii) of paragraph (5)) has been erected on the land after the date of the last personal notice of the adoption of the draft Scheme or the date of the second advertisement given, in accordance with Article 13 of the Town and Country Planning Regulations, 1933, whichever is the later. This date should be inserted in the sub-paragraph.

16.—(1) No new street shall be laid out or made so as to enter any of the roads or proposed roads specified in Part I of the Table below.

It is to the advantage of the Council to fix the sites of new street entries as far as possible by the Scheme, and for this purpose to use the form of Clause set out in the main model; but an alternative Clause is given (No. 5, Appendix II) leaving determination of the points of entry to a later date, for use where the Council do not find it practicable to avail themselves of the main Clause.

(2) Save as hereinafter in this Clause provided, no new street shall be laid out or made so as to enter any of the roads or proposed roads specified in Part II or in the first column of Part III of the Table, except on land reserved for streets.

(3) In the case of a road or proposed road specified in the first column of Part III of the Table the Council shall, in addition to any new streets on land reserved for streets, permit in each of the sections of the road or proposed road specified in the second column of the said Part the entry of such number of new streets as is specified in the second column of that Part at such point or points as they may approve.

(4) The Council may permit the entry into a road or proposed road specified in Part II or in the first column of Part III of the Table of a new street which is required to provide temporary access from neighbouring land to the said road or proposed road pending the construction on land reserved for streets, or in a position approved by the Council in accordance with the provisions of the preceding Sub-clause, of a street which will provide permanent access from the said land to the said road or proposed road.

Any street constructed to provide such temporary access is hereby declared to be diverted or stopped up and all public rights therein are declared to cease as from the date on which the street provided permanent access as aforesaid is constructed to the satisfaction of the Council and opened for public traffic.

(5) For the purposes of this Clause a new street does not include a new street not intended for use as a carriageway.

TABLE B.

PART I.

Existing or intended classified roads on which no new street entrances are to be allowed.

PART II.

Existing or intended classified roads on which new street entrances are to be allowed only on land reserved for streets.

PART III.

Existing or intended classified roads on which new street entrances are to be allowed on land reserved for streets and also at points to be approved.

Description of road or intended road. 1.	Section of road and side of road on which one new street entrance is to be approved. 2.

17. Where after the date on which this Scheme comes into operation the Borough [District] Council construct a sewer under land reserved for a street and the construction takes place before the land becomes a private street the Borough [District] Council or the County Council, as the case may be, may, if they propose to execute street works upon the land, include particulars of the sewer in the specification of any street works to be executed by them on the street and the cost of the sewer in the estimate of the probable expenses of such works, and thereupon the Act of 1892, as modified by this Scheme, shall, so far as applicable, apply to those expenses as if they formed part of the estimated expenses of the proposed street works.

The County Council shall pay over to the Borough [District] Council any monies received by them from frontagers in respect of, or properly attributable to, the construction of the sewer, but shall be entitled to deduct any expenses reasonably incurred by them in the recovery of the said monies.

Where Section 150, etc., of the Public Health Act, 1875, is in operation the alternative form of this Clause on page 127 [post, p. 4052] should be used.

Where the Scheme relates wholly to a rural district in which powers in regard to private streets have not been delegated, the words " the Borough [District] Council or " in line 5, and the words " as the case may be " in line 6 should be omitted.

In the case of a Scheme relating wholly to a county borough the reference throughout the Clause should be to " the Council " and the last paragraph of the Clause omitted.

18. Except in relation to streets proposed to be constructed by a highway authority the following provisions shall have effect with respect to new streets proposed to be constructed whether on land reserved for streets or not :—

(1) The laying out or making of any new street shall be subject to the approval of the Council, and a person intending to lay out or make a new street (in this and the next succeeding Clause referred to as " the applicant ") shall before commencing any work apply to the Council for their approval to the laying out or making of the new street, submitting for the purpose plans, sections and specifications in accordance with the provisions of Clause 61 (Submission of plans) (a).

The Responsible Authority may require the street to be of such width and standard of construction as they consider necessary provided that they pay for any additional cost above that of a standard street and do not, unless the Minister expressly approves additional types of street for the purpose, relax the byelaws or local Acts below the standards permitted under the First Schedule to the Scheme.

As regards the plans to be submitted by applicants, and the time within which the Council must deal with them, see Clauses 61 and 62 in Part VII of the Scheme.

(a) The entrance drive to a block of flats has been held to be a street for the purposes of this clause (Cowan v. Hendon Borough Council, [1939] 3 All E.R. 366 ; 103 J. P. 285 ; Digest Supp.).

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(2) On receiving an application the Council shall notify the person having control of any neighbouring land, the development of which is in their opinion likely to be substantially affected by the determination of the site of the proposed street—

(a) that plans and sections have been submitted to them; and

(b) that before approving the plans and sections they will have regard to any proposals for the development of such land which he may produce to them referred to as " the communicating street ") upon neighbouring land, in continuation of, or communicating with, that new street, the Council may, when approving the plans and sections of the street, fix a site for the communicating street.

The site for a communicating street (which by definition includes the continuation of a street) and the site of the proposed street with which it will communicate become reserved land, in order to enable the Responsible Authority, in suitable circumstances, to declare and construct any part of the street themselves (whether as a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large or as a private street).

Whether the Responsible Authority desire to fix the sites for additional estate streets without any proposals for streets being submitted to them, they are entitled in suitable circumstances to take this course by making a supplementary order.

(2) The communicating street may be a new street or a widening of an existing street, and the Council may fix the site thereof either by approving, with or without modification, a proposed street or widening included in any proposals submitted to them under the last-preceding Clause, or by themselves preparing a plan for the purpose.

(3) As soon as the plans and sections of the new street and the site of the communicating street have been approved, the Council shall notify the person having control of the said site of their decision and shall afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting the plans and sections and a plan of the said site, and, if he is aggrieved by the decision of the Council whether in respect of the new street or of the site of the communicating street, he may appeal.

(4) On an appeal under the last-preceding Sub-clause the applicant, and on an appeal by the applicant under Sub-clause (7) (a) of Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners) the person having control of the site of the communicating street, shall be entitled to appear and be heard.

(5) The decision of the Council to approve the plans and sections and to fix the site of the communicating street shall not take effect pending the determination of any appeal made under this or the last-preceding Clause by the applicant or by the person having control of the site of the communicating street, and, if on any such appeal the decision of the Council with regard to the plans and sections of the street or the site of the communicating street is varied, the Council may modify their decision with regard to the site of the communicating street or to the plans and sections as the case may require, so as to bring it into conformity with the decision given on appeal, and no appeal shall lie against any modification made by the Council for this purpose.

(6) Where the Council decide under this Clause to fix the site of a communicating street, the land which forms the site of the new street in respect of which application was made to them, and the land which forms the site of the communicating street, shall thereupon become reserved for a new street or widening of an existing highway as though they had been reserved for the purpose in Part I or Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands).

(7) The Council shall forthwith determine whether the sites of the new street and of the communicating street shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large or a private street, and shall notify the applicant and the person having control of the site of their determination, and the applicant and such person, if aggrieved by the decision of the Council so far as it relates to the land belonging to them respectively, may appeal.

20.—(1) A person who proposes to lay out or to make a street, shall, before commencing to lay out the street or to execute any street works, give not less than twenty-four hours' notice to the Council of the date on which he proposes to commence the work.

If such notice is not given and a duly authorised officer of the Council, on inspecting any work in connection with the street, finds that the work is so far advanced that he cannot ascertain whether anything has been done or omitted contrary to the plans and specifications approved by the Council or to the conditions upon which approval of the street has been granted, the officer may, within a reasonable time after inspection, give notice to such person requiring him, within a reasonable time to be specified in the notice, to remove, lay open or pull down so much of the work as prevents the officer from ascertaining whether anything has been done or omitted as aforesaid.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

If the said person fails or refuses to comply with the requisition, the Council may themselves remove, lay open or pull down so much of the work as aforesaid and may recover from him summarily as a civil debt the expenses incurred by them.

(2) A person who has laid out a street or executed any street works thereon, other than temporary works, shall within a reasonable time after the completion thereof give notice to the Council that the street is laid out or the works executed as the case sewers, gas or water mains, electric cables or wires, or other works lying on or under the highway, and the Council and such statutory undertakers and other persons shall have the same powers in relation thereto (including the power of inspecting, maintaining and repairing the works and connections thereto, and of entry upon the land for that purpose), as if the highway had not been diverted or stopped up:

Provided that the Council may, if they think fit, divert or transfer any such works with the consent of the statutory undertakers or other persons in whom the works are vested, and execute any works necessary and incidental to such diversion or transfer, and may enter into agreements for the purpose.

Building Lines, etc.

22.—(1) When the plans and sections of a proposed street are submitted to the Council for their approval under Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners) and the proposed street is neither on land reserved for streets under Part II of the Scheme nor a street intended for use as a secondary means of access or as a footway only, the Council may fix a building line for the street, and, if in approving the plans of the street the Council fix the site of a communicating street, they may also fix a building line for the communicating street.

(2) If a building line is so fixed, the notice that the plans of the street have been approved or that the site for the communicating street has been fixed, as the case may be, shall, unless it is accompanied by a plan showing the position of the building line, include a statement that a plan indicating the position of the building line will be open for inspection at a specified place. The fixing and position of the building line shall be matters on which an appeal may be made under Clause 18 or Clause 19 (Communicating streets), as the case may be.

23.—(1) In the case of a street existing at the date on which this Scheme comes into operation for which no building line is shown on the Map by a broken red line, the Council may fix a building line either for the street or for such part thereof as they think fit at such time as may appear to them expedient.

(2) The Council shall give notice of the proposal to fix the building line to the person having control of any land to which the building line relates and to the person having control of any neighbouring land who may, in the opinion of the Council, be affected. The Council shall include in the notice a statement that a plan indicating the position of the building line will be open for inspection at a specified place and that, if any person on whom a notice is required to be served desires to make any representations or objections with respect thereto, he may address them in writing to the Council within a specified period, not being less than fourteen days or more than twenty-eight days from the date of the notice.

(3) Before fixing the building line, the Council shall consider any representations or objections made to them within the specified period.

(4) Upon the fixing of the building line the Council shall forthwith give notice thereof to the persons on whom a notice is required to be served under the provisions of Sub-clause (2) of this Clause and shall include in the notice a statement that a plan indicating the position of the building line will be open for inspection at a specified place.

(5) Any person on whom a notice is required to be served under this Clause and who is aggrieved by the fixing or position of the building line may appeal.

Provided that the Council may, if they think fit, permit—

(a) the erection of a building in front of the building line—

(i) for the purpose of architectural effect; or

(ii) if, on account of the levels of the site or of adjoining land, or the propinquity of buildings already in front of the building line, or any other special circumstances, compliance with the building line would seriously hamper the development of the site;

(b) the erection in front of the building line of—

(i) a bay window, porch or other projecting portion of a building;

(ii) an industrial building or special industrial building at such distance, not being less than fifteen feet from the boundary of the street, as the Council may specify;

(iii) groups of shops or business premises at such distance, not being less than ten feet from the boundary of the street, as the Council may specify;

(iv) a lodge or a garage, or other out-building used or intended to be used in connection with a dwelling-house, if the building does not exceed ten feet in height (measured from the mean level of the ground surrounding the building to the top of the parapet or half of the height of the roof, whichever is the higher) and is not less than ten feet from the boundary of the street.

Paragraphs (b) (ii) and (iii) of the proviso to the Clause are appropriate to undeveloped areas, since in that case the depth of building lines will normally be substantially greater than fifteen or ten feet. Shorter distances than those named in the paragraphs would be appropriate in developed areas.

(2) Before giving permission under the last preceding Sub-clause for any part of a building to be erected at a greater distance in front of the building line than three feet six inches, the Council shall, at the expense of the applicant, give notice of the application by advertisement in some local newspaper circulating in the Area, and shall consider all objections which may be addressed to them in writing within a period, not being less than fourteen days, to be specified in the notice.

25.—(1) If at any time the Council decide under Clause 10 (Adjustment of reservations where a standard width is adopted) to remove a reservation imposed by the Scheme on land required for a new street or widening, the Council may at the same time determine that any building line shown on the Map by a broken red line or fixed under Clause 22 (Fixing of building line for new street not shown on Map) or Clause 23 (Fixing of building line for existing street for which no building line is shown on Map) shall cease to have effect, and thereupon the provisions of the preceding Clause shall cease to apply to the land between the land released from its reservation and the building line.

(2) The Council shall when informing a person having control of any land of their decision in regard to the removal under the provisions of Clause 10 of the reservation of such land, inform him also of their decision under this Clause in regard to any building line fronting such land, and they shall similarly inform the Minister when forwarding to him the duplicate plan in accordance with Sub-clause (5) of Clause 10.

(3) Where a building line shown on the Map by a broken red line or fixed under Clause 22 or Clause 23 has ceased to have effect by reason of a decision by the Council under Sub-clause (1) of this Clause, or such building line has been included in a standard width adopted with the approval of the Minister of Transport under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935, the Council may fix a new building line for the street of standard width at such time as may appear to them expedient, and the provisions of Sub-clauses (2) to (5) of Clause 23 shall apply to the new building line proposed to be fixed under this Clause.

26. In any street for which a building line is in operation under this Scheme a person shall not be precluded by Section 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, from erecting or bringing forward a building beyond the front main wall of the building on either side thereof, if the erection or bringing forward of the building would not contravene the provisions of the Scheme, and the operation of the said Section is hereby suspended so far as is necessary for the purpose of this Clause.

27.—(1) Where the Council are satisfied that in the interests of safety the height to which, or the position in which, walls, fences or hedges may be erected, planted or grown on land at or near the corners or bends of roads ought to be regulated, they may serve upon the owner and occupier of the land a notice imposing restrictions in regard to the height or position of proposed walls, fences or hedges, and the notice shall be accompanied by a plan showing the land to which the notice relates.

(2) The restrictions imposed by a notice served under this Clause shall take effect upon the service of the notice and, subject to any decision upon an appeal against the restrictions imposed, shall remain in force until the notice is withdrawn by the Council.

(3) If any person upon whom a notice has been served under this Clause is aggrieved by any restriction imposed by the notice, he may appeal.

(4) A breach of any restriction imposed under this Clause shall be a contravention of this Scheme.

(5) This Clause does not apply to a highway maintainable at the material date by the Minister of Transport, or by a County Council or other Highway Authority.

See Section 19 (1)(h) of the Act.
This Clause is complementary to Section 4 of the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 (a), which confers powers on the Highway Authority in respect of roads maintainable by them.

PART IV.—BUILDING RESTRICTIONS AND USE OF LAND.

28. In this Part of the Scheme, except where the context otherwise requires or it is otherwise expressly provided, the following words and expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them:

If the scheme includes no rural zone the following definitions should be omitted: country dwelling, agriculture, horticulture, pisciculture, forestry, rural industry.

"dwelling-house" means a house designed for use as a dwelling for a single family, together with such outbuildings as are ordinarily used therewith;

"country dwelling" means a dwelling-house with not less than [ ] acres of land within its curtilage, or a dwelling-house occupied in conjunction with not less than [ ] acres of neighbouring land on which no building operations are to be undertaken other than the erection of buildings ordinarily incidental to the enjoyment of a country dwelling-house;

It is thought that five acres might be the normal figure for the purposes of the definition of country dwelling.

"flat" includes any separate dwelling, not being a dwelling-house, which is designed for use by a single family, whether the dwelling is on more than one floor or not, and a "block of flats" means a building containing two or more flats;

"residential building" means a building, other than a dwelling-house, designed for use for human habitation together with such outbuildings as are ordinarily used therewith, and includes a block of flats, a hotel designed primarily for residential purposes and a residential club, but does not include any building mentioned, whether by way of inclusion or exclusion, in the definitions of "place of instruction" and "institution";

"place of public worship" means a building designed for use as a church, chapel, oratory, meeting-house, or other place of public devotion, and includes a building designed for use as a Sunday school, and an institute or other building designed for purposes of social intercourse and recreation, within the same site as and associated with any of the foregoing buildings;

"place of instruction" means a building designed for use as a school, college, technical institute, academy, lecture hall or other educational centre, and includes a monastery, convent, public library, art gallery, museum and gymnasium, but does not include a building designed for use wholly or principally as an approved school for the purposes of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1933 (b), or as a school for mentally defective or epileptic children;

"institution" means a building designed for use as a public or charitable institution, and includes a building designed for use as a hospital, clinic or dispensary,

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

whether public or private, but does not include buildings designed wholly or principally for any of the following uses, namely, as—

(a) a hospital, sanatorium, dispensary or clinic for the treatment of infectious or contagious diseases;

(b) a certified institution, certified house or approved home for mental defectives;

" horticulture " includes the growing of plants, fruit or vegetables under glass and the use of land for scientific horticultural research ;

" pisciculture " includes the breeding and preservation of fish and the use of land for scientific piscicultural research ;

" forestry " includes arboriculture, the cutting, dressing and preparation for sale of wood and the use of land for scientific forestry research ;

" rural industry " means a local industry connected with agriculture, horticulture, pisciculture or forestry, and includes any industry the staple material employed in which is grown or reared, or is the product of some thing or animal grown or reared, on land in the locality ;

" marine industry " means the taking of fish or shell-fish or other marine creatures or marine plants or the making, repairing, storing or letting of boats, and includes any local industry ordinarily carried on near the sea wholly or mainly for the purpose of supplying articles required in connection with those operations or any of them ;

| If the scheme includes no seashore zone the definition of marine industry should be omitted. |

" zone " means a portion of the Area shown on the Map by distinctive colouring, hatching or edging or in some other distinctive manner for the purpose of indicating the restrictions imposed by this Part of this Scheme on the erection and use of buildings or the user of land ; and the terms " density zone " and " use zone " mean zones indicating restrictions as to density and use of buildings respectively ;

| Reference to " height zone " should be included here, if it is proposed to apply different height restrictions to different parts of the Area. |

In Clause 29 (Predominant use of buildings) in its application to Clause 30 (Erection and use of buildings) and in Clauses 30 to 34 which relate to the erection and use of buildings and use of land, but not elsewhere in this Part of the Scheme a " building " includes a structure or erection.

29.—(1) Where a building is used, or a proposed building is designed, for more than one use, it shall be treated for the purposes of Clause 30 (Erection and use of buildings) as being used or designed partially for each of those uses, but for the purposes of the other provisions of this Part of the Scheme it shall be treated as being used or designed only for its predominant use, and the Council may, and shall, if the person having control of, or proposing to erect, the building makes an application for that purpose, decide which is the predominant use.

(2) The applicant, if aggrieved by the decision, may appeal.

Erection and Use of Buildings and Use of Land.

30.—(1) The purposes—

(a) for which buildings may be erected and used without the consent of the Council ;

(b) for which buildings may be erected and used only with the consent of the Council ; and

(c) for which buildings may not be erected and used

in each of the use zones specified in Part I or Part II of the following Table are shown in the third, fourth and fifth columns of the Table, but no building operations shall be undertaken on land within any of the zones specified in Part II of the Table, unless a general development order applying to the land has come into operation or permission to develop has been granted under Section 16 of the Act.

(2) Building operations are permanently restricted in each of the use zones specified in Part III of the following Table on the ground that by reason of the situation or nature of the land the erection of buildings thereon would be likely to involve danger or injury to health [or excessive expenditure of public money in the provision of roads, sewers, water supply or other public services] ; and the purposes—

(a) for which buildings may be erected and used without the consent of the Council ;

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(b) for which buildings may be erected and used only with the consent of the Council; and

(c) for which buildings may not be erected and used in each of the said zones are shown in the third, fourth and fifth columns of the

The General Zone is suitable only in instances where existing development is a mixture of industrial and residential buildings and it is impracticable to decide that either use should predominate in the future. The mere existence of a few incongruous buildings is not enough to justify use of the general zone, since existing uses are protected, and it may be quite clear what the future character of the neighbourhood should be.

The Intermediate Zone is suitable for an area where some residential development is certain, but it is reasonable to anticipate some industrial and commercial development. In such a case it seems sufficient, as is proposed in the Table, to require the consent of the Responsible Authority to the erection of buildings other than dwelling-houses and residential buildings and certain types of buildings ancillary to residential development, but not, as in the residential zones, to confer on neighbouring owners the right to object to proposals for development other than residential development or to appeal against the decision of the Authority to consent to such development.

An exception has, however, been made by providing for appeal against a proposal to permit erection of a special industrial building.

The Undetermined Zone is suitable only in cases where it cannot be determined whether development when it takes place will be residential, commercial or industrial, but it is desired to prevent the uncontrolled intermixture of various forms of development. This zone should not be included unless a substantial measure of agreement with owners has been secured.

USE ZONES IN WHICH GENERAL DEVELOPMENT DEPENDS UPON THE ISSUE OF A GENERAL DEVELOPMENT ORDER. (SUB-CLAUSE (1) AND PART II OF TABLE C.)—Land should be included in this Part where it is necessary or desirable to prevent general development which is likely to result either in sanitary difficulties, or in premature expenditure of public money for public services, or in serious detriment to local amenities.

The Clause has been drafted on the assumption that it will ordinarily be possible to forecast in the Scheme the use and the density of the buildings to be allowed when a General Development Order is made. The use zones in Part II of the Table will as a rule correspond with those in Part I.

Where this forecast is not practicable the zoning can be left until the General Development Order is made, but if this is done it will ordinarily be necessary to make a Supplementary Order at the same time, as zoning provisions cannot properly be settled by the Development Order. Meanwhile the Clause should be amended by deletion of the reference to Part II of the Table in line 8 of Sub-clause (1), and substitution of " and no building operations shall be undertaken on land coloured pale blue and edged broken blue on the Map " for " but . . . Table " in lines 10–12. A new paragraph should also be added to Clause 31 as follows:

> (2) The use of land coloured pale blue and edged broken blue on the Map, whether forming the site of a building or not, for a purpose for which in use zone II [use zone VIII] a building may not be erected and used, or may be erected and used only with the consent of the Council, shall not be commenced without the consent of the Council.

USE ZONES IN WHICH BUILDING OPERATIONS ARE PERMANENTLY RESTRICTED (SUB-CLAUSE (2) AND PART III OF TABLE C.)—It will normally be enough to entitle the zone " Restricted " and insert the words " Any buildings " in column 4, leaving columns 3 and 5 blank. It may be justifiable to insert a few types of buildings in column 5 and in rare instances a complete prohibition of building may be appropriate. If this is so Part III of Table C should be omitted and the following substituted for Sub-clause (2):

> Building operations are permanently prohibited in the use zone edged green and broad cross-hatched yellow on the ground that by reason of the situation or nature of the land the erection of buildings thereon would be likely to involve danger or injury to health [or excessive expenditure of public money on the provision of roads, sewers, water supply or other public services].

RURAL, COASTAL AND SEASHORE ZONES.—For notes on the use of these zones see Circular 1750 (a).

USE ZONES IN WHICH BUILDING OPERATIONS ARE PERMANENTLY RESTRICTED.

Use zone.	Reference to Map.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used without Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may be erected and used only with Council's consent.	Purposes for which buildings may not be erected and used.
1.	2.	3.	4.	5.

(3) Subject to the provisions of Clause 32 (Advertisement and third party appe in certain cases) if an application is made to the Council for their consent to tl erection and use of a building in a use zone in which a building of the type propose may be erected and used only with the Council's consent, the Council shall deci whether to give or withhold consent, and in the former event what, if any, co ditions shall be imposed :

Provided that before consent to the erection and use of a building in use zone(is given or withheld, or conditions are imposed thereon, considerati shall be given to the question whether the use for which the building is intended designed is likely to cause injury to the amenity of the neighbourhood, includin in the case of an industrial building, injury due to the emission of smoke or fum or to dust, noise or smell.

Where the rural zone is included the existing proviso should be marked (a) and a additional proviso (b) added :

(b) in use zone X to the question whether the building is likely to injure tl amenity of the neighbourhood, or to involve danger or injury to health l reason of the lack of roads, sewers, water supply or any public services and the provision of the necessary services would be premature or likely to involve excessive expenditure of public money.

(4) The applicant, if aggrieved by the decision of the Council under the preceding Sub-clause, may appeal.

(5) In this Clause the expression " the erection and use " of a building for a particular use includes the conversion of the building, whether or not involving the structural alteration thereof, to that use.

31.—(1) The use of land comprised in a use zone whether forming the site of a building or not, for a purpose for which in that zone a building may not be erected and used, or may be erected and used only with the consent of the Council, shall not be commenced without the consent of the Council.

(2) No land comprised in any use zone, other than zone(s) , shall be used for the purpose of without the consent of the Council.

(3) The use, other than an existing use, of land comprised in use zone(s) for the purpose of is prohibited on the ground that it is likely to involve [danger or injury to health] or [serious detriment to the neighbourhood].

(4) Nothing in Sub-clause (1) or Sub-clause (2) of this Clause shall entitle the Council to withhold consent to the use of land (otherwise than for building operations) or to impose conditions thereon, except for the purpose of preventing danger or injury to health or serious detriment to the neighbourhood.

(5) Subject to the provisions of the next succeeding Clause with respect to advertisement and third party appeal in certain cases, if an application is made to the Council for their consent to the use of land for a purpose for which their consent is required, the Council shall decide whether to give or withhold consent and, in the former event, what if any conditions to impose, and the applicant, if aggrieved by the decision, may appeal.

Sub-clause (1) contemplates that restrictions on the use of land will, so far as they correspond, be similar to the restrictions on the erection and use of buildings, but the Responsible Authority are entitled under the Clause to consent to a use in the case of land to which they cannot consent in the case of a building. They are not entitled to refuse consent to any use of land (otherwise than for building operations) unless it can be shown that the use would cause danger or injury to health or serious detriment to the neighbourhood.

In addition, certain uses of land to which there is no corresponding use of a building may be dealt with expressly in Sub-clause (2)—for example, refuse tipping (but a saving for the disposal of refuse for agricultural or industrial purposes may be required), sewage disposal and cemeteries. If it can be shown that any particular use ought to be entirely excluded from particular zones, Sub-clause (3) is appropriate. Ordinarily, however, it will be best that the Responsible Authority should retain power to give consent as in Sub-clause (2). Except as provided in the last paragraph of the note, no uses of land for which there can be corresponding buildings should be referred to in Sub-clause (2) as these are covered by Sub-clause (1).

Another form of development which Authorities may wish to deal with under this Clause is the permanent holiday camp, consisting usually of sleeping huts grouped round a central dining hall. Reference to such camps may be made, in appropriate areas, in Sub-clause (2). Some minor adjustments may be needed to other Clauses since the huts ordinarily rank as buildings, and these will be suggested by the Department when required.

32.—(1) If an application is made to the Council for their consent to the erection and use of a building or the use of land, whether wholly or partially, for the purposes of—

place of assembly, shop, petroleum filling station, industrial building, special building	in use zone I or use zone II,
petroleum filling station, industrial building, building for the trade of fish frier, special building	in use zone III or use zone IV,
special industrial building	in use zone V or use zone VIII,

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

the Council shall, as soon as may be, give notice of their receipt of the application and of their proposal to determine the same by advertisement in some local newspaper circulating in the Area.

The notice shall be at the cost of the applicant, and shall state that any objections addressed to the Council in writing within fourteen days after the date of the advertisement will be considered.

(2) The Council shall take into consideration any objections received within the said period of fourteen days, and shall notify the persons, if any, from whom objections were received of their decision at the same time as they notify the applicant, and any of the persons aforesaid, including the applicant, if aggrieved by the decision, may appeal.

(3) The decision of the Council shall not take effect until the expiration of twenty-eight days from the date on which the applicant and the objectors, if any, are notified thereof, or, if an appeal has been made under the provisions of this Clause, until such appeal is disposed of.

This Clause requires the advertisement of certain controversial proposals, including those which are prima facie likely to injure the amenity of a neighbourhood having regard to the predominant use of the zone. The uses suggested in the Clause can be varied, if desired, but the insistence on advertisement (and consequent third party right of appeal) must not be applied to all the uses which need consent in any particular zone, since some of these secondary uses must be expected to find their natural home in the zone—e.g. places of public worship, places of instruction, institutions in residential zones—and are not prima facie likely to cause any injury if properly sited.

Licensed premises.—Buildings for this purpose are in a rather special position, as they have to obtain the license of the Justices as well as the consent of the Planning Authority. In cases where it is customary for the Justices to hear applications for licensed premises before plans of the building are submitted to the Authority, an exception in favour of such premises should be made to the requirement that proposals for "shops" in residential zones must be advertised, since third parties will already have had an opportunity of making representations before the Justices. This can be done by adding after the word "shop" in the fifth line of Clause 32 (1) the words "other than a shop to which the provisions of the Licensing Acts, 1910 to 1934, apply."

If the Rural Zone is included the following should be incorporated in paragraph (1) of Sub-clause (1) :—

> dwelling-house (not being a country dwelling), residential building, place of assembly, shop, business premises, petroleum filling station, industrial building (not being intended or designed for a rural industry), special industrial building, special building in use zone X.

and after the words "that any objections" in the second line of the second paragraph of Sub-clause (1) the following words should be added :

> ", including in the case of applications for consent to a building in use zone X, objections from any local association formed for the purpose of protecting rural amenities."

33. The provisions of this Part of the Scheme with regard to consent to the erection and use of buildings for trade or industry and appeals in connection therewith shall be in substitution for the provisions of Section 107 of the Public Health Act, 1936 (a), and the operation of these provisions is hereby suspended so far as is necessary for the purpose of this Clause.

34. Nothing in the foregoing provisions of this Part of the Scheme shall be construed as prohibiting or restricting or enabling the Council to prohibit or restrict—

(i) the winning of minerals by underground working;

(ii) the winning of minerals by surface working as respects any land except the land edged red with serrated border in use zone(s) —

(iii) the use of land or the erection of buildings required for the purposes of a sports or recreation ground, not being a sports or recreation ground ordinarily open to the public on payment of a charge;

(iv) the use of land for a fair or a show by a travelling roundabout proprietor, a travelling showman or stallholder;

(v) the letting by any occupant of a dwelling-house of any part of the house otherwise than as a separate tenement;

(vi) the occasional use of a place of public worship, place of instruction, or institution as a place of assembly;

(vii) the practice by any occupant of a dwelling-house or residential building of a profession or occupation which does not involve either—

(a) the use of the building as an industrial building or special industrial building; or

(b) the public display of goods, whether in a window or otherwise; or

(c) the exhibition of any notice or sign other than a notice or sign ordinarily exhibited on dwelling-houses to indicate the name and profession or occupation of the occupant.

The use zones to be filled in must be zoned for residential purposes, and the land edged red with serrated border must be land within those zones which is substantially developed for residential purposes. It is useless to include the whole of the residential zones in the exception, without regard to the question of substantial development, as the Minister is not able to accept that. Moreover, the Minister is advised that the "substantially developed" land must be precisely described in the Scheme, and not left to subsequent decision, since by Section 19 he is required before approving the exclusion of compensation to be satisfied that any restriction of surface working applies only to land which has been substantially developed for residential purposes, and this can only mean which has at that time been so developed.

A further proviso to the exception is that surface working must not be prohibited or restricted without payment of compensation over any land in respect of which it can be shown, to the satisfaction of the Minister, that the minerals or the right to win them had been acquired by some person before the material date for the purpose of winning them, or had before that date devolved upon some person desirous of winning them. In this case, however, it is for owners to make representations that their land should not be included in the exception when the Scheme is deposited.

The Minister is prepared to consider making exceptions to the saving in paragraph (iv), but he is of opinion that they should not often be necessary and that, where made, they should refer to strictly limited areas with special claims to protection on grounds of amenity.

Density.

It is possible to control the density of buildings—

(a) by prescribing the area of the site of each building;

(b) by prescribing an average density over an area of land called for convenience a "land unit";

(c) by a combination of the two methods.

In the Clauses the third of these courses is adopted so far as dwelling-houses are concerned the control contemplated being by prescription of average densities qualified (see Clause 38) by a provision fixing a minimum size for the site of each dwelling-house. Buildings other than dwelling-houses are left entirely to the operation of Clause 42 together, in the case of flats, with Clause 41. In the 1937 issue of the Model it was contemplated that buildings other than dwelling-houses (blocks of flats, shops, business premises, warehouses, etc.) would be taken into account in calculating density over a land unit, being assessed for the purpose in terms of building units—i.e. in effect, in terms of dwelling-houses. It has proved impossible, however, to find a formula which would cover all the various factors, and it is now considered that the new arrangement which provides for the exclusion from any land unit of the "site" of any building other than a dwelling-house (the "site" being at least large enough to comply with Clause 42) will be simpler and equally effective.

35.—(1) For the purpose of determining the number of dwelling-houses which may be erected on any land in the Area the Council shall, in accordance with the provisions of this Clause and upon the application of the person or persons having control of the land, declare that the land to which the application relates, or any part thereof, shall form one or more land units.

The area over which the density is to be measured is called a land unit and its size (subject to the provision contained in Clause 35 (2) and to a right of appeal) is within the discretion of the Responsible Authority. They should ordinarily accept any proposal submitted by an owner for the inclusion in the unit of land within a residential use zone or reserved as a private open space.

[If the rural zone is included Sub-clause (1) should be amended by inserting after the word "Area" in line 3, the words "other than land in use zone X."]

(2) The site of every dwelling-house erected before the material date, or in pursuance of a contract made before that date or begun before but completed after that date, shall form a separate land unit, unless the Council otherwise decide:

Provided that where the site of a dwelling-house exceeds the minimum area of land required to satisfy the provisions of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) as regards that dwelling-house, only so much of the site as is needed to satisfy the provisions of that Clause shall be deemed to form a separate land unit, unless the person having control of the land otherwise agrees.

In the 1935 edition of the Model it was provided that the site of every existing dwelling-house should form a separate land unit unless it exceeded the minimum area of land required to satisfy the density provisions or the owner otherwise agreed. Sometimes, however, dense existing development surrounding or adjoining open land in the same ownership would be so seriously prejudiced by the development of the open land, that it may be right to include the whole or part of the existing development in any land unit declared for the open land. The point has, therefore, been left to the discretion of the Responsible Authority (subject to appeal) but authorities are reminded that in view of the statutory right to replace existing buildings it may not be fair to include dense existing development in a land unit applied for over a large area of open land, unless they are prepared to authorise some increase in the normal density contemplated by the Scheme over at least a part of the open land.

(3) Subject as aforesaid, the Council may include in a land unit—

(a) adjoining land belonging to the applicant other than that to which the application relates; and

(b) adjoining land given by or acquired from the applicant for the purpose of a public open space or of allotments.

(4) The Council may require an applicant for the declaration of a land unit to submit a plan showing the whole of his adjoining land which is not already included in a land unit or such part thereof as they think fit.

(5) On the application of a person having control of land included in a land unit, or, if no application is made, after giving notice to such person, the Council may vary the land unit; except that no variation of a land unit may be made unless—

(i) notification has been given to every person having control of any land which would be affected; and

(ii) the variation is consistent with the provisions of this Part of the Scheme relating to density and space about buildings.

(6) The half of the width of any road dedicated to the public on which land proposed to be included in a land unit abuts shall be included in the land unit.

The provisions of this Sub-clause contemplate the case where the road is of the width normally required by the byelaws. If the road substantially exceeds this width, the inclusion in the land unit of half its width would allow relatively small building plots, without imposing on the owner the obligation of leaving a corresponding portion of the land unit as open space.

This difficulty will not arise in respect of those parts of the Area to which Clause 38 applies, but in other parts of the Area it would be open to the Authority preparing the Scheme to modify the provisions of the Sub-clause so that only a suitable proportion of a road much in excess of byelaw width may be included in the land unit. It should be borne in mind that in the case of proposed new streets where the land in separate ownership fronting on the new street is shallow in depth, the cost of acquisition may be increased if the proportion of the width of the road which may be included in the land unit is limited too severely.

(7) The site of any building, other than a dwelling-house which is existing or proposed on the land at the date of the application, shall not be included in the land unit, and if any such building is subsequently erected on the land unit, the site shall be excluded from the unit.

(8) A person who has applied under this Clause for the declaration or variation of a land unit, or who has been notified by the Council of their intention of varying a land unit and is aggrieved by the decision of the Council may appeal.

(9) Where the site of a dwelling-house in a land unit is partly within and partly outside the Area, the Council shall, if the person having control of the site so requires, treat the site as wholly within the land unit:

Provided that the Council may make it a condition of so treating the site that no dwelling-houses shall be erected on the portion of the site outside the Area in excess of the number that would have been permissible if the whole of the site had been within the Area and included in the land unit.

(10) For the purpose of this Clause the submission of a plan for a dwelling-house shall be deemed to be an application for the declaration of a land unit in respect of the land included in the plan.

36.—(1) No dwelling-house shall be erected, and no building shall be converted into a dwelling-house, in any density zone, upon land not included in a land unit.

(2) No building other than a dwelling-house shall be erected on land included in a land unit which has been developed, if the exclusion of the site, in accordance with the provisions of Sub-clause (7) of the preceding Clause, would leave insufficient land to comply with the requirements of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) and Clause 38 (Minimum size of plots).

37.—(1) The number of dwelling-houses on a land unit shall not—

(a) if the land is situate within a single density zone, exceed the number obtained by multiplying the number of acres in the land unit by the average per acre specified in the Table below for that zone; or

(b) if the land is situate in more than one density zone, exceed the sum of the numbers obtained by multiplying the number of acres in the land unit within each zone by the average per acre specified in the Table for that zone.

Averages of 12, 8 and 6 to the acre are common density standards in new residential neighbourhoods, but Authorities should not adhere rigidly to a maximum of 12 where conditions justify a higher figure. High cost of land, for example, may make a higher figure necessary. In fully or partly developed areas a higher density than 12 will frequently be necessary.

(2) Where it appears to the Council upon the application of a person having control of a land unit that it would be unreasonable to require compliance with the provisions of this Clause owing to difficulty in developing the land in accordance with those provisions on account of—

(i) the lay-out of any street on or adjoining the land unit which was laid out before the material date; or

(ii) the small area of land belonging to the applicant and reasonably available for simultaneous development; or

(iii) the proximity of the land unit to other land (whether in the Area or not) already developed at a greater density than would be permissible under the foregoing Table, or if the said Table does not apply to such other land, at a greater density than would be permissible for the land unit itself, the Council may permit a reasonable increase in the number of dwelling-houses on that land unit.

TOWN AND COUNTRY

(3) A person who has applied under the last-preceding Subclause for an increase in the number of dwelling-houses and is aggrieved by the decision of the Council may appeal.

Clause 42 (Proportion of site which may be occupied by buildings), 43 (Breaks in buildings), 44 (Limitation of height of buildings), 45 (External appearance of buildings), 46 (Siting of buildings), 51 (Maintenance of private gardens, etc.), and 52 (Advertisements).

9.—(1) If the land comprised in a land unit in respect of which an estate development plan has not been approved by the Council under Clause 46 (Siting of buildings) r becomes vested in two or more persons, and those persons fail to agree as to the nber of dwelling-houses to be erected on their respective portions of the land, the ncil shall, upon the application of the person having control of any portion of the d, decide what proportions of the maximum permissible number of dwelling-houses y be erected on the land belonging to the applicant and on the remainder of the d unit respectively.

2) Before deciding any application to them under the foregoing provisions of this use, the Council shall give notice thereof to the other person or persons in whom land is vested and shall consider any representations made to them in the matter. ter deciding the application the Council shall notify all the persons in whom the id is vested of their decision.

40. The Council shall keep, so as to be available for inspection at all reasonable nes, a register identifying each land unit by reference to a map, and showing the te on which the unit was fixed or varied, and the particulars and the date of any portionment made by the Council under the last preceding Clause.

41.—(1) The number of flats on a site shall not exceed a number to be decided by e Council upon the application for approval of a person proposing to erect flats hich application shall be accompanied, in addition to the plans and particulars quired by Clause 61 (Submission of plans) by a plan of each floor of the proposed ock of flats) and in making their decision the Council shall have regard to the ze of the flats proposed and the number of persons which the flats are designed to commodate.

(2) The Council shall give notice to the applicant of any decision under this Clause, id the applicant, if aggrieved by their decision, may appeal.

While it would not be reasonable to require for a flat as great a curtilage as for a dwelling-house with the same number of occupants, some curtilage, related to the number of the occupants, should be provided. In a previous issue of the Model the method of establishing a ratio between flats and houses was adopted to achieve this end. It has been found, however, that this method led some local authorities to fix a single ratio for the whole area, which failed to take account of the varying sizes of flats. The Advisory Committee on Town and Country Planning therefore suggested that it would be simpler and more satisfactory to calculate the density of flats according to their probable population, subject to a stiffened overall limitation of the proportion of site which may be occupied by buildings. Clauses 41 and 42 give effect to their suggestion.

Clause 41 leaves it to the Responsible Authority to decide what is a proper population standard in their particular circumstances. The Advisory Committee recommended that 100 persons per acre would be a reasonable maximum in the ordinary suburban 12 or 8 to the acre density zones. In the centres of towns a higher standard must be expected. One hundred persons per acre (to be calculated over the net site, by which is meant the area occupied by buildings together with the curtilage, but excluding land occupied by roads etc.) corresponds more or less to twice the population that would be accommodated in dwelling-houses (whose density is calculated over the gross site) at a density of from 8 to 12, and where the most common type of flat with two or three bedrooms is concerned, has much the same result as the ratio of two flats to one dwelling-house which has in the past been adopted by many Authorities.

It is suggested that in reckoning up the probable population of any proposed block of flats, the Authority should base their calculation on the number of rooms provided, assuming that where there is more than one main room, one will be used as a living room only.

In addition to density there are two other methods of controlling flats. The Authority should consider whether the site is suitable for flats at all (Clause 30); and whether the size, including height and external appearance of the building, is satisfactory in relation to neighbouring development (Clauses 44 and 45). It is important to keep these three issues distinct, and not, for example, to refuse consent for flats under the density provision (Clause 41), if the real ground for refusal is that flats are objected to as such (Clause 30) or that the building is disproportionate or ugly (Clause 45).

In the Minister's view flats are not necessarily incompatible with neighbouring dwelling-houses provided that due consideration is given to their setting and appearance. It is not, therefore, as a rule desirable to attempt to specify in the Scheme, areas which are suitable for flats, and areas which are not. Where, however, there is considered to be a special case for making such a distinction (as e.g. in a quarter which has established a consistent architectural character with which any flats, however designed, may be expected to be in conflict; or in a quarter whose street pattern is generally unsuited to the higher population of flats), this may be contrived without sacrificing control under Clause 30 over flats in the ordinary mixed areas, by providing for advertisement of and third party appeal against proposals to erect flats in the special quarters. See the note to Clause 30.

The control of size and external appearance is probably the most effective method of all. The Responsible Authority may refuse permission to a block of flats, notwithstanding that the population will not exceed the accepted number per acre, and that the neighbourhood is suitable for the erection of flats, if they consider that the block will be detrimental to adjoining houses because of its size or external appearance. In view of this wide power it has not been thought necessary to add a graded population standard for the low density zones, as here the quality of the building is likely to matter much more acutely than the number of people to be housed. If, however, authorities wish to grade down the normal population standard in the 6 and 4 density zones there is no reason why they should not do so, provided that they are able to maintain that the restriction is needed to protect the amenity or convenience of the neighbourhood.

Space about buildings.

42.—(1) The space occupied by buildings shall not exceed the proportion of their site indicated in the following Table:

TABLE E.

Height of building.	Dwelling-houses and blocks of flats.	Residential buildings other than blocks of flats, places of instruction and institutions.	Other buildings.
1.	2.	3.	4.
Buildings not exceeding 30 ft. in height nor more than one storey above ground level over more than one-quarter of the ground occupied by the building
Buildings exceeding 30 ft. in height or more than one storey above ground level over more than one-quarter of the ground occupied by the building

The limit which may properly be placed on the proportion of site which may be occupied by buildings will depend on local circumstances. In particular, the proportion which would be appropriate for land on the outskirts of towns will normally be inappropriate in the central areas of towns. The following figures are based on proportions which are generally suitable for land on the outskirts of towns.

Col. 2.	Col. 3.	Col. 4.
$\frac{1}{3}$	$\frac{1}{2}$	$\frac{3}{4}$
$\frac{1}{4}$	$\frac{1}{3}$	$\frac{2}{3}$

Provided that—

(i) in the case of a building to be erected upon a site which was in separate ownership or was separated from adjacent sites by walls or fences before the material date and is of less than square feet the proportions set out in the Table shall be increased in the ratio of to the number of square feet in the plot, subject to a limit of in the case of a dwelling-house or block of flats, of in the case of a residential building other than a block of flats, an institution or place of instruction, and of in the case of any other building;

(ii) upon the application of any person who desires to erect a building the Council may permit a reasonable increase in the proportion of the site which may be occupied by buildings, if by reason of any of the circumstances mentioned in Sub-clause (2) of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) or of the fact that the site abuts on two or more streets or other special circumstances it is proper so to do, and if the applicant is aggrieved by a decision of the Council under this paragraph, he may appeal;

As regards proviso (i), figures of 2,500 (in two places), and maximum limits of 3-5ths in the case of dwelling-houses or block of flats, 2-3rds in the case of other residential buildings, institutions or places of instruction, and 4-5ths in the case of any other building, are suggested where the figures set out above are adopted.

Where differentiation between different parts of the Area is necessary, as, for example, where the area includes both developed and undeveloped land, the necessary provision can be made by subdividing columns 2, 3 and 4 vertically, each subdivision relating to a specified part of the Area.

(iii) where a proposed building is designed predominantly for use as a dwelling-house or residential building, but the dwelling accommodation will be wholly above the ground floor, the space to be left unoccupied by buildings shall be measured at the level of the lowest floor on which the dwelling accommodation is provided and the space to be left unoccupied by buildings on the ground level shall be reckoned as though the building fell within column 4 of the Table.

(2) For the purposes of this Clause—

(a) an institution includes institutions of the kinds mentioned by way of exclusion in the definition of "institution" in Clause 28 (Building Restrictions and Use of Land.—Interpretation);

(b) a place of instruction does not include buildings of the kinds mentioned in the definition of the term in Clause 28 except a school, college, technical institute, academy, monastery or convent;

(c) the height of a building shall be measured from the mean level of the ground surrounding the building to the top of the parapet, or half the height of the roof, whichever is the higher;

(d) in measuring the space unoccupied by buildings at the level of any floor above ground floor level, space occupied by sky-lights, parapets, pitched-roofing or similar projections, in so far as they do not project more than three feet above the level of the floor, and space occupied by chimneys, shall count as unoccupied space;

(e) where the site of a proposed building is partly within and partly outside the Area, the Council shall, if the person having control of the land so requests, treat it as wholly within the Area, but they may make it a condition of so treating the site that no buildings are erected on the portion of the site outside the Area so as to occupy, together with the buildings on the portion of the site within the Area, a greater proportion of the site as a whole than could have been occupied if the whole of the site had been within the Area.

(3) This Clause does not apply to the erection in use zone(s) of an industrial building or a special industrial building.

43.—(1) The number of dwelling-houses which may be erected in one continuous block shall not exceed—

.....in.....zone(s) .....

.....in.....zone(s) .....

.....in.....zone(s) .....

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(2) No building shall be erected in such a position that the distance between a dwelling-house and any other building, whether a dwelling-house or not, on land in the same ownership, is less than—

.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....
.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....
.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....

and no building shall be erected at a less distance from the owner's boundary, other than the boundary of a street, than—

.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....
.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....
.....feet.....in.....zone(s) .....

Provided that the foregoing requirements with retard to distance from other buildings or from the owner's boundary shall not apply to—

(a) an outbuilding not exceeding ten feet in height (measured from the mean level of the ground surrounding the outbuilding to the top of the parapet or half the height of the roof, whichever is the higher);

(b) the connection of two buildings by a connecting wall, arch or other architectural feature; and in the case of a building which forms or is intended to form part of a continuous block and does not contravene the foregoing restriction on the number of dwelling-houses in one continuous block, the said requirements with regard to distance from other buildings or from the owner's boundary shall apply only to such parts of the said building as are not or would not be contiguous to any other building or intended building in the same continuous block.

Reasonable standards for minimum distances between buildings are six, eight and ten feet, according to the density of the development. Half the distances prescribed in the first Table of Sub-clause (2) should be inserted in the second Table.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of this Clause, the Council may, if they think fit, permit—

(a) a larger number of dwelling-houses in one continuous block where the buildings are arranged to the satisfaction of the Council;

(b) a building nearer to any other building or to the owner's boundary than the distance specified in Sub-clause (2) of this Clause, where it appears to the Council that in the special circumstances of the case it would be unreasonable to require compliance with the provisions of that Sub-clause;

(c) the connection of two buildings at or above their first floor level.

(4) A person who has applied under paragraph (a) of the last preceding Sub-clause for a larger number of dwelling-houses in one continuous block, and is aggrieved by the decision of the Council may, within twenty-eight days after receiving notice of the decision of the Council, appeal to the Tribunal constituted under Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings) and the Fourth Schedule to this Scheme, and the provisions of Part II of the said Schedule and Sub-clause (5) of Clause 45 shall apply as though the appellant were a building owner within the meaning of that Clause.

An appeal shall, in addition, lie against a refusal of the Council to give or unreasonable delay on their part in giving, a decision, and shall be made to the Tribunal as if it were an appeal against a decision of the Council.

If it is desired that appeals under Clause 45 should be to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction instead of to the Special Tribunal the appeal under Sub-clause (4) of Clause 43 should likewise be to the Court. The note on Clause 45 provides for a suitable amendment of both clauses.

(5) For the purposes of this Clause a dwelling-house includes a building designed externally in the form of a dwelling-house, though intended as a dwelling for more than one family.

44.—(1) No building shall be erected so as—

(a) to project above a line drawn from the centre of the street in front of the building at an angle of 56° from the horizontal or if the street is of any one of the types described in the First Schedule to this Scheme at an angle of 45° from the horizontal; or

(b) to exceed a maximum height of feet measured from the mean level of the ground immediately surrounding the building to the highest point of the building:

Provided that for the purposes of this Sub-clause—

(i) a street which was in existence at the material date and which has a less width than thirty feet shall be deemed to have a width of thirty feet;

(ii) account shall be taken of parapets but not of chimneys, or of ornamental towers, turrets or any other such architectural features;

(iii) if a part of a building abuts on two intersecting streets, the height of that part of the building fronting the narrower street shall, for such distance as the Council may consider proper, be determined by reference to the width of the wider street;

(iv) in the case of a place of assembly the Council may permit either or both of the limits imposed by this Sub-clause to be exceeded to such extent as they think fit.

(2) This Clause does not apply to the erection in use zone(s) of an industrial building or a special industrial building.

The figures in paragraph (a) are suggestions only, and may be altered according to the circumstances of each particular area. The maximum height limit (left blank in paragraph (b)) should not as a rule be lower than fifty feet, and, in some cases, should be not less than one hundred feet.

Where it is desired to apply different height restrictions to different parts of the Area, paragraphs (a) and (b) of Sub-clause (1) may be set out in table form with different heights applying in different use or density zones, or parts of such zones, specially hatched.

Proviso (iv) enables the Council to allow the limits to be exceeded in the case of a place of assembly. It is open to the Council to include a similar provision in the case of other buildings if they think it advisable.

45.—(1) The external appearance of any building intended to be erected on land in any of use zones or in any private open space shall, if the Council so require, be subject to their approval, and a person intending to erect a building on such land (in this Clause referred to as the "building owner") shall, if required by the Council so to do, apply to them for approval of the external appearance of the building, submitting for the purpose drawings and particulars in accordance with the provisions of Clause 61 (Submission of plans).

See Section 12 of the Act. Materials of construction are within the scope of control under the Clause only in so far as they affect external appearance. It is not contemplated that this power of controlling external appearance will necessarily be exercised over the whole of a planning area. Usually it will not be appropriate in zones which are primarily industrial. Even in these zones, however, control of the external appearance of buildings may sometimes be desirable either because the standard of existing factory development is high and ought to be maintained, or because the absence of control may be prejudicial to the amenity of neighbouring localities.

Attention is drawn to Circular 940, in which the Minister informed Local Authorities that the Royal Institute of British Architects and the Council for the Preservation of Rural England have appointed voluntary panels of Architects in all parts of the country and that these panels are prepared to advise Local Authorities and private developers.

A reference to size is included in the Clause. Some Local Authorities have desired to insert in a Scheme a limitation of the size of houses according to density, but in the Minister's view this is not reasonable and size should be controlled only to the extent to which it constitutes a disfigurement. Even so the power must be applied with caution especially in relation to houses of persons of small means.

(2) The Council shall approve the external appearance of the building, or if they consider that, having regard to the character of the locality or of the buildings erected or proposed to be erected therein, the building would disfigure the locality by reason of its external appearance or of its size, withhold their approval or give it subject to appropriate modifications or conditions.

(3) For the purposes of this Clause the Council shall constitute in the manner provided in the Fourth Schedule to this Scheme a standing tribunal of appeal (hereafter in this Clause referred to as " the Tribunal "), and the procedure with respect to appeals shall be as provided in the said Schedule.

(4) Within twenty-eight days after receiving notice of the decision of the Council the building owner, if aggrieved by that decision, may appeal to the Tribunal, and the grounds of his appeal may include the ground that compliance with the Council's decision would involve an increase in the cost of the building which would be unreasonable having regard to the character of the locality and of the neighbouring buildings.

An appeal shall, in addition, lie against a refusal of the Council to give or unreasonable delay on their part in giving a decision, and shall be made to the Tribunal as if it were an appeal against a decision of the Council.

(5) The decision of the Tribunal shall be final and shall have effect as if it were the decision of the Council and the Tribunal may order by whom and in what manner any costs incurred in connection with the appeal shall be paid, and any costs so ordered to be paid shall be recoverable summarily as a civil debt.

Sub-clauses (3), (4) and (5).—The following amendments should be made where it is desired that the appeal shall be to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction instead of to the Special Tribunal:

(i) substitute for the Sub-clauses the following Sub-clause—

(3) The building owner, if aggrieved by the decision of the Council, may appeal, and the grounds of his appeal may include the ground that compliance with the Council's decision would involve an increase in the cost of the building which would be unreasonable having regard to the character of the locality and of the neighbouring buildings.

(i) Clause 63. Omit " other than a decision under Sub-clause (4) of Clause 43 (Breaks in buildings) or Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings) " and insert after " bends " in Clause 63 (1) (a) the words " Sub-clause (4) of Clause 43 (Breaks in buildings), Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings)."

(6) In any case in which particulars have to be furnished under this Clause the erection of a building before the particulars have been approved, or, if the particulars have been approved, otherwise than in accordance with them, shall be a contravention of the Scheme.

46.—(1) The siting of any building intended to be erected on land in any of use zones shall be subject to the approval of the Council, and a person intending to erect a building on such land (in this Clause referred to as the " building owner ") shall before commencing the erection apply to the Council for approval to the siting of the building, submitting for the purpose an estate development plan in accordance with the provisions of Clause 61 (Submission of plans).

This Clause should not be applied to industrial zones and may not always be thought necessary in business zones.

The object of the Clause is to enable Responsible Authorities to determine where on the land a building should be placed. The power is very wide and Authorities will be entitled to require a reduction in the total number of buildings proposed by the developer—even in an extreme case to prohibit any building—but compensation cannot be excluded, and if the number of buildings is reduced below what is permitted by the density provisions of the Scheme, a claim for compensation may follow.

The Clause should be useful in enabling Responsible Authorities to break up ribbon development; to prevent buildings from being placed where there is not sufficient access, or in the line of access to and from other land; and to improve the layout and arrangement of estates. Some Authorities have achieved excellent results where development is impending by preparing in advance skeleton layout plans for sections of their areas.

Where an Authority wish to disapprove a plan because access to neighbouring land will be blocked, they may reasonably ask the owner of the neighbouring land to co-operate as regards any expenditure that may be incurred.

(2) On receiving an application the Council shall notify the person having control of any neighbouring land the development of which is in their opinion likely to be substantially affected by the determination of the siting of the proposed building that—

(a) an estate development plan has been submitted to them; and

(b) before approving the siting they will have regard to any proposals for the development of such neighbouring land which he may produce to them within one month from the date of the notice.

(3) The Council shall afford the building owner and any person notified under the last preceding Sub-clause reasonable facilities for inspecting any plan submitted under this Clause.

(4) The Council shall approve the siting of the proposed building, or if they consider that the siting of the building will be—

(a) inconvenient on account of the insufficiency of means of communication between the building and a street which is either a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large or has been laid out and constructed in accordance with the byelaws for the time being in force with respect to new streets; or

(b) likely to prejudice the development of neighbouring land; or

they shall disapprove the siting of the building, or approve it subject to appropriate modifications or conditions. If any proposals have been submitted to the Council under Sub-clause (2) of this Clause, the Council shall notify the person who submitted the proposal of their decision under this Sub-clause at the same time as they notify the building owner.

(5) A person who proposes to sell land for the purpose of development or to divide it into parcels with a view to its sale and subsequent development, may submit an estate development plan to the Council under this Clause for their approval of the siting of the buildings, and if the plan so submitted is approved, any person subsequently intending to erect a building on the land may do so in accordance with the approved plan without submitting a further estate development plan under this Clause.

(6) On the application of a person having control of any land included in an approved estate development plan, the Council may, as regards land under his control, vary the plan or approve a new estate development plan, and the application shall be in all respects as though it were an application under Sub-clause (1) of this Clause.

(7) An applicant who is aggrieved by a decision of the Council under this Clause may appeal.

(8) No building shall be erected in any of use zones except in accordance with an estate development plan approved by the Council or by [the Minister] [a Court of Summary Jurisdiction] on appeal.

(9) For the purpose of this Clause the erection of a building does not include the structural alteration of, or the making of any addition to, a building.

General.

47. Where the site of a building or proposed building or a building plot is partly within the Area and partly within the area of some other planning scheme, the provisions of the other scheme corresponding to this Part of this Scheme shall apply to the part of the building or plot which is within the area of this Scheme in place of the provisions of this Part of this Scheme in the following cases, namely—

(a) if the greater part of the street frontage of the building or proposed building is or would be within the area of the other scheme;

(b) in the case of a building or proposed building which has or would have no street frontage, if the greater part of the building is or would be in the area of the other scheme; and

(c) in any other case if the greater part of the plot is within the area of the other scheme.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

PART V.—GENERAL AMENITY AND CONVENIENCE.

48. In this Part of the Scheme, unless the context otherwise requires or it is otherwise expressly provided, the following words and expressions have the respective meanings hereby assigned to them:

"private open space" means land reserved for use as a private open space under Clause 5 (Reservation of lands);

"public open space" includes land which is at the date on which this Scheme comes into operation a playing field belonging to a local authority and land reserved under Clause 5 for use as a public open space or a playing field.

If it is desired to provide for the protection of aerodromes, an additional Clause can be included (in Part V) immediately before Clause 48 [No. 7, Appendix II].

49.—(1) If at any time the Council, having regard to the amenity of any part of the Area, are of opinion that any growing tree of a height of more than thirty feet or having a trunk of a girth of more than two feet six inches, at a height of five feet above the ground, ought to be preserved, they may register the tree for the purposes of this Clause, and shall thereupon notify the owner and occupier of the land upon which the tree is growing that the tree has been registered.

The figures suggested in the Clause can be reduced where circumstances warrant it, e.g. normally in seaside towns, but the power to preserve trees should be exercised with discrimination; and Local Authorities should not attempt to preserve every tree in their area. The intention is to protect ornamental timber, and where groups are concerned Authorities should be able to indicate the important ones on the Map. If they are left to subsequent registration they may be destroyed before any action is taken.

(2) The register of trees so made shall be open to inspection at all reasonable times.

(3) The following provisions shall have effect in regard to a tree registered under this Clause and to any tree which forms part of any of the groups of trees, particulars of which are set out in the Table below:

(i) No person shall cut down, lop, top or wilfully destroy any such tree except—

(a) in compliance with an obligation imposed by or under any Act of Parliament; or

(b) in pursuance of a power conferred on the Postmaster-General by virtue of Section 5 of the Telegraph (Construction) Act, 1908; or

(c) in the case of a local or public authority or statutory undertakers, in the exercise of any powers conferred on the authority or undertakers by or under any Act of Parliament; or

(d) where the tree is dying or dead or has become dangerous; or

(e) to such an extent as may be necessary to prevent its constituting a nuisance, or permissible in pursuance of a right to abate a nuisance; or

(f) with the consent of the Council; or

(g) under an order on an appeal made under this Scheme; or

(h) in the course of thinning operations carried out in accordance with the principles of good forestry:

Provided that, if the Council do not notify their refusal to consent to the cutting down, lopping, topping or destruction of any such tree within one month from the date of an application for consent, their consent shall be deemed to have been given.

(ii) Any owner or occupier of land upon which any such tree is growing who is aggrieved by a refusal of the Council to consent to the cutting down, lopping, topping or destruction of such tree may appeal.

(4).—(a) The Council may at any time cancel the registration of any tree registered as aforesaid and shall thereupon make an appropriate alteration in the register of trees and notify the owner and occupier of the land upon which the tree is growing of the cancellation, and as from the date of such cancellation the provisions of this Clause shall cease to apply to such tree.

(b) The Council may at any time determine that the provisions of this Clause shall cease to apply to any group of trees of which particulars are given in the Table and if they so determine shall give notice accordingly to the owner and occupier of the land upon which the group of trees is growing.

TABLE F.

50.—(1) The areas of woodland of which particulars are given in the following Table shall be areas protected under Section 46 of the Act:

TABLE G.

Reference to Map.	Description and situation.

(2) If any part of an area of woodland specified under the preceding Sub-clause is felled, the owner shall undertake such replanting as would be in accordance with the practice of good forestry.

Owners should be consulted before these areas are settled. Any woodland to be scheduled should be land with timber or coppice; and should be large enough for forestry operations to be practicable—probably not less than five acres. It will be noted that where an area of woodland is specified for protection, the owner is not precluded from felling the trees or coppice; he is only obliged to undertake such replanting as is in accordance with the practice of good forestry. Any question whether replanting under Sub-clause (2) is or would be in accordance with the practice of good forestry is, on the application of either party, to be determined by the Forestry Commissioners, under Section 46 (3) of the Act.

51.—(1) Where it appears to the Council that the amenity of use zone(s) [or of the land coloured pale blue and edged broken blue on the Map] or of any public open space or private open space is seriously injured by the condition of any garden, curtilage or private open space in the Area, the Council may serve a notice on the person by whose action or omission the injury arises (including the owner of unoccupied premises), requiring him, within such period, not being less than twenty-eight days from the date of service of the notice, as may be specified in the notice, to take such action as may be necessary to abate the injury.

(2) If the person on whom the notice is served fails to comply with the notice, the Council may cause complaint to be made to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and that Court may issue a summons requiring the person to appear before them and, if satisfied that the alleged injury exists, may make an Order directing the person to comply with the requisition or otherwise to abate the injury and to do anything necessary for the purpose within a time specified in the Order. Failure to comply with such an Order shall be a contravention of this Scheme.

The Order may also empower the Council themselves to take any action which the person has been directed to take, if he fails to do so, and the Council may recover the cost of taking any such action from that person summarily as a civil debt.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

The use zones to be protected under this Clause should ordinarily be residential, and, possibly, intermediate and undetermined zones.

The words in square brackets are required only if the Scheme includes land temporarily restricted against general development which is not included in a use zone.

It may sometimes be appropriate to apply the Clause to any land in certain zones, but this should be confined to areas which are particularly important from the point of view of amenity. Thus coastlands or areas of exceptional beauty might be so treated, but it would not generally be appropriate to apply the Clause to, say, the whole of the rural zone.

52.—(1) The land included in use zone(s) [land coloured pale blue and edged broken blue on the Map] and any public open space or private open space shall be land protected under the provisions of Section 47 of the Act in respect of advertisements.

(2) The Council may, if they think fit, on the application of any person interested, authorise the display of any particular class of advertisements either unconditionally or subject to conditions in respect of the position or manner in which, or the period during which, the advertisement may be displayed.

(3) Any person who has applied to the Council for authority under this Clause and is aggrieved by the refusal of the Council to grant authority or by any conditions imposed by the Council may appeal.

(4) For the purposes of Sub-section (6) of Section 47 of the Act it is hereby provided that—

(i) advertisements which relate solely to a trade or business carried on, or to an entertainment, meeting, auction or sale to be held upon or in relation to the land upon which the advertisements are displayed, which do not contain letters, figures or advertising emblems or devices exceeding six inches in height [or nine inches in use zone . . .] and do not (except where affixed to and not projecting above a vertical wall of a building) exceed a height of twelve feet from the ground, and

(ii) advertisements on the door or in the window of a building which do not contain letters, figures or advertising emblems or devices exceeding six inches in height shall not be subject to the provisions of Sub-section (1) of that Section.

See Section 47 of the Act. Not all use zones will need protection, and in some cases it may not be necessary to protect the whole of a particular use zone. The words in square brackets are required only if the Scheme includes land temporarily restricted against general development which is not included in a use zone.

By Clause 75 the operation of the byelaws which are similar to or inconsistent with any of the provisions of the Scheme is suspended, and the inclusion of this Clause will therefore affect byelaws under the Advertisement Regulation Acts, 1907 and 1925 (a). Suspension by the Scheme is, however, limited to "similar" or "inconsistent" byelaws, and as there might be some dispute about the precise effect of this, administration will be facilitated if they are repealed by an amending byelaw (which the Home Office are prepared to confirm) in so far as they extend to an area in respect of which provision in regard to advertisements is also made under the Scheme.

The words in square brackets in paragraph (i) of Sub-clause (4) should be included where it is proposed to protect the business zone, as in this zone it is reasonable to allow more latitude to advertisements relating solely to a trade or business carried on on the premises.

53.—(1) A person proposing to erect in the Area a building which is intended to be used for purposes of business or industry (in this Clause referred to as the "building owner") shall give not less than twenty-eight days' notice thereof to the Council before commencing to erect the building.

An application to the Council for consent to, or approval of, the erection of a building intended to be used for purposes of business or industry or the submission to the Council of plans, specifications or other particulars for approval under any other provision of this Scheme or under the byelaws or local Acts shall be a sufficient notice of the proposal for the purposes of this Clause.

See Section 17 of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a). The Clause is only required for the control of small buildings outside the scope of the Act.

The space for vehicles to be provided under the Clause must be within "the site" of the new building, but may be provided, where the Authority consider suitable, by throwing part of the site into the street in the form of a bay.

(2) For the purpose of preventing obstruction of traffic on any highway or intended highway to which the proposed building would have access the Council may within twenty-eight days of the receipt of the notice referred to in Sub-clause (1) of this Clause require the building owner to submit for their approval proposals for securing that, so far as is reasonably practicable, suitable and sufficient accommodation shall be provided within the site for any loading, unloading or fuelling of vehicles which is likely to be habitually involved in connection with the use of the building.

(3) If the Council require proposals to be submitted under this Clause, or if the building owner submits proposals together with the notice referred to in Sub-clause (1) of this Clause, they shall approve the proposals, or disapprove them, or approve them subject to appropriate modifications or conditions, and the building owner, if aggrieved by the decision of the Council, may appeal.

(4) It shall be a contravention of this Scheme—

(a) if a person who submits or is required to submit proposals under this Clause erects a building without the proposals having been approved; and

(b) if at any time the owner or occupier of the building in respect of which proposals under this Clause have been approved undertakes or knowingly permits the habitual loading or unloading or fuelling of vehicles otherwise than in accordance with the proposals.

(5) For the purposes of this Clause the erection of a building has the same meaning as in Sub-section (1) (l) of Section 19 of the Act.

This definition is necessary for the reason that the term "erection of a building" is not defined in Section 19 of the Act which governs this Clause, and may have a meaning different from that given to it in Clause 2 (1) for the general purposes of the Scheme.

(6) The foregoing provisions of this Clause shall not apply to any building to which Section 17 of the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (a), applies.

PART VI.—MAINTENANCE, USE, ALTERATION, EXTENSION AND REPLACEMENT OF EXISTING BUILDINGS, AND CONTINUANCE OF EXISTING USE OF LAND.

54. An existing building or an existing work may be maintained and may be used for its existing use and an existing use of land may be continued:

Provided that, except as provided in the next succeeding Clause—

(a) where there is an existing building or work the erection or carrying out of which would have contravened some provision of this Scheme if it had taken place after the date on which the Scheme comes into operation or had taken place after that date without the consent of the Council; or

(b) where there is an existing use of an existing building which would have contravened some provision of this Scheme, if the building had been erected after the date on which the Scheme comes into operation, or had been erected after that date without the consent of the Council; or

(c) where an existing use of land would have contravened some provision of this Scheme if it had been commenced after the date on which the Scheme comes into operation or had been continued after that date without the consent of the Council, the Council may service on the owner and occupier of the building, work or land, notice (in this Part of the Scheme referred to as "warning notices") that at the expiration of a period to be specified in the notices, not being less than twenty-eight days, the retention of the building or work or the continuance of the use of the building or land will be a contravention of the provisions of the Scheme, and upon the expiration of that period the provisions of Section 13 of the Act relating to the removal, pulling down or alteration of contravening buildings and the prohibition of contravening uses, and of Section 18 and Subsection (2) of Section 20 of the Act enabling compensation to be claimed, shall apply accordingly.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

55.—(1) If an existing building or work is such that its erection or carrying out after the date when the Scheme comes into operation would have been permissible with the consent of the Council, or if an existing use of an existing building would have been permissible with such consent had the building been erected after that date, or if an existing use of land is such that if it had been commenced after that date it would have been permissible with the consent of the Council, the person having control of the building or work or land may—

(a) at any time before the Council have served on him a warning notice apply to the Council for their approval of the building or work or of the continuance of the existing use, as the case may be, and may appeal against a decision of the Council withholding such approval; or

(b) after the Council have served on him a warning notice appeal against the notice, and upon any such appeal the Minister shall have power, if he thinks fit, to approve the building or work or the continuance of the existing use, as the case may be.

(2) If an appeal is made against a warning notice, the operation of the notice shall be suspended pending the decision on the appeal.

(3) If the building or work or the continuance of the existing use is approved under this Clause, the Council shall not be entitled to serve a warning notice, and any such notice already served shall cease to have effect.

56. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this Scheme, but subject to the provisions of Clause 58 (Power to prohibit alterations, etc., of existing and certain other buildings)—

(a) an alteration of an existing building may be made, if the alteration, together with any previous alteration made to the building since the material date, does not involve the demolition of the building to the extent of more than one-half of the superficial area of its main containing walls;

(b) an extension of an existing building, other than a building erected in pursuance of permission given by or under an interim development order, may be made and the building as extended may be used for any purpose of the same or similar character as that for which the existing building was used, or for any purpose which is in conformity with the provisions of this Scheme, if the Council or, on appeal, the Minister decides that the extension, with any previous extension made since the material date, does not measure in floor space more than one-eighth of the existing floor space, within the main containing walls, and an equivalent extension of floor space could not conveniently be secured on the site of the building without contravening or by contravening in less degree the relevant provisions of this Scheme:

Provided that the Council, or on appeal the Minister, may permit an alteration or extension of an existing building additional to that permitted under the preceding paragraphs, and the use of any extension so permitted for the purpose specified in the preceding paragraph, if satisfied that the case is a proper one.

It may be reasonable to modify the Clause in its application to particular buildings so as to allow their alteration or extension beyond the limits set out in the Clause or to allow extension even though the buildings were erected in pursuance of permission given by or under an interim development order.

57.—(1) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this Scheme, but subject to the provisions of the next succeeding Clause, where an existing building or a building which was standing within two years before the material date is destroyed or demolished, a new building having no greater cubic content above the level of the ground and, in addition, in the case of premises used for business or industry, no greater superficial area on the ground floor may be erected on the same site, if the building is commenced within two years after the destruction or demolition of the previous building or within such longer period as the Council may permit:

Provided that—

(i) if the Council or, on appeal, the Minister decides that a new building having a cubic content above the level of the ground not less than that proposed and, in the case of premises used for business or industry a superficial area on the ground floor not less than that proposed, could conveniently be erected in such a manner as not to contravene the relevant provisions of this Scheme or to contravene them in less degree than would be involved in the erection of the proposed building, then the erection of the proposed building shall not be permissible under this Clause;

(ii) it shall not be permissible under this Clause to erect any building on land on which the erection of buildings is restricted under Sub-clause (2) of Clause 30 (Erection and use of buildings) except as provided in that Sub-clause; and

Paragraph (ii) (d) of Section 19 (2) of the Act provides that where the use of an existing building is declared in the Scheme to be noxious or offensive, replacement of the building may be prevented without payment of compensation. If the Authority desire to avail themselves of this power a proviso may be added to Sub-clause (2) in the following terms :—

> Provided that new buildings substituted for the buildings hatched in use zone(s) shall not be used for the purpose of being a use which would be contrary to the provisions of this Scheme, and also of a noxious or otherwise offensive character.

and reference to the proviso made at the end of Clause 78.

The building and the use where replacement is to be prohibited must be specified in the proviso, and the curtilage of the building must be shown on the Map by a special notation; and in order to justify the prohibition, the use of the building must be one to which, in accordance with Table C in Clause 30, consent would be required, or one which is shown in that Table as prohibited in the particular zone; and it should be either one of the uses specified in the Third Schedule to the Clauses or a use of a similar kind.

The word "prohibited" should be substituted for "restricted" if the substituted Sub-clause (2) on page 48 [ante, p. 4009] is used.

(iii) nothing in this Clause shall be construed as authorising the erection of a building otherwise than in conformity with the provisions of the byelaws and local Acts, but if it is impracticable to erect such a new building as aforesaid on the site of the previous building without infringing such byelaws or local Acts, the Council or, on appeal, the Minister may permit the building to be erected in whole or in part upon land adjoining that site.

(2) A new building erected under this Clause may be used for any purpose of the same or similar character as that for which the previous building was last used before its destruction or demolition, or for any purpose in conformity with the provisions of the Scheme.

For the purposes of this Clause a building shall be deemed to have been demolished, if it is demolished to the extent of more than one-half of the superficial area of its main containing walls.

58. A person who desires to alter, extend or replace an existing building or to replace a building which was standing within two years before the material date in such a manner that the alteration or extension of the building or erection of the new building, as the case may be, would, save for the provisions of this Part of the Scheme, be a contravention thereof, shall submit to the Council plans and particulars of the proposed works not less than five weeks before the works are commenced, and the Council may within that period serve him with a counter-notice of their decision to prohibit the proposed alteration, extension or new building, and upon the service of the said counter-notice the alteration or extension of the building or the erection of the new building, as the case may be, shall be a contravention of the Scheme:

Provided that if the alteration or extension or new building is one which would have been permissible with the consent of the Council, had the original building been erected after the date when the Scheme comes into operation, the person upon whom the counter-notice has been served may appeal against the decision of the Council.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Where action is taken by the Responsible Authority under this Clause they will incur a liability to pay compensation. Apart, however, from cases in which the alteration, extension or replacement is one involving a serious departure from the provisions of the Scheme, there will be instances in which prohibition with payment of compensation will be less costly to the Authority than the payment of the larger compensation ultimately involved if the alteration, extension or replacement was carried out and the building had to be removed.

59. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing provisions of this Part of the Scheme, the provisions of Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings) shall apply to the alteration, extension or replacement of an existing building, or the replacement of a building which was standing within two years before the material date, and in the case of an alteration to or extension of an existing building, Sub-clause (4) of that Clause shall be deemed to include the further ground of appeal that compliance with the Council's decision would involve an increase in the cost of building which would be unreasonable having regard to the character of the building to be altered or extended.

60. Where an existing building or a building which was standing within two years before the material date is or was used, or, if not in use before the material date, was designed, for more than one purpose, the rights conferred by this Part of the Scheme to continue the use of the building (whether unaltered or as altered or extended), or to use a new building which replaces it for a purpose of the same or a similar character, shall include a right to alter the proportion, measured in floor space, in which the several parts of the building are or were used or designed for use, provided that the use for a particular purpose is not increased by more than one-eighth of the floor space used for that purpose.

PART VII.—PLANS, APPROVALS, APPEALS.

61.—(1) An application for any consent, permission or approval of the Council under the provisions of this Scheme, shall be made in writing to the Council, and shall be accompanied by the following plans and particulars:—

(a) if the application is for approval to the laying out or making of a new street, the plans and sections required by the byelaws and local Acts, showing the site of the proposed street in relation to other streets, together, where street works are to be executed, with specifications of the proposed works;

(b) if the application is for consent to the use of an existing or proposed building or to the use of land, a site plan sufficient to identify the land to which the application relates, together with particulars in writing of the purpose for which the building or land is to be used;

(c) if the application is for consent, permission or approval to the erection or siting of a building, the particulars required by the preceding paragraph (b) and in addition a plan (elsewhere in this Scheme referred to as an "estate development plan") to a scale of not less than twenty-five inches to a mile showing—

(i) the land on which the building is to be erected, and so far as may be necessary to enable the Council to consider the application, any adjoining land belonging to the applicant;

(ii) any land unit affecting any of the land shown on the plan which has been declared by the Council under Clause 35 (Declaration of land units);

(iii) any separate building plots into which the land is or is intended to be divided;

(iv) the position of every proposed and of every existing building on the land shown in the plan;

(v) the lines and widths of every proposed and of every existing street on the land shown in the plan:

Provided that—

(i) where the development proposed is so extensive as to make a smaller scale necessary, the plan may with the consent of the Council be to a scale of not less than six inches to a mile; and

(ii) if the application referred to in this paragraph relates only to the extension or alteration of a building, it shall be sufficient to show on the plan the site of the building and the extension or alterations in relation to the building;

(d) if the Council have required the external appearance of the building to be subject to their approval under Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings) drawings of the external appearance of the proposed building to a scale of not less than one inch to every eight feet, together with a sufficient description of the materials to be used in the construction of the building:

Provided that where the building is so extensive as to render a smaller scale necessary the drawings may be to a scale of one inch to every sixteen feet.

(2) An application to the Council for the approval of a plan under any byelaws, regulations, local or general Acts in force in the Area shall, if the development shown on the plan requires the consent, permission or approval of the Council under this Scheme, be deemed to be an application for such consent, permission or approval, unless the application does not contain the information and particulars required by the preceding Sub-clause and the Council so inform the applicant on or before giving their decision under the byelaws, regulations, local or general Acts.

(3) Any plan or drawing submitted to the Council in accordance with this Clause shall be in duplicate, and shall be on suitable and durable material. The Council may retain one copy of every plan or drawing submitted to them, and any plans or drawings so retained which have been approved by the Council shall be available for inspection by any person interested at all reasonable times.

It is considered that it will be convenient for developers to find collected together what they are required to do if they need a consent or permission of the Responsible Authority under the Scheme, and what their rights are in the event of a refusal or delay. The Clause follows the model byelaws as closely as possible and it is anticipated that, as a general rule, the ordinary byelaw plans will be sufficient for the purposes of the Scheme—with the addition, in appropriate cases, of any neighbouring land in the applicant's control.

It is provided by Sub-clause (2) that, as in the interim development period, an application under the byelaws shall be deemed to be an application under the Scheme unless the Council inform the applicant that the particulars supplied are insufficient; only under the Scheme the Council are relieved of the obligation contained in the General Interim Development Order to inform him within seven days, since developers have every opportunity of finding out for themselves what is required under the Scheme.

62.—(1) Where an application for the consent, permission or approval of the Council has been made in accordance with the preceding Clause or an application for a decision of the Council has been made under any provision of the Scheme by which the Council are authorised to give a decision, the Council shall notify the applicant of their decision within one month from the deposit of the application, or within such longer period as the applicant may agree in writing to allow, except that:—

(a) if by virtue of a byelaw made by the Council under Section 64 of the Public Health Act, 1936, "the prescribed period" in relation to the passing or rejection of plans under the building byelaws is five weeks in the case of plans deposited less than three clear days before a meeting of the Council, five weeks shall in the case aforesaid be substituted for one month under this Clause;

(b) if under the provisions of Sub-clause (2) of Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners) or Sub-clause (2) of Clause 23 (Fixing of building line for existing street for which no building line is shown on Map) or Sub-clause (2) of Clause 46 (Siting of buildings) the Council have notified the person having control of any neighbouring land that development or the fixing of a building line is proposed, two months shall be substituted for one month;

(c) if the application is one to which the provisions of Sub-clause (2) of Clause 24 (Effect of building line) or Clause 32 (Advertisement and third party appeal in certain cases) or Sub-clause (4) of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) or Clause 39 (Land units vested in more than one owner) apply, two months shall be substituted for one month.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

It is obviously convenient that the Authority's decision on the application under the byelaws, and their decision on the application under the Scheme, should be given simultaneously; and the provision for giving decisions within one month (except where the proposal has to be advertised) has been unanimously approved by the Town and Country Planning Advisory Committee. The position under an operative Scheme is very different from that in the interim development period (where the Authority have two months) since the main outlines of control are settled, and the issue before the Authority is correspondingly simpler.

(2) Where the Council refuse an application for consent, permission or approval, or approve it subject to modifications or conditions, they shall in notifying the applicant of their decision state the reason for the decision.

63. Where provision is made in this Scheme for an appeal from a decision of the Council, other than a decision under Sub-clause (4) of Clause 43 (Breaks in buildings) or Clause 45 (External appearance of buildings), the following provisions shall have effect:

(1) (a) Appeals for which provision is made by paragraphs (a) (ii) and (b) of Sub-clause (7) of Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners), Clause 27 (Prevention of obstruction to view at corners and bends), Clause 49 (Preservation of trees), Clause 52 (Advertisements) and Clause 53 (Provision of loading accommodation) shall be to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction for the petty sessional division or place within which the land or building to which the appeal relates is situated;

(b) in any other case the appeal shall be to the Minister whose decision shall be final.

(2) An appeal shall, in addition, lie against a refusal of the Council to give, or unreasonable delay on their part in giving, a decision and shall be made to the Court or the Minister as the case may be, as if it were an appeal against a decision of the Council.

(3) Written notice of appeal shall be given to the Clerk of the Court or to the Minister, as the case may be, and to the Council. If the appeal is against the decision of the Council, the notice shall be given within twenty-eight days from the date of the service on the appellant of the notice of the Council's decision.

For the purposes of this paragraph a notice given by the Council under Clause 27 or a notice under Clause 54 (Power to prohibit maintenance or use of existing buildings and continuance of existing use of land) against which appeal may be made under Clause 55 (Existing buildings and uses of land for which approval may be sought) shall be deemed to be a decision of the Council.

(4) The Court or the Minister, as the case may be, may on the application of any person desiring to appeal extend the time for making the appeal specified in the preceding paragraph (3), whether or not the time specified for making the appeal has expired.

(5) In the case of an appeal under Sub-clause (7) of Clause 18 or Sub-clause (3) of Clause 19 (Communicating streets) the Council shall forthwith serve a copy of the notice of appeal on any person who may by virtue of Sub-clause (4) of Clause 19 be entitled to appear and be heard.

(6) The Court or the Minister, as the case may be, may affirm, vary or reverse the decision of the Council or, if the Council have refused or have unreasonably delayed to give a decision, may give any decision which it would have been competent to the Council to give.

(7) In the case of an appeal to the Court, the Court may order by whom and in what manner any costs incurred in connection with the appeal shall be paid, and any costs so ordered to be paid shall be recoverable summarily as a civil debt.

The Act contemplates that the Scheme should provide for an appeal either to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction or to the Minister. It is for the Local Authority in framing the scheme to decide whether the appeal under any particular clause should lie to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction or to the Minister.

The Clause has been filled in on the assumption that the majority of appeals will lie to the Minister, as that appears to be the desire of most Local Authorities, and that the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (a), under which appeals go to the Justices, is in force. The Minister is not prepared to take the appeals referred to in paragraph (1) (a) as in his view these should always be referred to the Justices. If, however, Section 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), is in force, appeals affecting street specifications and costs should be to the Minister and the reference to Sub-clause (7) of Clause 18 should be deleted.

Whatever provision may be made in the Scheme the prospective parties to an appeal to a Court of Summary Jurisdiction may under Section 40 of the Act, refer the matter to the Minister, or to some other arbitrator to be agreed, or, in default of agreement, appointed by the Minister, and prospective parties to an appeal to the Minister may under the same provision refer the matter to some other arbitrator to be agreed, or, in default of agreement, appointed by the Minister.

PART VIII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

64.—(1) The Council may enter into agreements consistent with the provisions of this Scheme in relation to any matters with which a scheme made under the Act may deal.

(2) Where the legal estate in any land, not being a term of years created by mortgage, is for the time being vested in a limited owner (which expression in this Clause means a person whose estate in the land is such that he is incompetent, apart from this provision, by such agreements as are mentioned in this Sub-clause to bind the land in the hand of owners other than himself) such limited owner, if for the time being competent to dispose of the legal estate in the land vested in him, shall have power, with such consent as is hereinafter mentioned, to enter into agreements with the Council, consistent with the purposes and provisions of this Scheme, for imposing conditions restricting the planning, development, and use of the land in any manner in which those matters might be dealt with by or under a Scheme made under the Act, or otherwise for enabling this Scheme to be carried into effect, as if he were an absolute owner:

Provided that the power conferred on a limited owner by this Clause shall be exercised only with the consent of (a) the person (if any) whose consent is required to any disposition by the limited owner of the legal estate in the land or any part thereof; and (b) in the case of land which is settled land within the meaning of the Settled Land Act, 1925 (b), the trustees for the purposes of that Act of the settlement affecting the land.

(3) The several agreements particulars of which respectively are set out in the Fifth Schedule to this Scheme shall, except in so far as they are made, and are capable of taking effect, under powers conferred by Section 34 of the Act, be deemed to have been made under the powers conferred, and with the consent (if any) rendered necessary, by this Clause, but so that a provision contained in any of the agreements in the said Schedule shall prevail notwithstanding that it is inconsistent with the provisions of this Scheme; and the said agreements (except as aforesaid) are herby confirmed and made binding on the parties thereto respectively and on all persons intended and expressed to be bound thereby respectively, and the provisions thereof respectively shall be enforceable accordingly.

(4) The Council shall have power to enforce any covenant contained in an agreement of the kind referred to in this Clause against persons deriving title under the covenantor in the like manner and to the like extent as if the Council were possessed of, or interested in, adjacent land, and as if the covenant had been entered into for the benefit of that adjacent land.

65. For the purpose of facilitating such adjustment of the boundaries of estates and building plots as will secure the proper development of land the Council may agree with owners and occupiers of land for the exchange between those persons of portions of the lands, either with or without payment of money by way of equality of exchange, and may, if they think fit, themselves pay in whole or in part any money required to be paid by way of equality of exchange, and may pay in whole or in part the costs of the exchange.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

66. Nothing in this Scheme shall prevent—

(a) the erection of a building or the carrying out of works in accordance with the terms of any interim development order or of permission granted under such an order, if the erection of the building or the carrying out of the works has been commenced, but not completed, before the date on which this Scheme comes into operation or is undertaken under a contract made before that date; or

(b) the erection of any building or the carrying out of any works in accordance with any of the permissions of which particulars are set out in the Sixth Schedule to this Scheme or with any permission granted under any interim development order between the date on which the Council resolved to submit the Scheme to the Minister for approval and the date on which the Scheme comes into operation:

The permissions, of which particulars are to be entered in the Sixth Schedule, are those granted under an Interim Development Order for buildings or works which have not been begun or contracted for before the Scheme is approved by the Minister, but which ought to be allowed to proceed, e.g. where an estate is half developed, or land has been disposed of on the strength of the permission.

Provided that the Council may within two months after the coming into operation of the Scheme serve on the person intending to commence or continue the erection of a building or the carrying out of works which but for this Clause would be a contravention of this Scheme or would be permissible only with the consent of the Council a notice prohibiting the erection of the building or the carrying out of the works, and upon the service of such notice the erection of the building or the carrying out of the works shall be a contravention of the Scheme.

67. Any development which was undertaken in the Area between the material date and the date on which the Scheme comes into operation otherwise than in accordance with an interim development order or a permission granted under such an order and which does not conform with the provisions of this Scheme shall be a contravention of the Scheme.

68. Where permission to undertake any building operations or other development or to use any buildings or land or to do any other act or thing has been granted under an interim development order, and conditions have been imposed, and are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Scheme, the conditions shall have effect as if they were conditions imposed under the Scheme and may be enforced accordingly.

69. Without prejudice to their powers with regard to the letting, sale or exchange of land under Sections 164 and 165 of the Local Government Act (a), 1933, the Council may, with the consent of the Minister, sell or exchange any land acquired by them under paragraphs (a) to (d) of Subsection (1) of Section 25 of the Act.

A Local Authority have power under the Local Government Act, 1933, to sell or exchange land which is not required for the purpose for which it was acquired. This Clause is needed for the case where the purpose of the acquisition is to sell or dispose of the land, e.g. frontage land required for the purpose of controlling development.

Where the Scheme is constituting a Joint Body as Responsible Authority power to let land should be added to the Clause since the power in the Local Government Act is not available to Joint Bodies.

70. Land belonging to the Council for the purposes of this Scheme (other than land reserved under Part II of the Scheme), and not required for any of those purposes, may be appropriated for any other purpose approved by the Minister for which the Council are authorised to acquire land and which is not inconsistent with the provisions of the Scheme.

71.—(1) Nothing in the provisions of this Scheme shall be construed as authorising the acquisition or appropriation of land forming part of a common, open space or allotment within the meaning of paragraph 4 of Part II of the Third Schedule to the Act, except—

(a) where land, not being less in area, certified by the Minister after consultation with the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries to be equally advantageous to the persons, if any, entitled to commonable or other rights, and to the public, is given in exchange; or

(b) where such land is required for the widening of an existing highway and the Minister, after consultation with the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, declares that the giving in exchange of other land is unnecessary either in the interests of the persons, if any, entitled to commonable or other rights, or of the public.

(2) Land which forms part of any such common, open space or allotment as aforesaid and is acquired or appropriated under the provisions of this Scheme shall, by virtue of the acquisition or appropriation, be discharged from any rights, trusts and incidents to which it was previously subject, and any land given in exchange shall be vested in the persons in whom the common, open space or allotment was vested and shall be held subject to the same rights, trusts and incidents as attached to the land acquired or appropriated.

(3) The Council shall as soon as practicable undertake any works that may be necessary to put the surface of any land which is given in exchange for land forming part of any such common, open space or allotment as aforesaid in a state suitable for the exercise of the same rights as attached to the land acquired or appropriated.

72.—(1) Any officer of the Council who is duly authorised by the Council (in this Clause referred to as "the authorised officer") may, after giving not less than forty-eight hours' notice to the person having custody of any premises within the Area and on production of his authority, if required, enter the premises at any time between the hours of nine in the forenoon and six in the afternoon for the purpose of any inspection necessary for enforcing and carrying into effect any provision of this Scheme or the Act.

(2) Any authorised officer to whom admission is refused may apply to a Justice after giving to the person having custody of the premises reasonable notice of intention to make the application and the Justice may by Order under his hand require that person to admit the authorised officer into the premises during the hours aforesaid.

(3) If no person having such custody can be found, the Justice shall, on oath made before him of that fact, by Order under his hand authorise any authorised officer to enter into or upon the property during the hours aforesaid. Any such Order made by a Justice shall continue in force until the purposes for which admittance was required have been fulfilled or executed.

73.—(1) Any person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Scheme, or who fails to comply with any of those provisions, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable on conviction in a Court of Summary Jurisdiction for the petty sessional division or place in which the offence is committed to a penalty not exceeding Forty Shillings for each offence, or in the case of an offence under Clause 49 (Preservation of trees) to a penalty not exceeding Fifty Pounds for each offence, and in the case of a continuing offence he shall be liable to a further penalty not exceeding Twenty Shillings for each day during which the offence continues after conviction therefor:

Provided that a person shall not be punished for the same offence both under this Clause and under any other law or enactment.

(2) No proceedings shall be taken under this Clause, if action can be taken in respect of the same matter under the provisions of Section 13 of the Act, but, except as aforesaid, proceedings may be taken under this Clause in addition to any other proceedings or remedy.

74. The provisions of Section 32 of the Act with respect to the application by a Responsible Authority of sums received by way of betterment or as proceeds of sale of any land purchased under powers conferred by the Act shall apply to all sums, being capital or in the nature of capital, received or recovered by the Council under this Scheme.

75.—(1) The operation of—

(a) any byelaws, orders or regulations which are in force in the Area; and

(b) such of the enactments contained in local Acts in force in the Area as might, by virtue of any Act of Parliament, have been made in relation to the Area by means of a byelaw, order or regulation not requiring confirmation by Parliament, is hereby suspended, so far as the said byelaws, orders, regulations or enactments are similar to, or inconsistent with, any of the provisions of this Scheme :

Provided that nothing in this Sub-clause shall be construed as authorising the suspension of any byelaws or enactments prescribing space about buildings.

See the notes on pages 42 and 76 [ante, pp. 4006, 4028] recommending the repeal of any byelaws made under the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928, or the Advertisement Regulation Acts.

The proviso relating to byelaws prescribing the space about buildings is inserted in order to make it clear that on this point the provisions of the Scheme are additional and not alternative to those of the byelaws. This is particularly important where the replacement of existing buildings is concerned, since the Scheme requirements can be enforced against them only at risk of a claim to compensation.

(2) The operation of Sections 33 and 34 of the Public Health Act, 1925 (a), in relation to streets or parts of streets for the widening of which land is reserved in Part I or Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands), and of Section 5 of the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 (a), in relation to streets or proposed streets or parts thereof upon which a building line is shown on the Map by a broken red line or is fixed under Clause 22 (Fixing of building line for new street not shown on Map), Clause 23 (Fixing of building line for existing street for which no building line is shown on Map) or Clause 25 (Modification of building lines where a standard width is adopted under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935 (b)) is hereby suspended, in so far as those enactments are similar to, or inconsistent with, any of the provisions of this Scheme.

76. The Borough [District] Council shall keep, so as to be available for inspection at all reasonable times by any person interested, a register of consents, permissions, approvals or authorities granted by them or on appeal from their decision under any provision of this Scheme, and of any conditions imposed or agreed between the Council and the applicant in connection therewith.

If the alternative Sub-clauses to Clause 4 (No. 1, Appendix II) are to be inserted in the Scheme in lieu of parts of Clause 4 in the main body, a reference to " any Council who are a Responsible Authority " should be substituted for " them " in line 4 and the following paragraph added to the end :—

> The County Council shall for this purpose supply the Borough [District] Council with the necessary particulars of any approval, consent, authority or permission granted by them or on appeal from their decision, and of any conditions imposed or agreed between them and any applicant in connection therewith.

77. In the case of a claim made under paragraph (a) of Subsection (1) of Section 18 or Subsection (1) of Section 21 of the Act in respect of injurious affection or increase in value of property due to the exercise by the Council of a power contained in one of the undermentioned Clauses of this Scheme :

Sub-clauses (1) and (2) of Clause 14 (Land adjoining sites of streets) ;
Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners) ;
Clause 19 (Communicating streets) ;
Clause 21 (Division or stopping up of highways) ;
Sub-clause (1) of Clause 22 (Fixing of building line for new street not shown on Map) ;
Clause 23 (Fixing of building line for existing street for which no building line is shown on Map) ;
Sub-clause (3) of Clause 25 (Modification of building lines where a standard width is adopted under the Restriction of Ribbon Development Act, 1935) ;
Clause 46 (Siting of buildings) ;
Sub-clause (1) of Clause 49 (Preservation of trees) ;
Clause 58 (Power to prohibit alterations, etc., of existing and certain other buildings) ;

the proviso to Clause 66 (Application of Scheme to development uncompleted at commencement of Scheme), the period within which the claim may be made shall be :

(a) in the case of the diversion or stopping up of a highway or any portion thereof, a period of twelve months from the date on which the diversion or stopping up takes place ;

(b) in the case of entry on land by the Council under the powers conferred on them by Clause 14, a period of twelve months from the date of entry ; and

(c) in any other case, but subject in cases falling under Sub-clause (1) of Clause 22, Clause 23 and Sub-clause (3) of Clause 25 to the provisions of Subsection (3) of Section 22 of the Act, a period of twelve months from the date on which the Council notify the claimant or the person against whom the claim is made, as the case may be, of the exercise by them of the power or, if an appeal lies and has been made against the exercise of the power, a period of twelve months from the date of the decision on the appeal.

78. No compensation shall be payable under paragraph (a) of Subsection (1) of Section 18 of the Act in respect of the injurious affection of property by the coming into operation of any of the undermentioned provisions of this Scheme :

The terms of Section 19 of the Act should be carefully considered when this Clause is being prepared.

Clause 16 (Number and sites of new streets to enter classified roads) [except in relation to the following lands, namely]

The words in square brackets will only be required where restrictions have been included which must be subject to compensation.

Sub-clause (1) of Clause 24 (Effect of building line), in its application to land which at no time within the period of five years immediately preceding the material date was or formed part of the site of a building [except as applied to]

The words in square brackets will only be required if representations have successfully been made under Section 19 (2) (v) of the Act.

Clause 27 (Prevention of obstruction to view at corners and bends) ;

Part IV (Building Restrictions and Use of Land) except Clause 46 (Siting of buildings) ;

Clause 53 (Provision of loading accommodation).

79.—(1) A person who has paid any sum required to be paid under Section 21 of the Act in respect of betterment, or has advanced money for that purpose, may apply to the Council for a Charging Order, and on production of the receipt for the sum so paid the Council shall make an Order charging on the land an annuity to repay the amount.

(2) The annuity charged shall be such annual sum as will repay the said amount by equal instalments of principal and interest combined in a period of thirty years, interest being calculated at the same rate as that which, at the date when the charge is made, is the rate of interest fixed by the Treasury for the purposes of Subsection (6) of Section 21 of the Act, and shall commence from the date of the Order, and be payable to the person named in such Order, his executors, administrators or assigns.

(3) A charge made under this Clause shall be a land charge within the meaning of the Land Charges Act, 1925, as amended by any subsequent enactment, and may be registered accordingly.

(4) The provisions of Section 21 of the Housing Act, 1936 (a), as amended by any subsequent enactment, shall apply to charges created under this Clause.

(5) Charging Orders and transfers of charges may be made under this Clause according to the forms A and B in the Seventh Schedule to this Scheme or in any other convenient form.

80.—(1) The Borough [District] Council shall be responsible for the maintenance of the register of owners and associations compiled under Sub-section (4) of Section 7 of the Act (hereinafter referred to as " the register ").

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(2) The Borough [District] Council shall, on application in writing being made to them, grant facilities for the inspection of the register by the County Council, or by any joint committee, or authority making, preparing or adopting a scheme, varying scheme, supplementary scheme, supplementary order or general development order, in respect of land in the Borough [District] and for making copies of any entries in the register in respect of the said land.

(3) Where in pursuance of any provision of this Scheme notice by advertisement in a newspaper is given by the Council of anything done or proposed to be done, or any action taken or proposed to be taken under the Scheme, the provisions of Subsection (7) of Section 7 of the Act shall apply so as to require the service by the Council of a copy of the notice on every person whose name and address appear in the register in respect of any property affected by the matter of which notice is given and on every association whose name and address appear in the register.

Alternative Clauses 80 and 81 (Nos. 8 and 9, Appendix II) in regard to registers and to the inspection of the Scheme should be substituted for this Clause and Clause 81 where a Scheme extends to two or more boroughs or districts.

81. The Borough [District] Council shall permit any person to inspect at any reasonable time the Scheme, the duplicate of the Map deposited in the offices of the Borough [District] Council, the agreements of which particulars are set out in the Fifth Schedule to this Scheme, the permissions specified in paragraph (b) of Clause 66 (Application of Scheme to development uncompleted at commencement of Scheme), and any consents given by statutory undertakers under Section 41 of the Act.

See note to Clause 80.

82. A notice or other document which the Council are required or authorised to serve under this Scheme may be served—

(a) in the case of a person or association whose name and address are registered under Subsection (6) of Section 7 of the Act, by delivering it or sending it by prepaid post at or to the address so registered ; and

(b) in any other case—

(i) by delivering it at the residence of the person on whom it is to be served or sending it by prepaid post addressed to that person at his residence ; or

(ii) if the notice or document is to be served on an incorporated company or body, by delivering it to the secretary or clerk of the company or body at their registered or principal office, or sending it by prepaid post addressed to the secretary or clerk of the company or body at that office ; or

(iii) if the Council are unable after reasonable inquiry to ascertain the name or address of the person upon whom it should be served, by addressing it to him by the description of " owner " or " occupier " of the premises (naming them) to which it relates, and by delivering it to some person on the premises, or, if there is no person on the premises to whom it can be delivered, by affixing it or a copy thereof to some conspicuous part of the premises.

83.—(1) Nothing in this Scheme shall operate to prevent development by a local authority—

(i) under powers conferred on the authority by an Act of Parliament or by an Order which has been approved by resolution of each House of Parliament on land specified in the Act or Order ; or

(ii) which has been approved by the Minister either expressly or by way of sanction to a loan or consent to the appropriation of land for the purpose, and in connection with which the local authority, or another local authority on their behalf, have, before the date of application for approval or at such later date as the Minister may permit, notified the Council of the intended application or the application, as the case may be, and notified the Minister that this has been done.

(2) In this Clause " local authority " includes any authority which has power to levy, or issue a precept for, a rate for public purposes, and any statutory committee constituted by any such authority or of which it is a constituent member.

84. Nothing in this Scheme shall authorise the execution of any works whether of construction, demolition or alteration on, over or under tidal lands below high-water mark of ordinary spring tides, except with the consent of any persons whose consent would have been required if the Scheme had not come into operation, and except in accordance with such plans and sections, and subject to such restrictions and conditions as, previous to such works being commenced, have been approved by the Board of Trade in writing under the hand of one of the secretaries or assistant secretaries of the Board of Trade.

85. It is hereby declared that in relation to land which is for the time being—

(a) vested in or in the occupation of the Crown; or

(b) under the control of, or occupied by, or vested in, any public department for public purposes or for the public service, the provisions of this Scheme, except in so far as those provisions [are incorporated in and enforceable by virtue of an agreement made under Sections 33 and 34 of the Act between and dated or may be incorporated in any other agreement entered into under those Sections] by any public department, are not enforceable against the Crown or public department and, except as aforesaid in so far as their enforcement would affect the interests of the Crown or department, are not enforceable against any person occupying the land as lessee or tenant of the Crown or department.

It is not necessary to ascertain whether or not there are Crown lands in the Area. The Clause should be inserted even if there are no such lands at the time of the preparation of the Scheme.

Unless an agreement under Sections 33 and 34 has actually been entered into the words in square brackets should be omitted and the following words substituted:

"may be incorporated in an agreement entered into under Sections 33 and 34 of the Act."

86. It is hereby declared that no provision contained in this Scheme with respect to buildings applies in relation to any building or the erection of any building which is, or is to be, occupied together with land which is used mainly or exclusively for agriculture, whether as arable, meadow, pasture ground or orchard, or for the purposes of a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, and is, or is to be, used for any of those purposes, except a building whose site is reserved under Part II of the Scheme for a purpose the carrying out of which in the future would necessitate the removal or the alteration of the building.

See Section 12 (3) of the Act.

87. Nothing in Part IV or Part V of this Scheme shall be construed as prohibiting or controlling, or enabling the Council to prohibit or control, the erection or use of structures for the purpose of advertising, save as provided by Clause 52 (Advertisements).

88.—(1) Notwithstanding the stopping up or diversion of any highway or footpath or any portion thereof under this Scheme, the Postmaster-General shall continue to have the same powers and rights in regard to any telegraphic line which remains in, under, upon, over, along or across the site of the said highway or footpath as if the same had continued to be a highway or footpath, as the case may be:

Provided that, if the Council or the person in whom the soil of the said highway or footpath is vested desires to alter such telegraphic line, the enactments of Section 7 of the Telegraph Act, 1878, shall thereupon apply in all respects as though the Council or the said person, as the case may be, were undertakers within the meaning of that Act.

(2) Expressions in this Clause have the same meaning as in the Telegraph Act, 1878.

89. The Borough [District] Council or the County Council may make supplementary orders or adopt, with or without modifications, supplementary orders proposed by owners of land, in accordance with the provisions of the Regulations, for supplementing the provisions of this Scheme as respects any part of the Area, by adding to it provisions with respect to any matters for which provision may be made by a scheme and for varying it in so far as may be necessary or expedient.

See Section 14 of the Act.

"Development" in relation to any land includes any building operations or rebuilding operations, and any use of the land or any building thereon for a purpose which is different from the purpose for which the land or building was last being used:

Provided that—

(i) the use of land for the purpose of agriculture, whether as arable, meadow, pasture ground or orchard, or for the purposes of a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, and the use for any of those purposes of any building occupied together with land so used, shall not be deemed to be a development of that land or building; and

(ii) the use of land within the curtilage of a dwelling-house for any fresh purpose other than building operations shall not be deemed to be a development of that land if the purpose is incidental to the enjoyment of the dwelling-house as such;

"Fence" and "hedge" have respectively the same meanings as in the Roads Improvement Act, 1925 [The effect of these definitions is that "fence" includes any hoarding or paling and "hedge" includes any tree or shrub whether forming part of a hedge or not];

"Land" includes land covered with water and any right in or over land;

"Minerals" includes all minerals and substances in or under land of a kind ordinarily worked for removal by underground or by surface working;

"Owner" in relation to any land means a person, other than a mortgagee not in possession, who is for the time being entitled to dispose of the fee simple of the land, or of any term of years therein granted or agreed to be granted by a lease or agreement the unexpired term whereof exceeds three years;

"Road" includes a drift-way and a footway;

"Statutory undertakers" means any person authorised by or under an Act of Parliament, or an order having the force of an Act of Parliament, to construct, work, or carry on any railway, canal, inland navigation, dock, harbour, tramway, gas, electricity, water, or other public undertaking;

(i) erected, constructed or carried out in pursuance of a contract made before the material date; or

(ii) begun before, but completed after, that date; or

(iii) erected, constructed or carried out in accordance with the terms of an interim development order, whether made under this Act or any Act repealed by this Act, or of permission granted under such an order:

Provided that—

(a) a building erected or constructed in substitution for a previous building in accordance with the provisions of the scheme relating to substituted buildings shall be deemed to be an existing building; and

(b) a building shall not cease to be, or to be deemed to be, an existing building by reason of its alteration or extension in accordance with the provisions of the scheme relating to the alteration or extension of existing buildings, and any such alteration or extension shall itself be deemed to be part of the existing building;

"Existing use" means, in relation to any building or land, a use of that building or land for any purpose of the same or a similar character to that for which it was last used before the material date, or, in the case of a newly erected building which has not been used before that date, a use for any purpose for which it was designed, and includes in any case any use of a building or land permitted by or under an interim development order, whether made under this Act or any Act repealed by this Act:

Provided that—

(i) if at any time after the material date the existing use of a building is discontinued for a period of eighteen months, no use of that building at any subsequent date shall be deemed to be an existing use thereof;

APPENDIX II.

ALTERNATIVE AND SUPPLEMENTARY CLAUSES.

1. Alternative Clause 4 (Responsible Authorities).

Sub-clause (1) is inserted to promote co-operation between the County Council and the Borough or District Council in regard to estate development and claims for compensation and betterment. For example, a developer may be willing to give up land for the widening of a county road as part of an agreement relating generally to the layout of the estate behind the road.

In the application of the Clause to a rural district the amendments set out in the note on page 8 [ante, p. 3990] should be made. In addition the second half of paragraph (a) of Sub-clause (1) (after the words Responsible Authority in line 5 (a)) should be deleted, as the condition under which the Rural District Council will exercise their powers under Clauses 18 to 22 will already have been settled in the agreement made under Sub-clause (3).

These powers will be exercised concurrently with the powers under the byelaws with respect to new streets and therefore should be delegated in all cases. As regards the agency arrangements see the note on Clause 4.

If it is desired to delegate further powers to the Borough or District Council after the Scheme comes into operation, this can be done under Section 274 of the Local Government Act, 1933 (b).

(1) Except as hereafter in this Clause provided the Borough (District) Council shall be the authority responsible for enforcing and carrying into effect the provisions of the Scheme subject to the following restrictions:

(a) With a view to facilitating development or the negotiation of a claim for compensation or betterment the County Council amy join with the Borough (District) Council in entering into an agreement with any person with regard to matters in respect of which the Borough (District) Council are the Responsible Authority, and if the agreement contains any provision relating to the exercise by the Borough (District) Council of their powers under Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners), Clause 19 (Communicating streets) or Clause 22 (Fixing of building line for new street not shown on Map) and if it appears to the County Council that the manner in which those powers are exercised is likely to affect the rights or liabilities of the County Council in connection with a claim for compensation or betterment, the Borough (District) Council shall not refuse unreasonably to join in the agreement.

(b) Any question whether or not the Borough (District) Council have unreasonably refused to join in an agreement shall be decided by the Minister, and if the Minister decides that the refusal was unreasonable the agreement shall, as soon as it is executed by the County Council, become binding upon the Borough (District) Council as though they had been joined as a party thereto.

(3) The powers and duties of the County Council in relation to roads chargeable to the county in the following Clauses, namely:

Clause 18 (Construction of streets by owners);
Clause 19 (Communicating streets);
Clause 20 (Notice of commencement and completion of streets);
Clause 22 (Fixing of building line for new street not shown on Map), shall be deemed to have been delegated by the County Council to the Borough (District) Council subject to such conditions as have been agreed between the two Councils or to such other conditions as may from time to time be agreed between them or in default of agreement as the Minister may on the application of either Council determine.

2. Supplementary Clause 7A. (Acquisition of land for cemeteries.)

7A. Land reserved in the foregoing Table for cemeteries may be purchased by the Council, whether by agreement or compulsorily, under and in accordance with the provisions of Section 25 of the Act, and the Council shall have the like powers and duties in regard to any land so reserved, when acquired by them, as if the land had been acquired under the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879 (a).

See the note on Clause 5.

3. Amendments to be made where it is decided to include special provisions as to underground working of minerals.

See the note on Clause 6 (3).

Where these amendments are included, provision can be made, if desired, for increasing the distance prescribed in Section 78 of the Railways Clauses Act (b), and for specifying the dimensions of airways, etc., for the purpose of Section 80 of the Act as applied.

Clause 2. (Part I—Interpretation.) Add (after the definition of "the Act")—

"the Railways Clauses Act" means the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, as originally enacted.

Clause 6 (6). (Buildings, etc., not to be erected on reserved land.) Add—

"or any excavation made in connection with the winning of minerals by underground working."

Clause 6A. Add new Clause as follows:

6A. With respect to minerals lying under or near any land reserved for streets by Clause 5 (Reservation of lands), or under any street constructed on land so reserved, Sections 78 to 85 of the Railways Clauses Act are incorporated in this Scheme with the following modifications:

(i) The said Sections shall be construed as if the expression "The Company" referred to the Council, the expression "railway" referred to land reserved for streets by the Scheme or a street constructed on land so reserved, the expression "the special Act" referred to this Scheme, and the word "prescribed" meant prescribed by the Scheme.

(ii) The Council, by or with any notice under the said Sections of willingness to treat for or make compensation or of intention to prevent or interfere with the working of any mines, may specify and define the nature and extent of the support which they require to be left.

(iii) Any reference to compensation or the payment of the amount of losses or expenses, or to the assessment of compensation or the amount of losses or expenses, in the said Sections shall be read as a reference to compensation or to the assessment of compensation as provided for in the Act and in this Scheme.

Nothing in this Clause shall apply to the winning of minerals by surface working.

Clause 77. (Time for claiming compensation or betterment.) Add new Sub-clauses (2) and (3) as follows:

(2) Where the claim arises under Section 78 of the Railways Clauses Act as applied by Clause 6A (Special provisions as to underground minerals), the claim may be made within twelve months from the date on which the Council shall notify the owner, lessee or occupier of the mines or minerals of the willingness of the Council to pay compensation in respect of all mines and minerals which the Council may require to be left for support.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

[Further amendments to be made where it is decided to include special provision as to underground working of minerals—

Sub-clause (2) to be amended as follows:

Where the claim arises under Section 78 of the Railways Clauses Act as applied by Clause 6A the claim may be made within twelve months from the date on which the Council shall notify the owner, lessee or occupier of the mines or minerals of the willingness of the Council to pay compensation in respect of all mines and minerals which the Council may require to be left for support.]

(3) Where the claim arises under Section 81 or Section 82 of the Railways Clauses Act, as applied by Clause 6A (Special provisions as to underground minerals), the claim shall be made within twelve months from the date on which the expense, loss or damage referred to in those Sections was incurred or suffered.

4. Alternative Clauses 15 and 17 for use where Section 150, etc., of the Public Health Act, 1875, is in operation.

15. If the Council decide to execute street works under the power conferred on them by Sub-clause (1) of Clause 13 (Execution of street works on reserved land) upon any land reserved in Part II of the Table in Clause 5 (Reservation of lands) and the land has become a private street by virtue of Clause 12 (Sites of new streets and widenings) Sections 150, 151 and 257 of the Act of 1875 (a) shall in relation to streets or proposed streets which are roads chargeable to the country within the meaning of Clause 4 (Responsible Authorities) apply as though the County Council were an urban authority under those Sections and shall in any case apply subject to the following modifications, as though they were incorporated in this Clause, and the Council had decided to execute the works under Section 150:

(1) The Council shall not be entitled to apportion—

(i) any sum in respect of the execution of street works for the purpose of widening an existing highway of which the width is equal to or greater than the width of a byelaw street; or

(ii) a sum in excess of the cost of a standard street made on the site of the street;

(2) Any dispute arising under paragraph (1) of this Clause shall be determined in the manner provided by the Act of 1875 for the determination of disputes as to recovery of expenses of private street works under that Act;

(3) If the land so reserved and becoming a private street in manner aforesaid abuts on and is intended to form the site of a widening of an existing highway, and the existing highway is less in width than a byelaw street, the part of the existing highway upon which the land abuts shall as to its whole width be deemed to be part of the private street;

(4) As soon as the Council have made the street, it shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large;

(5) (i) No expenses apportioned under the Act of 1875 against land or buildings which at the time of apportionment are agricultural land or buildings within the meaning of Section 67 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (b), shall be recoverable until the land or buildings cease to be agricultural land or buildings as aforesaid;

(d) the erection of which is permitted under Clause 57 (Replacement of existing and certain other buildings); and the amount recoverable shall in any case be limited to so much of the apportioned sum as is properly attributable to the land forming the site of the building.

Interest shall not be payable to the Council on any money in respect of a period during which under this Clause the money is irrecoverable.

The County Council shall pay over to the Borough (District) Council any moneys received by them from frontagers in respect of, or properly attributable to, the construction of the sewer, but shall be entitled to deduct any expenses reasonably incurred by them in the recovery of the said moneys.

PART II.

Existing or intended classified roads on which no new street entrances are to be allowed without the consent of the Council except on land reserved for streets.

(3) The Council may permit the entry into a road or proposed road specified in Part II of Table B of a new street which is required to provide temporary access from neighbouring land to the said road or proposed road pending the construction on land reserved for streets, or the entry with the consent of the Council in accordance with the provisions of the last preceding Sub-clause, of a street which will provide permanent access from the said land to the said road or proposed road.

Any street constructed to provide such temporary access is hereby declared to be diverted or stopped up and all public rights therein are declared to cease as from the date on which the street providing permanent access as aforesaid is constructed to the satisfaction of the Council and opened for public traffic.

(4) If the Council refuse consent to the laying out or making of a new street under Sub-clause (2) of this Clause any person who is aggrieved by the Council's decision on the ground that he is deprived thereby of a reasonable means of access from neighbouring land to a highway (in this Clause referred to as "the applicant") may submit representations in writing to the Minister together with a plan on a scale of not less than six inches to the mile showing the land, existing highways in the vicinity of the land, the highway to which access has been refused, and the new street to which the Council have refused consent.

(6) (a) If the Minister decides that any such representations are unjustified, he shall confirm the Council's refusal of consent and notify the applicant and the Council accordingly.

(b) If the Minister decides that the representations are justified, he shall so inform the Council and the applicant, and the Council may, if they think fit, withdraw their refusal of consent and shall within one month from the date of receiving notice of the Minister's decision notify the applicant and the Minister whether or not they withdraw their refusal of consent.

(c) If the Council decide not to withdraw their refusal of consent the applicant shall not be entitled to lay out or make the proposed new street and Subsection (1) of Section 18 of the Act enabling compensation to be claimed shall apply.

(d) If the Council fail to notify the applicant and the Minister of their decision as required by paragraph (b) above, or if they decide to withdraw their refusal of consent, they shall be deemed to have given a consent under Sub-clause (2) of this Clause.

(7) For the purposes of this Clause a new street does not include a new street not intended for use as a carriageway.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

Clause 77. (Time for claiming compensation or betterment.) Add—

(1) Sub-clause (6) (b) of Clause 16 (Number and sites of new streets to enter classified roads);

(2) new paragraph between (b) and (c) as follows:

(c) in the case of a decision of the Council under Sub-clause (6) (b) of Clause 16 (Number and sites of new streets to enter classified roads) not to withdraw a refusal of consent, a period of twelve months from the date on which the applicant is notified by the Council of their decision; and

Clause 78 (Exclusion of claims for compensation). Substitute for paragraph relating to Clause 16—

Clause 16 (Number and sites of new streets to enter classified roads) except in a case where the Council decide under Sub-clause (6) (b) of the Clause not to withdraw a refusal of consent;

6. Supplementary Clause 38A. (Minimum frontages.)

If it is decided to require minimum frontages, it is desirable to keep the minimum figure fairly low in order to allow for the variety of possible circumstances. The following minima are suggested:

Density.	Minimum frontage.
8	25 feet.
6	30 feet.
4	40 feet.
2	60 feet.

It is not ordinarily thought worth while to prescribe minimum frontages in the 12 and 10 density zones, as not more than 22 feet can reasonably be insisted on—and that is scarcely more than the normal width of the small house plus the "break" already required under Clause 43 (Breaks in buildings). In addition provisio (b) hardly makes sufficient allowance to meet the case of the block in excess of four houses which is normally allowed in the higher density zones.

As already pointed out on page 60 [ante, p. 4018] compensation cannot be excluded for these restrictions and if the Clause is included the words "Clause 38A(Minimum frontages) and" must be inserted between "except" and "Clause 46 (Siting of buildings)" after the reference to Part IV in Clause 78 (Exclusion of claims for compensation).

38A. Except where under Sub-clause (2) or Sub-clause (4) of Clause 37 (Number of dwelling-houses which may be erected) the Council permit an increase in the number of dwelling-houses which may be erected, no dwelling-house shall be erected on a site having a frontage to the street or proposed street forming or intended to form the principal means of access to such dwelling-house, measuring less than—

Provided that—

(a) the Council shall have power to allow the erection of dwelling-houses on sites having a less frontage than is required by the foregoing provisions where the buildings are arranged to the satisfaction of the Council;

(b) where it is proposed to erect dwelling-houses in a continuous block in accordance with Sub-clause (1) or Sub-clause (3) (a) of Clause 43 (Breaks in buildings) it shall be sufficient if the combined frontages of the sites occupied by the said dwelling-houses are not less than would have been required by this Clause if the dwelling-houses had not been erected in a continuous block.

7. Supplementary Clause 47A. (Protection of aerodrome.)

This Clause is based on the Air Ministry Pamphlet 76, "Principles governing the Planning and Zoning of Land Aerodromes" (price 6*d*.). The technical expressions used in the Clause are further described in the Pamphlet.

[1] The "aerodrome" should include the landing and neutral areas, and unless already acquired, these should be shown as reserved for use as an aerodrome in Clause 5, Table A. Land must also be reserved for the aerodrome buildings, but this should be shown as a separate reservation in Clause 5, and broad hatched light grey.

[2] The inner, middle and outer circles should be drawn in black and marked, also in black, "inner circle," etc.

[3] This Clause should be included among the exceptions in paragraph (c) of Sub-clause (1) of Model Clause 62 so that the Council may have two months in which to give consent.

[4] Reference to this Clause should be included in the final paragraph of Model Clause 28, so that "building" will include a structure or erection. It will also be necessary to expand Model Clause 86 so that the height restrictions will apply to those buildings. This can be done by adding a reference to Clause 47A after that to Part II of the Scheme.

(1) For the purposes of this Clause—

"the aerodrome" [1] means the land coloured light grey and edged green on the Map;

"the mean level of the aerodrome" means a height of feet above Ordnance Datum;

a "flightway" means land adjoining the aerodrome which is edged and fine hatched black on the Map;

a "runway" means land within the aerodrome oblong in shape and outlined by solid and broken green lines;

"the inner area" means the land between the aerodrome and the inner circle [2] on the Map;

"the middle area" means the land between the inner and the middle circles on the Map;

"the outer area" means the land between the middle and the outer circles on the Map;

"the low visibility approach areas" mean the pieces of land adjoining the outer edge of the outer area which are edged black on the Map.

(2) Except with the consent of the Council, which shall not be given without the prior approval of the Secretary of State for Air,[3] no building [4] shall be erected—

(a) within any flightway so as to project above a line drawn from the nearest point on the appropriate runway (that is to say, the runway in direct line with the said flightway) at an angle of 3° 45′ (corresponding to a slope of 1 in 15) from the horizontal, provided that where two flightways overlap the height applicable should be the lower of the two ascertained in accordance with this provision; or

(b) within the inner area so as to exceed a maximum height of thirty-five feet; or

(c) within the middle area so as to exceed a maximum height of one hundred feet; or

(d) within the outer area so as to exceed a height of two hundred feet; or

(e) within the low visibility approach areas so as to exceed a height of four hundred feet.

(3) (a) Where the Council consider that the whole or part of any tree, bush or shrub within any flightway or area referred to in the preceding Sub-clause extends beyond the height to which the erection of a building would be permitted on the same place under the said Sub-clause, and that in the interests of safety such tree, bush or shrub should be cut down or reduced in height, they may serve on the owner or occupier of the land a notice containing a requirement that the said tree, bush or shrub be cut down or reduced in height within the time and in the manner specified in the notice and a statement that, in the event of the work not being undertaken within the time so specified, the Council will enter upon the land for the purpose of carrying it out.

(b) Any person upon whom a notice is served under this Sub-clause shall have power, notwithstanding anything in any conveyance or in any lease or other agreement, to do all such things as may be necessary for complying with the requirements of the notice.

(c) Any person upon whom a notice is served under this Sub-clause shall be entitled to recover from the Responsible Authority any expenses reasonably incurred by him in carrying out any directions contained in the notice.

(d) In the event of the requirement contained in the notice not being complied with, the Council may thereupon enter upon the land and cut down or reduce in height the said tree, bush or shrub, to such extent as may be necessary in the interests of safety.

(e) If within four clear days from the date of service of the notice aforesaid the owner or occupier of the land notifies the Council in writing that he objects to the action proposed by them on the ground that the tree, bush or shrub, to which the notice refers, does not extend beyond the height specified above, the objection shall, unless it is settled by agreement, be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the Minister and the decision of the arbitrator shall be final.

(f) The Council shall not take any action under the aforesaid notice until the expiration of the period allowed by this Sub-clause for the making of objections.

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING

(4) For the purposes of this Clause height shall be measured from the mean level of the aerodrome to the highest point of the building, tree, bush or shrub.

8. Alternative Clause 80. (Maintenance of registers and supply of copies of notices.)

80.—(1) As soon as may be after the Scheme comes into operation, and in any case within one month thereafter, the Council shall divide the register of owners and associations compiled under Subsection (4) of Section 7 of the Act (hereinafter referred to as " the register ") into portions, in such manner that there shall be one portion in respect of each district or part of a district within the Area of the Scheme, and that each portion shall contain the names and addresses of all persons registered in respect of property within the district or part of a district to which it relates, and the names and addresses of all registered associations.

The Council shall thereupon transfer the several portions of the register, other than the portion relating to their own district, to the Councils of the respective districts to which those portions relate, and the Council of each district shall thereupon be responsible for the maintenance of the register for that district or part of that district.

(2) Each Council having custody of a portion of the register shall, on application in writing being made to them, grant facilities for the inspection of that portion of the register by the County Council, or by any Council who are a Responsible Authority under this Scheme, or by any joint committee or authority making, preparing or adopting a scheme, varying scheme, supplementary scheme, supplementary order or general development order in respect of land in the district of that Council, and for making copies of any entries in that portion of the register in respect of the said land.

(3) Where in pursuance of any provision of this Scheme notice by advertisement in a newspaper is given by the Council of anything done or proposed to be done, or any action taken or proposed to be taken under the Scheme, the provisions of Subsection (7) of Section 7 of the Act shall apply so as to require the service by the Council of a copy of the notice on every person whose name and address appear in the register in respect of any property affected by the matter of which notice is given and on every association whose name and address appear in the register.

9. Alternative Clause 81. (Inspection of Scheme.)

81.—(1) The Council shall permit any Council who are a Responsible Authority under this Scheme or any person to inspect at any reasonable time the Scheme, the duplicate of the Map deposited in the offices of the Council, the agreements of which particulars are set out in the Fifth Schedule to this Scheme, the permissions specified in paragraph (b) of Clause 66 (Application of Scheme to development uncompleted at commencement of Scheme) and any consents given by statutory undertakers under Section 41 of the Act.

(2) A certified copy of the Map so far as it relates to the part of the Area within the district of any Council who are a Responsible Authority under this Scheme shall be furnished to that Council by the Council, and each of those Councils shall cause the copy of the Map so furnished to them and a copy of the Scheme to be deposited at their offices, and shall permit any person to inspect such copies at any reasonable time.

means of a bridge, or otherwise affecting or interfering with such railway, tramway, or canal, notice in writing of such application shall be served upon the owner or reputed owner and upon the lessee or reputed lessee of such railway, tramway or canal, and such notice shall state the place or places at which the plans of the tramway to be authorised by such Provisional Order have been or will be deposited.

Similar notice must also be given to county councils and to proprietors of navigable rivers in respect of their bridges or other works which are proposed to be crossed or otherwise interfered with.

Every notice under this Rule must be accompanied by a copy of Rule XVII., omitting the first paragraph, and must state where copies of the draft Provisional Order, when deposited at the Board of Trade, can be obtained.

RULE VII. When the promoters make application for an extension of time for the construction of, or for authority to abandon, any tramway, they must on or before the 15th day of December, serve notice of such application upon all the local and road authorities affected.

RULE VIII. The preceding advertisement and notices, other than the street notice, must state that every company, corporation, or person desirous of making any representation to the Board of Trade, or of bringing before them any objection respecting the application, may do so by letter, addressed to the assistant secretary of the Railway Department of the Board of Trade, on or before the 15th January next ensuing; that copies of their objections must at the same time be sent to the promoters; and that in forwarding to the Board of Trade such objections the objectors or their agents should state that a copy of the same has been sent to the promoters or their agents.

RULE IX. On or before the 15th day of December immediately preceding the application for a Provisional Order, notice in writing must be given to the owners or reputed owners, lessees or reputed lessees, and occupiers of all houses, shops, or warehouses abutting upon any part of any street or road where, for a distance of thirty feet or upwards, it is proposed that a less space than nine feet six inches shall intervene between the outside of the footpath on either side of the road and the nearest rail of the tramway.

This notice should be given in respect of such premises on both sides of the road, and must contain a notification that if such owner, lessee, or occupier dissents from the tramway being so laid, he may express his dissent by a statement in writing, addressed to the assistant secretary of the Railway Department of the Board of Trade, on or before the 1st January next ensuing, and that he must at the same time send a copy of his dissent to the promoters.

RULE X. A published map of the district on a scale of not less than six inches to a mile (or, if no map on such a scale be published, then the best map obtainable), with the line of the proposed tramway marked thereon, and a diagram on a scale of not less than two inches to the mile prepared in accordance with the specimen appended to these rules, must also be deposited on or before the 30th of November.

RULE XI. The plans to be deposited must also comply with the following requirements:—

The plans shall indicate whether it is proposed to lay the tramway along the centre of any street or road, and if not along the centre, then on which side of, and at what distance from, an imaginary line drawn along the centre of such street or road, and whether or not, and if so, at what point or points, it is proposed to lay such tramway, or that for a distance of thirty feet or upwards a less space than nine feet six inches, or if it is intended to run thereon carriages or trucks adapted for use upon railways, a less space than ten feet six inches, shall intervene between the outside of the footpath on either side of the street or road and the nearest rail of the tramway.

All lengths shall be stated on the plan and section in miles, furlongs, chains, and decimals of a chain.

The distance in miles and furlongs from one of the termini of each tramway shall be marked on the plan and section.

Each double portion of tramway, whether a passing-place or otherwise, shall be indicated by a double line.

The total length of the street or road upon which each tramway is to be laid shall be stated (i.e., the length of route of each tramway).

The length of each double and single portion of such tramway, and the total length of such double and single portions respectively, shall also be stated.

In the case of double lines (including passing-places), the distance between the centre lines of each line of tramway shall be marked on the plans. This distance must in all cases be sufficient to leave at least 15 inches between the sides of the widest carriage and engines to be used on the tramways when passing one another.

The gradients of the street or road on which each tramway is to be laid shall be marked on the section.

Every crossing of a railway, tramway, river, or canal shall be shown, specifying in the case of railways and tramways whether they are crossed over, under, or on the level.

All tidal waters shall be coloured blue.

All places, where for a distance of 30 feet and upwards there will be a less space than nine feet six inches between the outside of the footpath on either side of the street or road and the nearest rail of the tramway, shall be indicated by a thick dotted line on the plans on the side or sides of the line of tramway where such narrow places occur, as well as noted on the plans, and the width of the street or road at these places shall also be marked on the plans.

NOTE.—The section of each tramway should, where practicable, be shown on the same page as the plan.

RULE XII. The plans to be deposited with the clerk of the peace or sheriff clerk (as the case may be) must be in duplicate. (See Standing Order of the House of Lords and of the House of Commons.)

RULE XIII. In cases where the proposed works are intended to be made in or through one or more parishes or districts, the deposit with the parish clerks or local authorities need consist only of a copy of so much of the plans and sections as relates to their respective parishes or districts.

RULE XIV. The following Standing Orders must also be complied with (a):

"47. WHENEVER plans, sections, books of reference, or maps, are deposited with any Public Department in relation to any Provisional Order or Certificate by which it is proposed to authorise the taking of land or the construction of works, duplicates of the said documents shall also be deposited in the Office of the Clerk of the Parliaments: Provided that with regard to such deposits as are so made after the prorogation of Parliament and before the twentieth day of November in any year such duplicate shall be so deposited on or before the twentieth day of November (b)."

RULE XV. The following documents, etc., must also be deposited at the Board of Trade on or before the 23rd December, viz.:—

(1) A complete list of every railway, tramway, and canal proposed to be crossed or otherwise affected or interfered with, together with the names and addresses of the owners or reputed owners, and of the lessees or reputed lessees thereof, and a certified copy of the notice served upon them.

(2) A complete list of the local and of the road authorities through whose districts the proposed tramway is to pass (including in such list the clerk to the county council in cases where it is proposed to cross county bridges), and if any such district is or forms part of a highway district, under the provisions of the Highway Acts, a statement to that effect must accompany the deposit. Also a separate list of the local and road authorities affected by any application relating to the use of steam or other mechanical power on authorised tramways, or to an extension of time or abandonment; together with a copy of any notice served under Rule VII.

(a) These standing orders refer to amended as well as to original plans. They are Rule 47 (Lords) and Rule 49 (Commons), which have been inserted in their latest form instead of as originally printed in these Rules.

(b) This is Standing Order 47 of the House of Lords: S.O. 49 of the House of Commons is the same, except that the words "Committee and Private Bill Office" are substituted for the words "Office of the Clerk of the Parliaments."

DRAFT PROVISIONAL ORDER.

RULE XVI. The following rules must be observed in regard to the draft Provisional Order:—

(1) The draft Provisional Order must be deposited in triplicate and be printed on one side only of the page, so as to leave the back of the page blank, and any schedule annexed must begin a new page.

(2) The draft Provisional Order must describe where each tramway is to commence and terminate, and must state the streets and roads along which it is to pass, and the total length of the double and single portions respectively of such tramway in miles, furlongs, chains, and decimals of a chain.

(3) Each double and single portion of such tramway, with its commencement and termination, must also be described. (This can be done by stating that each line or branch line will be double or single throughout, except at certain specified places where it will be single or double.)

(5) In cases where the promoters are individuals their addresses as well as names should be inserted in the draft Order.

(6) The names and addresses of the agents for the Provisional Order must be printed on the outside of the draft Order, and there must be a notice at the end of it stating that objections are to be addressed to the Assistant Secretary of the Railway Department of the Board of Trade (a) on or before the 15th January next ensuing, that copies of objections must at the same time be sent to the promoters, and that in forwarding to the Board of Trade such objections, the objectors or their agents should state that a copy of the same has been sent to the promoters or their agents.

RULE XVII. The agents should be prepared to prove compliance with the provisions of the Act and these rules by the 15th January, and all such proofs must be completed on or before the 22nd February. Six days' notice will be given of the day and hour at which the agents are to attend for the purpose at the Board of Trade, and printed forms of proof will accompany the notice. These forms should be filled up by the agents, and brought with the requisite documents to the department at the time fixed for proving compliance.

If any local or road authority, or any railway, tramway, or canal company, or any other company, body, or person desire to have any clauses or other amendments inserted in the Order, they must deliver the same to the agents for the Order, and also to the Board of Trade, not later than the 8th February.

On or before the 22nd February the agents must deposit at the Board of Trade a filled up draft printed Order (in duplicate) containing in manuscript all such clauses or other amendments as have been agreed upon.

If any of the clauses or other amendments which have been delivered to the agents are not settled with the consent of both parties the agents must, so far as they can, on or before the 22nd February, show what are the amendments, if any, which each party would be willing to accept.

After the 22nd February no further proposals for clauses will be entertained by the Board of Trade (a).

RULE XVIII. Should any alteration of the plan and section originally deposited for the purposes of the Order be made, with the approval of the Board of Trade, before the Order is granted, a copy of such plan and section (or of so much thereof as may be necessary), showing such alteration, must, before the Order is introduced into a Confirmation Bill, be deposited by the promoters for public inspection :—

In England, in the office of the clerk of the peace for every county, riding, or division, and of the parish clerk of every parish, and the office of the local authority of every district, affected by such alteration ; and

In Scotland, in the office of the principal sheriff clerk, for every county district, or division affected by such alteration.

Copies of such documents are at the same time to be deposited at the office of the Board of Trade in the Office of the Clerk of the Parliaments and at the Private Bill Office.

RULE XIX. When a Provisional Order has been made, and before it is introduced into the Confirmation Bill, the promoters will be required to submit to the Board of Trade the following proofs, viz. :—

(2) A copy of the local newspaper containing the advertisement of the Order. This advertisement must have a short heading stating that the Order has been made by the Board of Trade under the Tramways Act, 1870, previous to its being introduced into a Confirmation Bill, and must also state the name of the office where printed copies of the Order can be obtained.

(3) Proof must also be given that the advertisement Order is a correct copy of the Order delivered by the Board of Trade to be advertised, that it was inserted in the newspaper in which the original advertisement of the application for the Order was published, and that a sufficient number of printed copies of the Order were deposited for sale at the office named in the original advertisement, with a statement of the price for which they may be obtained.

(4) Receipts or proofs by affidavit of the deposit of amended plans as required by Rule XVIII.

Printed forms for these proofs will be furnished by the Board of Trade when the Order is sent to the promoters to be advertised, and one of these forms must be filled by the promoters, and brought or forwarded to the department as soon as possible after the advertisement and deposit have been made.

TRAMWAYS

DEPOSIT OF MONEY, PENALTY FOR NON-COMPLETION OF TRAMWAYS, AND RELEASE OF DEPOSIT.

RULE XX. After the Provisional Order is ready, and before the same is introduced by the Board of Trade into a Confirming Bill, the promoters (unless they are a local authority) shall, if they are not possessed of a tramway already open for public traffic, which has during the year last past paid dividends on their ordinary share capital, pay as a deposit a sum of money not less than five per centum on the amount of the estimate of the expense of the construction of the tramway, as follows; namely,

Where the tramway or any part thereof will be situate in England,—to the account of the Paymaster General for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England to the credit of the particular tramway:

Where the tramway will be situate wholly in Scotland,—either to the account of the Paymaster General for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England in manner aforesaid, or (at the option of the promoters) into a bank in Scotland established by Act of Parliament or Royal Charter, in the name and with the privity of the Queen's Remembrancer of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland ex parte the particular tramway.

The Board of Trade may issue their warrant to the promoters for such payment into court, which warrant shall be a sufficient authority for the persons therein named, not exceeding five in number, or the majority or survivors of them, to pay the money therein mentioned to the account of the Paymaster General for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England or into the bank therein mentioned, in the name and with the privity of the officer therein mentioned, if any, and for that officer to issue directions to such bank to receive the same, to be placed to his account there according to the method (prescribed by statute, or general rules or orders of court or otherwise), for the time being in force respecting the payment of money into the said courts respectively, and without fee or reward.

Provided, that in lieu, wholly or in part, of the payment of money, the promoters may bring into court as a deposit an equivalent sum of bank annuities, or of any stocks, funds, or securities on which cash under the control of the respective courts is for the time being permitted to be invested, or of exchequer bills (the value thereof being taken at the price at which the promoters originally purchased the same, as appearing by the broker's certificate of the purchase; and in that case the Board of Trade shall vary their warrant accordingly by directing the transfer or deposit of such amount of stocks, funds, securities, or exchequer bills by the persons therein named.

Where money is so paid into the Supreme Court of Judicature, the Court may, on the application of the persons named in the warrant of the Board of Trade, or of the majority or survivors of them, order that the same be invested in such stocks, funds, or securities as the applicants desire and the Court thinks fit.

In the subsequent provisions of these rules, the term "the deposit fund" means the money deposited, or the stocks, funds, or securities in which the same is invested, or the bank annuities, stocks, funds, securities, or exchequer bills transferred or deposited, as the case may be; and the term "the depositors" means the persons named in the warrant of the Board of Trade authorising the deposit, or the majority or survivors of those persons, their executors, administrators, or assigns.

RULE XXI. If the promoters empowered by the Order to make the tramway are possessed of a tramway already opened for public traffic, and which has during the year last past paid dividends on their ordinary share capital, no deposit will be required; but if such promoters (unless they are a local authority) do not, within the time in the Order prescribed, or within the time as prolonged by the special direction of the Board of Trade under section 18 of the Tramways Act, 1870, and if none is prescribed, or if the time has not been prolonged as aforesaid, then within two years from the passing of the Act confirming the Order, complete the tramway authorised by the Order, they will be liable to a penalty of £50 a day for every day after the expiration of the period so limited, until the said tramway is completed and opened for public traffic, or until the sum received in respect of such penalty shall amount to five per cent. on the estimated cost of the works; and the said penalty may be applied for by any road authority claiming to be compensated in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII., and in the same manner as the penalty provided in the third section of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, known as the Railway and Canal

Traffic Act, 1854, and every sum of money recovered by way of such penalty as aforesaid shall be paid under the warrant or order of such court or judge as is specified in the said third section of the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, to an account opened or to be opened in the name and with the privity of the Paymaster General for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England [the Queen's Remembrancer of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland (according as the tramway is situate in England or Scotland)], in the bank named in such Order, and shall not be paid thereout, except as provided by Rule XXII., but no penalty will accrue in respect of any time during which it shall appear, by a certificate to be obtained from the Board of Trade, that the promoters were prevented from completing or opening such tramway by unforeseen accident or circumstances beyond their control; Provided, that the want of sufficient funds will not be held to be a circumstance beyond their control.

RULE XXII. Subject to such application as aforesaid, the deposit fund may be repaid or retransferred to the depositors or as they shall direct.

RULE XXIII. The Court in which the deposit is made shall, on the application of the depositors, order the deposit fund to be paid or transferred to the applicants, or as they shall direct, if, within the time by the Order prescribed, or within the time prolonged by the special direction of the Board of Trade under section 18 of the Tramways Act, 1870, and if none is prescribed, or if the time has not been prolonged as aforesaid, then within two years from the passing of the Act confirming the Order, the promoters thereby empowered to make the tramway, complete it, and open it for public traffic after inspection by an inspector appointed by the Board of Trade, and upon a certificate of the Board of Trade that the tramway is fit for public traffic as provided by Rule XXV.; Provided, that if within such time as aforesaid any portion of a line of tramway authorised by an Order is opened for public traffic, after such inspection as aforesaid, and on such certificate under Rule XXV. as aforesaid, then on the production of a certificate of the Board of Trade, specifying the length of the portion of the tramway opened as aforesaid, and the portion of the deposit fund which bears to the whole of the deposit fund proportion as the length of the tramway so opened bears to the entire length of the tramway authorised by the Order the court in which the deposit is made shall, on the application of the depositors, order the said portion of the deposit fund so specified in such certificate as aforesaid to be paid or transferred to them, or as they shall direct.

TRAMWAYS

RULE XXIV. The depositors shall be entitled to receive payment of any interest or dividends from time to time accruing on the deposit fund while in court; and the court in which the deposit is made may from time to time, on the application of the depositors, make such Order as seems fit respecting the payment of the interests or dividends accordingly.

If either House of Parliament refuse to confirm any Provisional Order in respect whereof a deposit has been made under these rules, or authorise a portion only of any tramway comprised in such Order, or if any such Provisional Order be withdrawn before the same is confirmed by Parliament the Court shall, upon production of a certificate of the Board of Trade, order the deposit fund or a proportionate part thereof, as the case may be, to be paid to the depositors, or as they shall direct.

The issuing in any case of any warrant or certificate relating to deposit or to the deposit fund, or any error in any such warrant or certificate or in relation thereto, shall not make the Board of Trade, or the person signing the warrant or certificate on their behalf, in any manner liable for or in respect of the deposit fund, or the interest of or dividends on the same, or any part thereof respectively.

Any application under these rules to the Supreme Court of Judicature shall be made in a summary manner by summons at chambers.

(a) a statutory declaration showing that the requirements of the Standing Orders of both Houses of Parliament have been complied with, as regards the deposit with the Clerk of the Parliaments and at the Private Bill Office of duplicates of every map, plan, section, and book of reference deposited with the Minister; and

(b) a statutory declaration proving compliance with the Standing Order of the House of Commons with regard to the taking of houses occupied wholly or partially by thirty or more persons of the working classes, or where the taking of the land will not involve the acquisition of any house or houses so occupied, a statutory declaration for the purpose of showing that the Standing Order does not apply.

(2) The statutory declaration referred to in paragraph (1) (a) of this Rule shall be made by the undertakers or their agent and by the person by whom the deposits were made, and the statutory declaration referred to in paragraph (1) (b) of this Rule shall be made by the undertakers or their agent.

Objections.

10.—(1) Any objection to an application for a Provisional Order shall be lodged with the Minister on or before the 15th day of January immediately succeeding the making of the application.

(2) When an objection is lodged with the Minister, the objector or his agent shall state that he has at the same time forwarded a copy of such objection to the undertakers or their agent.

(3) Every memorial, objection, and other such document deposited or lodged with the Minister shall be on foolscap paper.

(4) As soon as practicable after the 15th day of January, the undertakers shall furnish the Minister with replies to any objections which have been made. A copy of the reply to each objection shall at the same time be sent to the objector or his agent.

Proposals for Amendment of Draft Order.

11. If any local or road authority, or railway, tramway or canal company, or any other company, body or person desires to have any clause or other amendment inserted in the Order they must deliver the proposed clause or amendment to the undertakers or their agent and also to the Minister on or before the 8th day of February immediately succeeding the making of the application: Provided that such delivery shall not prejudice the right of the party making such delivery to oppose the Order in Parliament.

12.—(1) On or before the 22nd day of February immediately succeeding the making of the application the undertakers or their agent shall deliver to the Minister (a) a printed draft of the Provisional Order in triplicate containing in manuscript all such clauses or other amendments as have been agreed between the several parties concerned, and (b) a certified copy of any resolution passed before that date by any local authority and by any road authority (where such exists distinct from the local authority for the purposes of the Act of 1870), whose consent is required under section 4 of the Act of 1870, approving the application.

(2) If any of the proposed clauses or other amendments which have been delivered to the undertakers or their agent and to the Minister have not been settled with the consent of all the parties concerned, the undertakers or their agent shall, so far as they can, on or before the 22nd day of February immediately succeeding the making of the application furnish to the Minister in writing a statement showing what are the amendments, if any, which each party would be willing to accept.

(3) After the said 22nd day of February no further proposals for clauses will be entertained by the Minister.

Procedure after Making of Order.

13.—(1) After a Provisional Order has been made, and before it is introduced into a Confirmation Bill in Parliament, the undertakers shall, within fourteen days after the day on which the Provisional Order shall have been sent to them by the Minister, transmit to him a statutory declaration made by them or their agent proving that the Provisional Order was published on or before the 25th day of April immediately succeeding the making of the Order, in conformity with paragraph 3 of Part IV. of Schedule B of the Act of 1870, and that paragraphs 1 and 2 of the said part of that Schedule have been complied with.

(2) Copies of the Provisional Order and of the newspaper containing the advertisement of the Order, shall be annexed to the declaration as exhibits.

(3) The advertisement shall have a short heading stating that the Order has been made by the Minister under the Act of 1870 for the purpose of being introduced into a Confirmation Bill in Parliament, and must also state the office where printed copies of the Order can be obtained, which shall be the office named in the original advertisement of the application for the Order.

(4) The declaration shall state that a sufficient number of printed copies of the Order have been deposited for sale at the office named in the original advertisement, and the price, not exceeding one shilling for each copy, for which they may be obtained.

Application for Extension of Time for Authorised Works.

14. Where an application is made to the Minister under section 11 of the Act of 1870 for a prolongation of time for the commencement or the completion of water works authorised by any Order made under that Act:—

(a) The application shall be in the form of a memorial setting forth the grounds on which the application is made, and shall be made at least one month before the expiration of the time prescribed for the commencement or the completion of the works, as the case may be.

(b)—(i) The undertakers shall publish by advertisement, once at least in two successive weeks, in some newspaper circulating in the district, a notice of their intention to apply to the Minister for a prolongation of time.

(ii) The notice must state the period to which it is proposed to prolong the time limited for the commencement or the completion of the works, as the case may be, and shall contain a notification that all persons desirous of bringing before the Minister any objection respecting the application, may do so by letter addressed to the Secretary, Minister of Health, Whitehall, London, S.W.1, to be received by him on or before a day named in the notice, being not less than twenty-one days from the date of the first publication of the notice, and that copies of their objections shall, at the same time, be sent to the undertakers.

(c) Before the second publication of the notice a notice containing the particulars set forth in paragraph (b) of this Rule shall be delivered to every local and road authority and to every person supplying water within the district, and in the case of water which is authorised by an Order to be abstracted from a stream, to the owners, lessees, and occupiers of mills, manufactories, and other works referred to in paragraph (2) of section 5 of the Act of 1870.

(d) Copies of newspapers containing the notice, and a statement that a copy of it has been duly served on all the parties above mentioned, as required by these Rules, shall be sent to the Minister with the application.

(e) The consent of the Minister to the application shall be subject to such conditions if any, as he may think fit to impose.

WATER SUPPLY

15. The Minister may, if he thinks fit, and subject to such conditions as he may impose, exercise his powers under the Act of 1870, notwithstanding the failure of the undertakers to comply with any of the requirements of these Rules other than statutory requirements.

RURAL WATER SUPPLIES.

SIR,—I am directed by the Minister of Health to state that he is anxious that every effort should be made towards the improvement of rural water supplies. Substantial progress has been made in recent years, but much more remains to be done before conditions in rural areas can be regarded as generally satisfactory. The Minister is glad to note that a number of County Councils and Rural District Councils have exercised the powers conferred on them by the Local Government Act, 1929, and contributed towards the cost of parochial schemes, and that some have made systematic arrangements for the purpose. He would strongly urge both County Councils and Rural District Councils to use these powers to the full for the assistance of well-considered schemes.

Other measures might also be taken by County Councils to help Rural District Councils. While the duty of seeing that their districts are supplied with pure and wholesome water falls upon the Rural District Councils, the adequacy of water supplies cannot but be a matter of close concern to County Councils in view of their general interest in the health and well-being of the inhabitants of their counties. What is needed is that a thorough survey of rural areas should be made by the Authorities concerned, in order that reliable information may be obtained as to the conditions of existing supplies and the availability of new supplies, and consideration given to the improvement of conditions. In some cases where community of interest exists between rural districts or between rural districts and urban neighbours, it may be found that the setting up of a joint advisory committee of the Local Authorities is the course most likely to lead to satisfactory results. Any action in this direction should be taken in conjunction with any County Borough or other Councils who may be leading water suppliers in the area. County Councils might well take an active part with the Rural District Councils in initiating and carrying out surveys and in setting up, in suitable cases, joint advisory committees.

Most rural areas must, for financial reasons, depend for supplies on local sources. County Councils might advise Rural District Councils as to the best use to be made of the local sources and as to the best measures for protecting sources from pollution. The importance of early steps to safeguard supplies from pollution is often overlooked. Timely measures of prevention may be carried out at small cost, but once a source is polluted, comparatively high expenditure may be required for remedial measures.

The Minister is always prepared to consider sympathetically applications for loans for schemes of water supply, and also to confer with Local Authorities on proposals or on difficulties or problems which have arisen. Local Authorities will sometimes find it of advantage to confer when a scheme has been formulated in definite outline, but before the details have been prepared.

An investigation into the question of rural water supplies was carried out by the Advisory Committee on Water and their report * was issued in 1929. The report dealt comprehensively with the general problem, and with the various methods of supply. Among other matters, useful information is contained in the report on measures for adequately storing rainwater, a source of supply of which far more use could be made in some areas.

* Ministry of Health—Advisory Committee on Water—Report on Rural Water Supplies —Price 9*d*.

The report also points out the difficulty which arises from the small income obtained for rural supplies. A charge which is comparatively high in percentage may yield only 4*d.* or 5*d.* a week because of the low rateable values of properties. Householders would probably in many cases be willing to pay more for the convenience and saving of labour of a piped supply.

The Minister feels sure that a thorough investigation will show that much can be done for improving rural water supplies within local financial resources, particularly if County Councils and Rural District Councils make, as he trusts they will, generous use of their powers of contributing to the cost.

WATER SUPPLIES (a).

SIR,—The continued drought makes it increasingly necessary that each Water Undertaker should look carefully into the position of its water supply and the demands on it in the coming months, and I am directed by the Minister of Health to forward for consideration the enclosed memorandum on the subject.

There is at present no cause for general alarm. Most Urban Authorities have withstood remarkably well the strain of the exceptional drought. On the other hand, many rural areas have suffered hardship. But in urban as in rural areas if the drought continues special measures may become necessary at many places where hitherto they have not been required (b).

The Minister wishes to impress on Water Undertakers that they should have plans for economising consumption and for augmenting supplies ready to be put into operation if the drought continues and further measures become necessary. The enclosed memorandum sets out measures to be considered.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,

Assistant Secretary.

The Secretary to the Waterworks Company.

WATER SUPPLY

MEMORANDUM 178 W.

MEMORANDUM ON WATER SHORTAGE.

PROVISION OF SUPPLEMENTARY SUPPLIES.

1. In view of the abnormally low rainfall since March last, it is essential that water authorities should scrutinise their position, with an eye not only to the present situation but to possible difficulty in the future. New supplies cannot usually be improvised at short notice. Any adequate supplementary supply can generally be secured only by timely foresight and initiative before needs become acute. Probable future conditions must be carefully ascertained, and, where precautionary measures are desirable, they should be undertaken well in advance, to avoid recourse to hasty improvisation later.

It may not be practicable to make actual provision in advance for supplies which would be adequate to meet all contingencies, however severe. Where this could be secured only by large expenditure the cost of water would be much and permanently increased, perhaps to a crippling degree, and it might be more prudent therefore to accept the risk of such a restriction in times of exceptional drought as might involve some inconvenience but no hardship. But water undertakers should be ready with plans for supplementing their supplies should an emergency arise.

The present situation emphasises the advantages of forming Advisory Regional Committees on the lines advocated in the booklet issued by the Ministry in October, 1928. Through these committees the relative needs, present and prospective, of adjoining districts can be comprehensively surveyed, and the simplest and most economical policy to meet them can be initiated betimes.

2. Where shortage exists, or is threatened, auxiliary supplies may sometimes be obtained in bulk from a neighbouring authority whose resources are more than sufficient for its needs. In such cases the more fortunately placed authority should be willing to assist, so far as assistance is practicable without serious prejudice to its own position.

3. In rural areas when local sources are not available and other supplies cannot be readily brought to the district by mains, District Councils should consider organising the carriage of water from the nearest available source. Care should be taken that the supply is pure, or is purified before being distributed for domestic consumption, and that the vehicle is clean.

CONSERVATION OF EXISTING SUPPLIES.

4. If existing supplies cannot readily be supplemented, all reasonable measures should be taken early, even at some inconvenience to the consumer, to conserve them. Inconvenience to the consumer is a less evil than the grave shortage and more drastic restrictions which it sets out to avert.

(a) Prevention of Waste.—The normal consumption of water per head is often excessive, and substantial economies may be effected by concentrating upon the detection and prevention of remediable waste. Attention should be devoted to leakages in mains and service pipes (in some cases a source of much waste), and to defective taps and other household fittings. There is much to be said for the practice of re-washering taps without charge to the consumer, and the small expense involved will be amply compensated by the savings in water.

(b) Economy in Use of Water.—Consumers should be brought to realise that water is a valuable commodity not at any time to be carelessly used, and that attention should be paid by them to dripping taps and to avoiding all extravagant or unnecessary use of water. Water wasted is money wasted at the expense of consumers or ratepayers. By voluntary effort of this kind, consumers can at little trouble to themselves effect substantial reductions in water consumption and may obviate the imposition of drastic restrictions later.

In times of exceptional drought, consumers should be urged to take special measures to economise and restrict the use of water to the more essential needs. It should be impressed upon them that if they do not co-operate in this way the alternative may be, in the present, serious compulsory restrictions and, in the future, possibly large additions to water supplies merely for meeting drought conditions which can be effected only at the cost of large increases in water charges.

(c) Compensation Water.—Agreements for the temporary reduction or intermission of discharges of compensation water will often divert large quantities of water to the needs of public supply. Where shortage exists or is threatened and compensation water is supplied, water undertakers should enter into immediate negotiations with riparian interests. They should endeavour to arrange for a reduction of the compensation water and, so far as it is required for works, for suspending the discharge or, at any rate, largely reducing it at week-ends and other times when it may not be really required for the works.

The Minister trusts that all interests will appreciate that essential domestic needs must come first, and that reasonable concessions immediately may be the only way of avoiding a serious situation within a short time.

(d) Use of Alternative Supplies.—Where there is any likelihood that the restriction of potable supplies may later become necessary, non-potable sources, where available, should be used for street watering, the flushing of drains and other purposes for which a high standard of purity is not required. Consumers may similarly be encouraged to utilise rainwater from their house roofs for flushing and cleansing, for which the ordinary domestic supply would normally be employed.

(e) Restriction of Supplies.—Curtailment of the use of domestic supplies for the watering of gardens and the washing of motor cars or other vehicles will naturally be the first restriction to be applied. Intermitting the domestic supply should generally be resorted to only in cases of actual necessity. With an intermittent supply, there is always some risk of contamination where pipes are not fully watertight or, for other reasons, the influx of impure water is possible.

Purity of Supplies.

5. In any sustained dry period the risk of pollution is enhanced, and must be kept under close observation. In underground sources, for instance, heavier pumping operations necessitated by the reduced yield may have the effect of drawing water from beyond the usual protected zone; and where surface gathering grounds are subjected to sudden heavy rainfall following a drought a larger proportion of impurities or contaminating matter may find its way into the reservoirs. Wherever the purity of the water is threatened, special means of purification should be undertaken. The readiest of these is chlorination. Chlorination should be employed only under expert supervision, and with the precautions necessary to secure that the process is properly and efficiently carried out.

If properly chlorinated, water which ordinarily could not be used without some danger to health may be safely brought into service, and in this way additional sources of supply be made available.

6. Where general measures of purification are not practicable—in districts, for instance, dependent on private supplies, and particularly in rural parishes where residents rely upon shallow wells and similar sources—the individual householders should be impressed with the need for boiling the water used by them if any serious danger of pollution is ascertained. It is for the local authority to see that the need is really brought home to them through the local Press and other means. Where the necessity arises in rural villages, the Rural District Council might with advantage arrange, through the Parish Council or otherwise, for some dependable persons to be charged with the task of drawing each householder's attention to the need, and of securing that the practice is observed.

Contributions under Local Government Act, 1929.

7. Where expense has to be incurred by a local authority in relieving water shortage in their district, the County Councils are empowered, under Section 57 of the Local Government Act, 1929 (a), to contribute to the expenditure by any of the county district councils within their area. Similarly, under Section 56 of the Act, Rural District Councils may contribute, as part of their expenditure for general purposes, towards expenses which would otherwise be defrayed by a special rate upon the contributory place concerned. The Minister trusts that these authorities will not hesitate so to contribute, wherever the occasion warrants it.

8. The Department are prepared to advise and assist water authorities who are experiencing or anticipate difficulties in maintaining adequate supplies, and will be glad of information from any district where serious shortage is threatened.

MEMORANDUM 179 W.

CHLORINATION OF WATER SUPPLIES.

1. The treatment of water with chlorine is the best method of rapid and efficient sterilisation. If the process has to be applied on a substantial scale competent advice should be sought. It is important also that there should be regular supervision of the plant by a skilled person to ensure that it is working satisfactorily.

Chlorine may be applied either as a gas or in solid or liquid form.

Liquefied Gas.

2. Recent developments have shown that liquefied chlorine gas can readily be used for this purpose. It may be obtained in steel cylinders which contain about 70 lbs. of chlorine.

The gas is applied to the water in amounts varying from 0.1 to 1.0 parts of chlorine per million parts of water and it is necessary to have some special form of apparatus for regulating the flow of chlorine to the water supply. Several kinds of apparatus are on the market.

An apparatus less sensitive than that normally used for domestic water supplies has been put on the market for chlorinating swimming bath water, and in an emergency this apparatus might be used for rural water supplies. With adequate dosage a potable water can be assured, but the dosage cannot be so finely adjusted.

3. The total cost of purchase and installation of an apparatus which would deliver not more than 0.4 lbs. of chlorine gas per hour is about £130. This would suffice for 80,000 gallons per hour with a chlorine dose of 0.5 parts per million.

Some firms are prepared to hire out a chlorine dosage apparatus and to instal and supervise its operation. The cost of installation is about £15 to £20; the hire charge is about £20 per month; in addition, a charge of about £10 for reconditioning the apparatus after use may be made. Allowance is made for the hire charges if the Authority later decide to purchase the apparatus.

Chloride of Lime.

4. Chlorine is also available in the form of chloride of lime (bleaching powder), which may readily be obtained. This, if freshly made, should contain about 33 per cent. of free or active chlorine. The powder should be kept in a dry place in airtight tins. It gradually loses its efficacy on keeping, especially during hot weather, but this loss may be retarded by the addition of 25 per cent. of quicklime. Samples of the bleaching powder used should be examined by a chemist to see that the proper amount of chlorine is present. Any deficiency in strength may be counteracted by an increased dose.

In order to be sure that all infective organisms are killed, the chloride of lime must be added to the water in such quantity that free chlorine will be available to the extent of at least one part per million of water. This will be effected by the preparation of a solution of one ounce of chloride of lime in one quart of water. This will suffice to treat 2,000 gallons of a water which does not contain an excessive amount of mineral or organic matter.

If the water is very impure, discoloured, or contains much suspended matter, it should, if circumstances permit, first be clarified by the addition of from 2 to 8 grains per gallon of alum and an equal proportion of powdered whiting, and then allowed to stand in a tank, from which it should be decanted to another tank for the addition of the chloride of lime solution.

5. After the addition of the chloride of lime, the water should, if practicable, be allowed to stand in an open tank for four hours before consumption. This will usually obviate any complaint of taste in the water.

If this cannot be effected, the taste may often be removed by the addition of a small quantity of permanganate, sufficient to produce a very faint pink colour fading away in about 5 to 15 minutes; or, so far as the chlorine taste is concerned, by the addition of a solution of sodium thiosulphate (the hyposulphite of soda used in photography) in small quantities. The quantities of these substances which are necessary to remove the taste can be quickly determined by practical tests. Wherever possible, in treating a filtered water supply, the chlorine solution should be added after filtration.

6. There are various ways of adding the chlorine solution to the water. If it is a small supply, such as that from a cottage well, dip well, small spring, or land drain, the water will have to be pumped into some receptacle, such as a tub, barrel, or tank cart, and the chlorine solution added by hand and thoroughly mixed with the water, which should be allowed to stand for four hours in the open before being distributed to the consumers.

If it is a larger supply, corresponding methods, involving the adding of measured quantities of the chlorine solution by hand, will probably have to be adopted in the first instance, as it takes time to provide or arrange apparatus.

If the treatment has to be continued for some considerable time an improvement on this method is to provide a large tank for the chlorine solution, communicating with a smaller tank which is kept filled to a fixed level by means of a ball tap or other similar contrivance. In this way constant pressure is maintained in the small tank, which assists in regulating the flow. If the outlet from the small tank is fitted with a fine glass tube, having a controlling tap, the solution may be allowed to drip at such a rate as to pass the required amount per hour into the water. The tap should be so arranged as to drip over the point of discharge of the water into the storage tank or reservoir. When the reservoir is filled the chlorinated water should be allowed to stand for four hours before consumption, if practicable.

When the chlorine cannot be added to the water in the storage tank or reservoir, the solution may be injected into the water main by means of a suitable contrivance, such as a pump driven by a turbine from a rising main, the amount of solution injected being proportionate to the rapidity of flow of water in the main, a definite relation being established between the two.

The tank containing the chlorine solution should preferably be of glass, in order that any failure in the supply may be detected at a glance.

Other Methods.

7. The continued use of chloride of lime, except on a very large scale and under supervision, may give rise to difficulties because it requires labour and constant attention, and it will probably be found that some other method of adding the chlorine will be preferable if the treatment has to be continued for an indefinite period. Instead of using liquefied chlorine gas, of which mention has already been made, various liquid preparations containing chlorine in known proportion may be employed, such as "Chloros," which contains from 10 to 15 per cent. of available or free chlorine.

General.

8. Any mains, pipes, cisterns or tanks which have contained polluted water should be emptied and disinfected. After the water mains, pipes and cisterns have been disinfected by a strong solution, say, five parts per million, and after the continued use of chlorine, in the proportion of one part per million, it will frequently be found that the amount of chlorine may be reduced to one part in three millions, thus reducing the risk of "taste." Whether this can safely be done will depend on the results of examination, bacteriological and chemical, of the water before and after treatment with the chlorine.

In treating a heavily polluted water, it is well to make sure that some free chlorine is present after the addition of the solution to the water. This can be ascertained by the starch and iodide of potassium test, the materials for which can be obtained in the form of tabloids.

WATER SUPPLY

The use of poisonous metals in any apparatus dealing with the water whilst under treatment with chlorine must be avoided.

MEMORANDUM 183W.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

RAINWATER FOR DOMESTIC SUPPLIES.

Insufficient attention is paid in this country to the collection and storage of rainwater for use either as the principal source of water supply for domestic purposes or as a supplementary supply for times when wells or other sources run short.

Rainwater collected from roofs in closely developed areas would be liable to be contaminated (though even there more use could be made of it for non-potable purposes), but in rural areas free from smoke and soot and from the dust of industries it provides, with proper storage, a pure and wholesome water for domestic use. This is confirmed by long experience in some parts of the country, for example, in parts of the Midlands and East Anglia. There are areas where surface or well water is either too hard or too brackish to drink, and where the inhabitants of isolated houses or of groups of houses, and in some instances of whole villages, have for generations depended entirely on the rain collected from roofs for water for drinking and culinary purposes, the surface water being used to supplement the rainwater for cleaning purposes and the like. There is no reason why rainwater should not be utilised in all country districts where a public supply is impracticable. Its use, however, is all too rare; it is common to find that persons in trouble year after year because of the unreliable surface supplies or shallow wells on which they depend have never tried to collect the rain which falls on the roofs of their houses as a means of surmounting their difficulties, and that they are ignorant of the simple methods by which this can be satisfactorily done. Suitable and adequate storage is essential.

Roof areas and quantity of water collected.

Rainfall varies in different parts of the country. The average yearly fall over a large number of years ranges from 21 inches in the drier parts up to 40 and more in the wetter. No general figure can be given on which the capacity of tanks can be calculated, and it is best to consult the local rainfall records when arrangements are contemplated. One inch of rain over an acre produces 22,000 gallons of water and the quantity which can be collected from 100 square feet of surface is 52 gallons for a similar rainfall.

A small house with a roof area of 500 square feet will collect 7,800 gallons in a year with a rainfall of 30 inches. This would provide over 20 gallons a day for the house.

A useful rule for ascertaining quickly how much water can be collected from a roof when the average annual rainfall is known is to multiply the area of the roof in square feet by half the average rainfall in inches. Thus, in the case of the house referred to above: $500 \times \frac{30}{2} = 7{,}500$ gallons which is not very far from the actual figure of 7,800 gallons and allows something for losses which occur by splashing and absorption by tiles or slates.

Storage capacity required.

In country places it is found that five gallons a day for each person can be made to suffice for household needs. A storage capacity of 1,000 gallons would therefore afford a supply for fifty days to a house inhabited by four persons, and this storage capacity should be regarded as the minimum for such a house if rainwater is to be the principal source of supply. It would generally be prudent to provide larger storage if the roof area is sufficient to replenish the store as necessary, and it is the practice at present in some areas to do so.

Less storage capacity will, of course, be needed where the main supply is from surface sources or wells liable to give out in dry summers, and the rainwater is needed only as a supplementary supply.

Receptacles for collecting rainwater.

Where rainwater is required as an auxiliary supply to wells or other sources, tanks and water butts above ground to collect the water from the roofs as it falls down the pipes from the gutters are the most convenient receptacles. Wooden butts are not very satisfactory, as they are apt to leak when they dry off in a half empty condition, and their life is short and they are not easy to keep clean. Galvanised iron tanks are better and can be obtained in various shapes and sizes. The circular type made up of corrugated sheets serves the purpose well, and is cheap and strong. In all cases a good cover of iron or of cement asbestos sheet should be provided to keep out leaves and animals. A circular galvanised iron tank, 3 feet in diameter and 4 feet high, holds about 170 gallons and with lid and draw-off tap costs about £3 10*s*. Draw-off taps should be placed a few inches above the bottom of the tanks, as there is always at the bottom a small deposit of dust, which should be cleaned out at least once a year. A conical bottom with a hole and bung at the point facilitates cleaning.

Where the rainwater is to be the principal source of supply underground storage tanks are generally used and are to be recommended. A circular tank is the shape most commonly used and if 6 feet in diameter and 6 feet deep, has a capacity of just over 1,000 gallons.

The site of an underground tank should be selected so that it is reasonably near to the house, but as far away as possible from any foul water drains, manure heaps, and especially from any cesspit.

The construction may be of good cement concrete at least 6 inches thick, plastered internally with a rendering, 1 inch thick, of one part of cement to two parts of clean sand. Brickwork, at least 9 inches thick, laid in cement mortar with a cement concrete bottom, is also satisfactory. Cement rendering throughout inside is required, and if the ground is manured in any way it is best to place puddle clay round the outside of the brickwork, because bricks soak up drainage water from the soil. A watertight tank cannot be made without good materials and plenty of cement.

The sides of the tank should be brought a little above the surface of the ground so that the top of the roof (6 inches thick) is above the ground and free from mud and surface water. The top should be rendered outside in the same manner as the inside of the walls and floor. A flat roof of cement concrete with steel joists or old rails as supports, buried therein, is best, and it is essential that there should be no leakage near the top of the tank.

A dipping hole about 2 feet by 1½ feet is required in the top large enough for a man to enter the tank for cleaning. This opening should be brought up at least 6 inches above the roof of the tank and should have walls at least 6 inches thick of cement concrete. There should be a hinged cover, preferably of iron, although oak and elm covers are often used. A vent pipe with the end covered with wire gauze may be required if an airtight cover is fitted.

Such a tank as is described, to hold 1,000 gallons, costs about £20 to £25, the exact amount depending upon the nature of the soil and the site.

The usual method of drawing water is by filling a bucket; but small hand pumps are sometimes fitted. These have to be protected from frost and add to the cost. Underground tanks should be emptied and cleaned during the winter months at least once a year.

Roofs and gutters.

Every bit of roof should be provided with a gutter leading to an iron down pipe. Where an underground storage tank is provided, the down pipes should be continued below ground, either as iron or glazed stoneware pipes with cement joints, direct to the tank with a good cement joint through the wall. Agricultural pipes should not be used and open surface gutters running to the tank are objectionable. Where rainwater storage is contemplated, lead on the roof or lead gutters should be avoided. Otherwise there is a possibility of lead appearing in the water.

WATER SUPPLY

With a new installation it is advisable to inspect all gutters, roof channels and down pipes to see that they are clean and running freely.

Filters.

It is rare for any form of filter to be used with existing installations and persons do not appear to suffer by the omission. If it is desired, however, to freshen up the water by aeration and to improve the colour, the ordinary domestic filter is probably the best to adopt. Suggestions have been made for providing sand filters for the water to pass through before it enters the tank, but such filters require attention, and if left uncleaned and choked may contaminate the water instead of improving it. A simple filter for the house can be made from a clean bucket by punching small holes in the bottom, placing a layer of clean pebbles at the bottom a few inches thick, followed by a similar layer of small charcoal. At least 6 inches of clean fine sand should be added on the top of the charcoal. The bucket is then filled with water from the tank and allowed to drip into another bucket.

Beyond cleaning out the tanks once a year and watching the gutters and down pipes for birds' nests and the like, these rainwater collecting arrangements require little attention. A coat of limewash to the inside of masonry tanks after the annual cleaning is a good method of purification.

The possibility of augmenting the provision made for individual houses by using the rainwater which falls on large roof areas should not be overlooked. With moderate expense on storage, a valuable supply for the common benefit can be obtained from the roofs of churches, chapels, schools, village halls and the like.

Some additional information on this subject will be found in the Report on Rural Water Supplies issued by the Advisory Committee on Water in 1929 and published by H.M. Stationery Office, price 9*d*.

WATER SUPPLIES.

SIR,—The Minister of Health feels it incumbent upon him, in the light of recent experience (a) to remind water undertakers of the serious responsibility which rests upon them in relation to the purity of the public water supplies which they control.

It is the statutory duty of all Local Authorities operating under the Public Health Acts to ensure that water supplied by them to consumers is at all times wholesome, and a like responsibility is expressly placed by Parliament upon water undertakers, whether Local Authorities or Statutory Companies, who derive their powers from special statutory enactments.

The relative immunity from serious outbreaks of water-borne disease that the country has long enjoyed must not be allowed to obscure the paramount importance of taking all possible steps to ensure that this responsibility is adequately discharged and every practicable precaution adopted to safeguard the purity of supplies. The machinery and methods of control, which must necessarily vary with the circumstances of different undertakings, are matters for the decision of the responsible authorities themselves, but it will be realised that the first necessity is that the undertaking should be under the supervision of a qualified engineer who, in the case of the larger undertakings owned by Local Authorities, should be a chief officer of the Authority directly responsible to the appropriate Committee, and in all cases should be in a position to give detailed personal attention to the work. The Minister has no doubt that water undertakers generally will appreciate the need for maintaining the high standards of administration which are rightly demanded in a matter of such fundamental importance to public health, but the results that may ensue from neglect of precautionary measures are so serious that the Minister regards it as his duty, at the present time, to impress upon all water undertakers the imperative need for unremitting care in the supervision of the water supplies for which they are responsible.

Where water is being supplied without treatment, the water undertakers must satisfy themselves that this practice can safely be continued. For this purpose, they should keep a constant watch on the quality of the water by frequent analyses. How often the analyses should be made in a particular case depends on local conditions, e.g., on the character of the source and of its gathering ground and their position in relation to each other. The Minister is satisfied that under modern conditions more frequent analyses are needed in many cases as a minimum precautionary measure, particularly where there is a tendency to fluctuation in the composition or bacterial content of the water. The water undertakers should be guided as to the frequency of analyses by the views of their expert advisers after examination of the local conditions. It is not sufficient, however, to rely on results from analyses alone. Regular and frequent inspections should be made of the area forming the gathering ground of any spring or stream used as a source of supply and of areas surrounding underground sources of supply situate in or near the outcrop of the strata from which the water is drawn, and all practicable steps should be taken to remove possible sources of contamination in these areas. If, as a result of their analyses and inspections or for any other reason, the water undertakers have cause to think that any of their sources of water supply cannot be made and kept free from liability to pollution, they should immediately treat the water by effective methods of purification.

In a separate communication to the water undertakers concerned, particular attention is being drawn to the need for special safeguards where water is supplied from wells or borings into the chalk or limestone at or near the outcrop of those formations.

Where the water is treated, the treatment should as far as possible be automatically controlled, and where the treatment includes chlorination, the dosage should be automatically and continuously recorded. The efficacy of any form of treatment given should be verified by frequent tests of the treated water. The method, extent and control of treatment required in any particular case are also matters on which the water undertakers should be guided by expert advice. Periodic analyses should be made of the raw water in order to keep a check on any change in its character and on the treatment needed. The Minister would, however, stress the point that treatment of the water should be regarded, not as a complete security in itself, but as complementary to the taking of all practicable steps to seek for and remove the causes of pollution of the raw water.

The utmost vigilance is also required to ensure that no risk of contamination of the water supplies arises from operations in connection with the normal maintenance and improvement of waterworks, such as extensions of the works, the reconditioning of wells, reservoirs, and filters, the repair of pumping plant, etc.; and in some cases, e.g., where men are engaged on work in a well, it is essential either to cut off the supply from the well until the work is completed or to give precautionary treatment to the water.

The Minister would emphasise that the administrative responsibility for a service of such vital importance to health can only be successfully discharged if there is effective collaboration and co-operation between those responsible in their various capacities for the conduct and efficiency of the undertaking and between the water undertakers and the Local Authorities of areas served by them. It is essential that Local Authorities who are themselves water undertakers should ensure that the Water Committee and its officers work in close co-operation with the Public Health Committee and the Medical Officer of Health. Where the water undertakers are not the Local Authority for an area supplied by them, they should always be ready, on request, to furnish full information to that Local Authority or its Medical Officer of Health as to the quality of the water supplied and the precautions taken to safeguard its wholesomeness. On the other hand, Local Authorities should make it their duty to bring to the notice of water undertakers cases of enteric fever or other diseases likely to be water-borne, and also any building development or other operations in the Local Authority's area which might affect the purity of a source of water supply.

The Minister would be happy at any time to arrange for his officers to discuss with those concerned any points arising out of this letter on which it is thought the Department can be of assistance.

Your obedient Servant,
GEORGE CHRYSTAL,
Secretary.

The Secretary of the Company.

MEMORANDUM 221.

MEMORANDUM ON THE SAFEGUARDS TO BE ADOPTED IN DAY TO DAY ADMINISTRATION OF WATER UNDERTAKINGS.

GENERAL.

1. The prevention of water-borne diseases was the chief and almost the only concern of sanitation as it was understood a hundred years ago. Recent events have shown that even now it can be achieved only by careful and constant supervision of supplies of drinking water. Between 1911 and 1937 there occurred twenty-one outbreaks of disease, conveyed by public water supplies, of such gravity as to merit detailed mention in the annual reports of the Medical Officer of the Local Government Board and the Chief Medical Officer of the Ministry of Health. Pollution prior to storage and distribution was responsible for thirteen of these outbreaks, four of the thirteen involving overground supplies and nine of them underground supplies. Pollution during storage occurred in two cases. Pollution during distribution appears to have occurred in six instances. The numbers of known cases of disease resulting from these outbreaks were: enteric fever (including paratyphoid) 1,237; bacillary dysentery 2,800; and gastro-enteritis 7,439.

2. The Minister has recently (a) brought to the notice of all water undertakers the need for unremitting care in the supervision of the water supplies for which they are responsible. Particular stress was laid upon the importance of effective collaboration and co-operation between the various officers responsible for the conduct and efficiency of the undertaking and also between the water undertakers and the local authorities of areas served by them. The importance of this aspect of water administration is again emphasised.

3. The object of this memorandum is to draw attention to the precautions which should be taken in the day to day administration of water supplies. These precautions are no more than are already recognised as good practice in water administration and water undertakers should carefully review their arrangements and take appropriate steps in the light of the circumstances of their undertaking to improve their practice where this is necessary.

4. There are in England and Wales some 530 local authorities and 15 joint bodies supplying water under the Public Health Acts, and 260 local authorities, 33 joint bodies and 173 water companies supplying water under powers given by Special Acts. Three-quarters of the population of the country is supplied with water obtained from overground sources—from rivers, streams and springs—and the remaining one-quarter from wells and borings into water-bearing strata. All the bodies referred to are under statutory obligation to provide wholesome water for the use of their consumers. The variety of sources and conditions is such that it is not possible to lay down any one method applicable to every case of ensuring the fulfilment of this obligation. Undertakers must have regard to the circumstances in their own areas, e.g., the nature and situation of the source from which the supply is drawn and the character and formation of the gathering ground, and must themselves decide, on competent advice, the machinery and methods of control which are most suitable to their own local conditions.

HEALTH OF WORKMEN EMPLOYED ON WATERWORKS.

5. Careful discrimination should be exercised in the selection of workmen employed on waterworks other than works where no risk to the purity of the water supply is likely to arise, and the clinical history of each such workman, particularly with reference to enteric infection, should be thoroughly investigated in order to determine his suitability for this kind of employment. Any man attacked by illness associated with looseness of the bowels should be suspended from work until his recovery is complete and medical examination shows that he is safe to return to work. Every new man proposed to be employed on any part of the works where there is risk of his contaminating the water should be examined by means of a Widal test of his blood in order to ascertain whether or not he is likely to be a typhoid carrier. If a positive result is obtained which is not attributable to preventive inoculation, he should not be employed unless bacteriological examination of his excreta on at least three occasions shows negative results as regards the presence of pathogenic bacteria.

In the case of local authorities who are water undertakers, these examinations should be arranged for by their Medical Officer of Health, who will review all the circumstances and whose decision on the question of the employment or continued employment of any man for this kind of work should be final. The Medical Officer of Health or other expert medical adviser should be similarly consulted in the case of other water undertakers.

GENERAL CLEANLINESS OF WATERWORKS.

6. All buildings, machinery, apparatus and yards used for waterworks purposes should be kept scrupulously clean. Proper and adequate sanitary accommodation and washing facilities should be provided at any part of the works where men are regularly employed. All such accommodation should be regularly inspected, and all drains should be periodically tested in order to ensure that no leakage occurs.

PROTECTION OF SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

7. Whatever the source of supply may be, and whether or not purification treatment is given to the water before it is brought into service, every effort should be made to secure that so far as is practicable the raw water is protected from pollution.

Upland Overground Sources.

8. Where the source of water supply is a reservoir impounding the head waters of a stream or an intake near the source of the stream, the water undertakers should, wherever reasonably practicable, acquire the whole of the gathering ground above the reservoir dam or the intake, and protect the reservoir or intake by adequate fencing. Steps should be taken to secure that drainage from farmyards or houses remaining on the gathering ground or the manuring of land on the gathering ground does not pollute the source of supply.

9. Where it is not practicable to acquire the gathering ground and thus control it, it should be part of the routine duty of the water undertakers' staff to make regular and frequent inspections of the whole of the gathering ground with a view to detecting possible causes of pollution. Any building development on the gathering ground should be carefully watched for risk of contamination of the source of supply.

Springs.

10. Where the source of supply is a spring, a sufficient area of land surrounding the spring should be acquired by the water undertakers to enable them to apply adequate protective measures, and a close watch should be maintained by the water undertakers' staff over the area in the vicinity of the spring so that any possible source of pollution may be quickly detected.

WATER SUPPLY

River Supplies.

11. Where a supply is obtained from the lower reaches of a river or stream regular and frequent inspections should be made of the course of the river or stream above the intake with a view to ascertaining the likelihood of pollution being discharged.

Underground Sources.

12. A well or borehole forming a source of supply should be made watertight to such a depth as will prevent any surface pollution from entering, and there should be an efficient sealing between the casing of the borehole and the surrounding ground. Periodic inspections of wells and boreholes should be made in order to ensure that the lining is sound. The water undertakers should acquire a sufficient area of land surrounding the site of the well or borehole to enable them to protect the immediate surroundings. Where the well or borehole is on or near to the outcrop of the strata from which the water is drawn, it should be the routine duty of the water undertakers' staff to make regular and frequent inspections of the area within at least two miles of the site of the well or boring with a view to detecting possible causes of pollution. Particular attention should be paid to any cesspools and soakaways in such an area and the water undertakers should satisfy themselves that danger to their source of supply is not likely to arise from them. Further, a map showing details of any sewerage system within this area should be kept.

13. The inspections by the water undertakers' staff referred to in the preceding paragraphs should be carefully recorded and reports made to the water undertakers or their appropriate Committee. Each report should draw special attention to any alterations which have occurred on the gathering ground since the preceding report. Where the reports indicate a possible cause of pollution of the source of supply, the water undertakers should take such action as may be available to them to remove it. It will be appreciated that these reports will assist materially in interpreting the results of periodic analyses of the raw water.

ANALYSES.*

14. Where water is being supplied without treatment, the water undertakers should make frequent and regular analyses of the water in order to satisfy themselves that this practice may safely be continued. If there is a tendency to fluctuation in the composition or bacterial content of the water, or if inspection of the gathering ground of the source of supply shows possible risk of pollution, analyses should invariably be made at very short intervals. How frequently and at what times the analyses should be made must depend on local conditions and this question should be determined in the case of each water undertaking by the expert views of their advisers after consideration of the local conditions.

15. The results of any analyses must be read in the light of the nature of the source and the condition of the gathering ground, and it is not possible to lay down any hard and fast standard which would be applicable to all supplies. If, however, as a result of analyses and of the inspection of the gathering ground, the water undertakers acting in the case of local authorities on the advice of their Medical Officer of Health and in other cases on the advice of their experts, have any grounds for suspecting that the water cannot be made and kept free from risk of becoming unwholesome they should not hesitate to subject the water to an effective method of treatment.

16. Where the water is treated it is important that regular analyses should be made of the raw water as well as of the treated water. It will not of course be necessary to make such frequent analyses of the raw water when treatment is given as when it is not, but the analyses should be of sufficient frequency to enable an adequate check to be kept on the character of the raw water as a guide to the treatment required.

* For information as to the technique of water analysis see "Reports on Public Health and Medical Subjects No. 71—the Bacteriological Examination of Water Supplies" obtainable (price 1*s.* 3*d.* net) from H.M. Stationery Office.

TREATMENT OF WATER.

17. The conversion of a polluted and therefore dangerous water into a safe potable water is a matter requiring the greatest care if the health of the consumer is not to be jeopardised. There is often a tendency to think that, provided arrangements are made for chlorination, safety is secured whatever the condition of the raw water. It cannot be sufficiently stressed that a policy of reliance on a single line of defence between the consumer and a polluted source of water supply is fraught with danger. Not only should every effort be made, as has been suggested above, to keep the source as free as possible from pollution, but, wherever practicable, the method of treatment should be such as to provide at least two lines of defence, such as, for example, chlorination or other effective form of sterilisation after storage or filtration.

18. Treatment plant should at all times not only be under the supervision of properly trained persons, but should also as far as possible be automatically controlled. Where the treatment includes chlorination, the dosage should be automatically and continuously recorded. The dosage should also be such as to leave residual chlorine after a reasonable period of contact, the period required being determined by the undertakers on expert advice, and frequent tests should be made to ensure this.

SERVICE RESERVOIRS.

19. Service reservoirs from which water passes direct to the consumer should, wherever practicable, be covered. An open reservoir of this kind is dangerous, because any pollution entering it reaches the consumer in a short space of time, and if it is not practicable to cover it, the water should be adequately chlorinated as a safeguard.

Care should be taken to ensure that pollution cannot enter reservoirs through ventilators, manholes, washouts and overflows. Service reservoirs should be periodically inspected with a view to detecting any cracks or other defects which may develop and permit the access of pollution to the water.

MAINS AND HYDRANTS.

20. All new mains should, after connection with the supply system, but before being used to convey water to consumers, be thoroughly flushed. Where possible chlorinated water should be used for this purpose. Mains that have been cut and repaired should be similarly treated.

The arrangement of air valves and air vents to mains should be such that there is no possibility of pollution entering the mains through them.

21. Ball hydrants form a ready means of ingress of polluting matter into water mains and are therefore a potential source of danger. Water undertakers should take the first opportunity of having them replaced by safer types of hydrant.

WORKS OF REPAIR AND CLEANING.

22. It is of the first importance that the arrangements made where works of repair or extension are being carried out are such as to obviate any risk of danger to the health of the consumer from contamination of the water supply. Instructions to workmen as to their conduct while engaged on such works should be in precise terms, and it should be made clear to them that any breach of the instructions will be followed by dismissal.

23. Where pumps or other machinery have been removed from a well or borehole for cleaning or repair, they should be thoroughly cleansed with chlorinated water before being replaced. New pumps or other machinery should be similarly treated before being inserted in the well or borehole.

Wells and Headings.

24. Where work is proceeding in a well or heading, the water therefrom should, whenever possible, be cut out of supply and pumped to waste. If this is not possible, the water should be subjected to an effective method of treatment during the period while the work is proceeding and for a period of at least one week after the work has been completed.

WATER SUPPLY

25. The workmen should be provided with boots and overalls which should be kept at the waterworks, and the boots should be cleansed with chlorinated water on every occasion before the men enter the well.

26. Sanitary arrangements should be provided at the surface and so designed that any risk of the men's boots being fouled is avoided. Pails, of a type which minimises the risk of splashing or overturning, should be provided for micturition where the men are working. Strict instructions should be given that any man wishing to defecate must be brought to the surface and that micturition should take place in the pail provided.

Service Reservoirs and Filters.

27. Precautions similar to those referred to in the preceding paragraph should be taken as regards the provision of sanitary arrangements for men engaged in cleaning reservoirs or filters. The pails for micturition purposes should be placed as near as conveniently possible to the place where the men are actually working. In the case of service reservoirs the precautions set out in paragraph 25 should be observed.

28. Service reservoirs when cleaned should be thoroughly sluiced with clean water, the water being chlorinated wherever practicable.

MAPS.

29. Each water undertaker should keep an up-to-date record in the form of maps and plans of the sites of their sources of supply and reservoirs and of their distribution system, so that they can ascertain readily how each property in their area is served. A diagram of the pipes and valves in and around engine houses and reservoirs should also be kept.

FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, 1938.

SIR,—1. I am directed by the Minister of Health to refer to the above Act (a) which passed into law in July last and comes into operation on October 1st, 1939.

2. The Act is based on a draft Bill * prepared by the Local Government and Public Health Consolidation Committee; it represents a continuation of their work, earlier draft Bills prepared by them having resulted in the Local Government Act, 1933, and the Public Health Act, 1936. The law relating to Food and Drugs (including Milk and Dairies), slaughter-houses and local authorities' market undertakings is consolidated and amended, and simplified in some respects; other miscellaneous provisions have been included † and a few powers which have been found to be advantageous but have hitherto only been obtained by individual authorities have been made general. Unlike the Acts of 1933 and 1936, the Act, except the Part relating to Markets and Slaughter-houses, applies to London. Some provisions extend to Scotland, and some to Northern Ireland.

3. The process of consolidating enactments dating back to the 16th century has necessitated a large number of minor amendments and the Minister does not propose to issue a detailed explanatory memorandum. Most of the substantial amendments are, however, fully dealt with in the Report ‡ which accompanied the draft Bill (subsequently referred to as "the report") and local authorities will be well advised to study the new Act in the light of that report; a table showing the clauses of the draft Bill which correspond to the sections of the Act is given in the Appendix to this Circular.

4. Reference is made below to some of the more important changes and matters which require early consideration, and also to certain changes which were made during the passage of the Bill through Parliament and are not therefore dealt with in the report.

5. Enforcement.—The authorities whose duty it is to enforce the various provisions of the new Act are set out in Section 65.

* Draft of a Food and Drugs Bill, Cmd. 5629, price 1*s.* 6*d.*, H.M. Stationery Office.

† The subjects (following generally the headings in the Act) are:—Composition of Food and Drugs; Unsound Food; Precautions against contamination; Food poisoning; Meat from Knackers' yards; Milk and Dairies; Artificial Cream; Bread and Flour; Margarine, Margarine-cheese, Butter and Milk-blended Butter; Ice-cream; Horseflesh; Shellfish; Importation; Markets, Slaughter-houses (including Knackers' yards) and Cold-air Stores; Miscellaneous Provisions.

FOOD AND DRUGS

The new definition of Food and Drugs authority contained in Section 64 (see paragraphs 23 to 27 of the report) will in most counties involve early consideration by the authorities concerned of the necessary administrative arrangements. Inside London the Food and Drugs authorities, as now, will be the Common Council and the metropolitan borough councils. Outside London as from October 1st, 1939, the Food and Drugs authorities for the various areas will be as follows :—

(a) for county boroughs and for non-county boroughs where the authority are now the Food and Drugs authority and the population according to the last census was 40,000 or more ; the borough council ;

(b) for non-county boroughs where the authority are not now the Food and Drugs authority and for urban districts having, in either case, a population of 40,000 or more according to the last census ; the borough or district council, unless in pursuance of proviso (a) to Section 64, the Minister on application from the county council in certain circumstances directs that the county council shall retain the functions ;

(c) for non-county boroughs and urban districts with a population of not less than 20,000 nor more than 40,000 according to the last census ; the county council, unless the Minister in pursuance of proviso (b) to Section 64, on application of the local authority, directs that the local authority instead of the county council shall be the Food and Drugs authority ;

(d) for non-county boroughs and urban districts with a population of less than 20,000 according to the last census and for rural districts ; the county council.

It is requested that any application which a county council may think it necessary to submit under the proviso (a) to Section 64 should be made as soon as possible, and in any case not later than March 1st, 1939. Any such application should be accompanied by a map of the county showing the area for which the county council would, in the absence of a direction under the section, be the Food and Drugs authority and the area in respect of which they are making the application. It is also requested that any councils of non-county boroughs, with a population between 20,000 and 40,000, who are now Food and Drugs authorities and who intend to apply under the proviso (b) to Section 64 should make their application not later than March 1st, 1939.

An applicant council should cause to be published in newspapers circulating in their area a notice that such application has been made, and that any representations in respect of the application by interested bodies or persons should be sent to the Minister within 14 days ; evidence of publication should be submitted to the Minister. Notice of the application should also be sent to the other authority or authorities concerned who should inform the Minister as soon as possible if they wish to submit observations.

The population figure for any area relevant at the present time for the purpose of Section 64 is the population according to the 1931 census for the area as now constituted.

Apart from these special provisions for transfer of responsibility, Section 274 of the Local Government Act, 1933 (a), by which a county council may agree that the council of a county district should act as their agents, and Section 320 of the Public Health Act, 1936 (b), whereby the council of a county district may relinquish functions to a county council, will also apply.

By Section 65 (3) of the new Act, any county council or local authority may institute proceedings under the Act, notwithstanding that they are not charged with the duty of enforcement, and Section 75 (5) enables a county council to contribute to the expenses incurred in this connection by the council of a county district who are not a Food and Drugs authority.

Compensation to officers for loss arising out of the transfer of functions under the Act is provided for in Section 95. Where a full-time officer has been appointed in respect of functions which will be transferred from one authority to another, the new arrangements should, wherever possible, provide for a continuation of his employment. Where work devolves from a county council to the council of a county district, it may prove best in the interests of efficiency for the new authority to appoint the same public analyst as the county council.

6. Sampling.—Any "authorised officer," defined in Section 100, may take samples, and in addition to the existing power of purchasing samples, he is now authorised to take samples from any premises entered by him in the execution of duties under the Act (Section 68 (3)). This power coupled with the power of entry in Section 77 should prove of great use in the control of food factories. It will be noted that it is no longer a necessary precedent to prosecution to submit a sample in all cases to a public analyst.

Section 68 (6) provides a simple machinery by which an officer of one authority may take milk samples in the area of another authority. At present this can only be done with the Minister's approval.

7. Food Premises.—Section 13 reproduces, with amendment, Section 72 of the Public Health Act, 1925 (a) (see note in the Appendix to the report); the provisions will extend to yards, forecourts and areas (Section 13 (5)). Section 14 requires registration of certain food premises, with a power to refuse or cancel registration. After October 1st, 1939, it will be illegal to use unregistered premises and local authorities will no doubt take steps to set up registers and arrange for adequate publicity before that date.

8. Unsound Food.—Sections 9 and 10 reproduce with amendment Sections 116 and 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (b). They extend to all articles of food. The 1875 provisions were limited to animals and certain specified articles though they could be extended to other articles of food by the adoption of Section 28 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c). Live animals are now dealt with under the Diseases of Animals Acts (d), and are no longer included in the definition of "food," but that definition (Section 100) includes the whole or part of the carcase of any animal or bird, and any fish, dead or alive (see definition of "article").

Examination and seizure may be carried out by any "authorised officer" as defined in Section 100, but it will be noticed that the effect of the definition is to limit these powers, in the case of meat, to the Medical Officer of Health, Sanitary Inspector or a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons employed for food inspection purposes.

The officer has only to inform the person in possession of his intention to have the food dealt with by a Justice of the Peace, but other persons liable may attend before the justice and give evidence (Section 10 (2)).

Where the offence of the sale, etc., of unsound food is proved the person who sold to the offender may also be prosecuted.

Section 11 extends the powers of local authorities in relation to unsound food to food offered as a "prize or reward." During the passage of the Bill attention was drawn to the practice, adopted by savings clubs and other organisations, of distributing articles of food, especially at Christmas time, in consideration of the payment of small sums of money spread over a protracted period. The Minister is advised that in ordinary circumstances such a transaction involves a sale of the food and that the provisions of Sections 9 and 10 accordingly apply apart from the operation of this section. In any special circumstances where there is not a sale it appears that the provisions of this section, including the definition of the expression "entertainment," will usually be wide enough to render the provisions of the former sections applicable. The element which is common to these two types of transaction is that the purchaser or recipient has not the same opportunities for selection or rejection as he has when he is purchasing food in the ordinary way, and the Minister considers that authorities should instruct their officers to give at least as much attention to such cases as they give to others where the same kinds of food are offered for sale to the general public.

Section 12 authorises examination of food in transit, and Sections 17 and 18 give new powers which should be of material assistance in dealing with or preventing cases of food poisoning. Further powers are given for the control of meat from knackers' yards (see paragraph 12 below).

9. Milk and Dairies.—It is explained in paragraph 43 of the report that an attempt has been made to distinguish between provisions appropriate to the Statute Book and to Regulations respectively. The result is that Section 4 of the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890 (a), Sections 53 and 54 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (a), and Section 6 of the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915 (b), have been repealed, and the Minister has at present under consideration the question whether additional regulations to replace them are necessary.

Sections 3 and 4 and the First Schedule of the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915 (b), have also been repealed (paragraph 44 of the report). As stated by the Committee, the Tuberculosis Order, 1925, made by the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries under the Diseases of Animals Acts, has usually been made use of in preference to Section 3. This Order has since been replaced by the Order of 1938 (c) on account of the new veterinary arrangements introduced by the Agriculture Act, 1937 (d). In paragraph 11 of Circular 1685 (e) of March 22nd last the new arrangements under Section 4 of the Act of 1915, consequent on the passage of the Act of 1937, are set out. Briefly these are that when the Medical Officer of Health of a county or county borough receives notice under Section 4 he shall communicate with the Divisional Inspector of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, who will then take action as if he had received notice under the Tuberculosis Order, and inform the Medical Officer of Health of the result. Although after October 1st, 1939, there will be no statutory obligation on a county or county borough Medical Officer of Health to take action on receiving a notice from a district Medical Officer of Health in the circumstances set out in Section 4, the Minister has no doubt that local authorities will appreciate the advantage of continuing, as an administrative arrangement, the existing co-operation between the Medical Officers of Health and the Divisional Inspector. A district Medical Officer of Health who has reason to suspect that tuberculosis is caused or is likely to be caused by the consumption of any milk sold or exposed for sale within his area, should communicate with the Medical Officer of the county or county borough in which the cows are kept, and the latter should then immediately take the action set out in paragraph 11 of Circular 1685.

Section 10 of the Milk Act of 1934 (f) is reproduced in Section 21 of the new Act, and Section 5 of the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915 (g), and Section 5 of the Milk and Dairies (Amendment) Act, 1922 (g), in Section 25; outside London, county and county borough councils only will in future have the duty of enforcing these provisions, except that the duty of enforcing Section 21 in a county district as regards non-producers devolves on the district council.

Milk is defined (Section 100) as including cream, separated and skimmed milk, but not dried or condensed milk. By Section 29 provisions, other than registration, relating to cream apply also to artificial cream.

10. Advertisements and Labels.—The "labelling" defence on prosecution for a sale to the prejudice of the purchaser is reproduced in Section 4, but Section 5 makes more stringent requirements as regards the label. It must be of adequate size, and have the notice of addition or abstraction distinctly and legibly printed and conspicuously visible. Moreover, the notice is now required to be more explicit. Exemptions for certain existing labels are set out in Section 5 (2).

Powers are now given (Section 6 (1)) are regards a misleading label which may not in terms falsely describe the article, and provision is made for control of advertisements (Section 6 (2)). Margarine labels and advertisements suggesting the inclusion of butter must state the approximate percentage (Section 32 (2)).

11. Markets.—Sections 45–56 reproduce in the main the existing law relating to markets, as it affects local authorities. There are, however, certain amendments which should be borne in mind.

The proviso to Section 44 (2) makes it clear that the proximity of an existing market established by a local authority is not to be an obstacle to the establishment of a new market by another authority.

At present the times of a local authority's market are fixed by byelaws made under Section 42 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (h). Section 46 alters this by providing that the authority may appoint market days and hours with the approval of the Minister, and any such appointment should be made by resolution of the authority.

The existing law with respect to the approval of tolls by the Minister is re-enacted and extended in Section 47 to include, additionally, stallages and charges.

Section 13 of the Act of 1847 (a), which is incorporated in the Public Health Act, 1875, is reproduced in Section 50 with two exceptions. First, the prohibition of sales elsewhere than in the market, or in shops, is limited to market days and market hours and, second, to make the section effective the market authority must, by byelaw, declare the distance within which the prohibition is to operate and specify the articles (being articles commonly sold in the market) to which the prohibition applies. The market authority must keep exhibited in conspicuous positions in the vicinity of the market, notices stating the effect of any such byelaw.

12. Slaughter-houses and Knackers' Yards.—All slaughter-houses and knackers' yards must in future be licensed, subject to renewal within a period of not more than 13 months—Section 57 ; see also paragraphs 55–60 of the report. Premises lawfully in use as a slaughter-house or knacker's yard at October 1st, 1939, are to be deemed to be licensed under the new Act until a date four months from its commencement, i.e., February 1st, 1940. A licensing authority should notify the persons concerned in their area that application for a licence or renewal will be necessary and that it must be submitted before a specified date in order to give the authority time to issue new licences by February 1st, 1940.

A new power is given in Section 61 to reduce the number of private slaughter-houses—see paragraph 61 of the report.

Section 19 provides that meat from knackers' yards shall not be sold, etc., for human consumption and Section 58 (1) (b) empowers a local authority by byelaw to require records of consignments, etc., to be kept. These provisions are directed to preventing the disposal of parts of carcases from knackers' yards in a manner detrimental to the public health. It may be noted that the Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (b), which has a different purpose in view, also requires a record of animals brought to a knackers' yard.

13. Public Analysts' Report.—Section 74 (2) provides that every Food and Drugs authority shall transmit to the Minister at such times as he may direct a copy of each quarterly report received by them from a public analyst. A copy of each report should be sent to this Department as soon as possible after it is received, and in any case that for the fourth quarter in any year should be sent not later than the end of the following January.

14. Miscellaneous.—Attention is also drawn to the following provisions representing new law.

Section 16 requires every dealer in ice-cream from a stall or vehicle, or from a container used without a stall or vehicle, to have his name and address displayed thereon. It may be extended to any other articles of food, or all food, except milk, by resolution of the local authority (Subsection (2)).

Section 37 gives additional powers in relation to ice-cream which should be of assistance in the prevention of "milk-borne disease," as defined in Section 37 (5) and Part II of the First Schedule.

Section 90 makes provision for the continuance of a business pending appeal against a refusal by a local authority to grant or continue any necessary registration or licence under the Act. It will be observed that it applies only to businesses lawfully carried on at the time of the authority's decision. The Committee, in paragraph 21 of the report, comment on an existing abuse in relation to milk arising from the operation of the last paragraph of Section 2 (1) of the Milk and Dairies (Amendment) Act, 1922 (c). That provision did not embody the limitation, which is to be fond in Section 90, to businesses lawfully carried on.

Section 97 provides for temporary continuance of a licence or registration on the death of the person licensed or registered.

MEMO. 36/FOODS.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH.

PROCEDURE UNDER THE FOOD AND DRUGS ACT, ETC.

I.—LEGAL PROVISIONS.

1. The principal legal provisions relating to the composition and description of food and drugs to which this Memorandum refers are :—

(a) Statutory provisions :—
Certain sections of the Food and Drugs Act, 1938, referred to in Section 65 of the Act (a).

(b) Regulations :—
Sale of Milk Regulations (b) ;
Public Health (Condensed Milk) Regulations, 1923 and 1927 (c) ;
Public Health (Dried Milk) Regulations, 1923 and 1927 (d) ;
Public Health (Preservatives &c. in Food) Regulations, 1925 to 1927 (e) ;
Public Analysts Regulations, 1939 (f).

2. These provisions are administered by Food and Drugs authorities and should be treated for the purposes of administration and report as a single group of laws for securing the purity of food.

II.—ACTION AND REPORTS OF FOOD AND DRUGS AUTHORITIES.

3. By Section 74 (2) of the Food and Drugs Act, 1938, and paragraph 13 of Circular 1755 (g), a Food and Drugs authority is required to send to the Minister a copy of

(a) Ante, p. 1403.
(b) Ante, p. 3420.
(c) Ante, pp. 3371, 3390.
(d) Ante, pp. 3375, 3391.
(e) Ante, p. 2816.
(f) Ante, p. 3468.
(g) Ante, p. 4093.

each quarterly report of the Public Analyst as soon as possible after the report is received. The copy of the report for the fourth quarter must be sent in any case before the end of the following January.

4. The Ministry also desire to receive the following information:—

(a) In regard to each sample reported by the Public Analyst as not genuine or otherwise as giving rise to irregularity—

(i) If the sample was taken formally and legal proceedings have been instituted, a statement showing the result. Particulars should be given of any prosecution of an exceptional character, especially in connection with the adulteration of milk or the application of any new legislation or regulation.

(ii) If the sample was taken formally and proceedings have not been instituted, a brief statement of the circumstances in which it has been decided that prosecution was not advisable, and the precise action taken.

(iii) If the sample was taken informally, the action taken.

(b) In regard to any sample not submitted to the Public Analyst, the nature of the examination, its result, and the action taken, if any.

The information should be given either on a copy of the Analyst's report or otherwise, in such a form as to ensure the identification of the relative sample, and where reference is not made in the Analyst's report (samples in category (b) above) it is desirable none the less that the information should be sent quarterly.

5. Where proceedings in respect of offences committed in any quarter are pending at the time of sending in the report for that quarter, the necessary information as to the result of the proceedings should be transmitted to the Ministry as early as practicable.

6. The Ministry desire to be furnished with particulars of offences other than adulteration and sale of articles to the prejudice of the purchaser, etc., e.g. contravention of the labelling requirements in Part III of the Act of 1938 or of regulations, and obstruction of officers in the discharge of their duty, by refusing to sell or otherwise. As regards such offences information as to the action taken should be given on the same lines as that asked for above with regard to adulterated, etc. samples.

7. The Ministry would also be glad to be informed of all cases in which samples have been submitted to the Public Analyst, or of any other action which has been taken with regard to the composition or description of food, otherwise than under the legal provisions referred to in paragraph 1 of this Memorandum (e.g. under the Merchandise Marks Acts (a)).

8. The Ministry should be furnished with copies of any annual or special reports made to the Authority by the Public Analyst on the general working and administration of the Act and similar matters, or the results of special investigations as to particular foods. The Medical Officer of Health is required by regulation to furnish the Minister with a copy of any special report which he may make to the Authority, and the Department would also be glad to receive a copy of reports on these matters by any other officers as soon as they have been submitted to the Authority.

III.—APPOINTMENT OF PUBLIC ANALYSTS

9. The qualifications which should be held by candidates for appointment as Public Analysts are set out in the Public Analysts Regulations, 1939 (b). The Minister may approve other qualifications in special circumstances and an indication of these is given in Circular 1833 (c). Briefly, satisfactory evidence of competence in analytical chemistry, therapeutics and microscopy equivalent to that necessary for the qualifications set out in the Regulations will be required.

10. When the appointment of a Public Analyst is submitted for the Minister's approval, particulars of the appointment should be given on a form to be obtained from the Department.

FOOD AND DRUGS

IV.—COLLECTION AND DISPOSAL OF SAMPLES.

11. The quantity of any article purchased should be sufficient to enable a satisfactory analysis to be made of each of the three portions into which the sample is divided, but should not be so large as to attract special attention. In any case of doubt the Public Analyst should be consulted as to the quantity required.

12. The three portions should be made as nearly equal as possible.

13. In the case of such an article as milk care should be taken to secure an even distribution of the constituent parts of the sample before it is divided. Where milk is sold in bottles or cartons it may be useful for this purpose to pour the milk into a larger vessel and thoroughly mix by use of a plunger or repeated pourings. A small quantity should then be returned to rinse out the bottle or carton before the final mixing by plunging or repeated pouring from vessel to vessel.

14. The bottles used for liquids should have a narrow neck and should be filled as nearly as possible, since if the samples are shaken in transit the use of bottles much too large for the contents may result in a separation of some of the constituents of the liquids.

15. Such bottles should be closed with suitable stoppers fitting so tightly as to secure the contents with no aid from the wax used for sealing. The sealing should be carried out in such a way as to ensure that the stopper cannot be removed without breaking the seal. Where corks are used as stoppers, care should be taken to see that they are new, sound and well softened, and it is recommended that the cork should be driven in as far as it will go, and cut off flush with the rim of the bottle, the top of the cork and the rim of the bottle being then covered with wax and sealed. The wax should reach well down over the lip of the bottle and the seal should incorporate a distinctive mark. As an alternative, the cork may be slit down to a quarter of its length and string drawn through and securely fastened round the neck, the ends afterwards being carried to the top of the cork and sealed thereon. Another method is referred to in paragraph 19 below.

16. Samples of solid fatty substances such as butter, margarine, lard or dried milk, in which it is important that the proportions of fat and water should be accurately determined, should be placed without paper (since paper acts as an absorbent) in a dry, wide-mouthed, stoppered bottle, or glazed earthenware jar. It is an advantage to use a screw-capped bottle having a mouth as nearly as possble of the full width of the bottle. The screw-cap should be lined with cork covered with a disc consisting of a paper base impregnated with a grease-proof non-absorbent insoluble material. The sample can be placed in such a bottle without pressure, and can be easily removed by the Analyst.

17. All bottles should be of such type as to give security to the samples in transit. A bottle with a round cross-section is more suitable than a flat medicine bottle.

18. Labels, which should be printed in triplicate and bear serial numbers so as to avoid any confusion, should be securely affixed to the receptacles containing the three portions of the sample. The vendor should be given an opportunity of verifying the identity of the three labels used. The correct description of the article asked for should always appear on the label. It is advisable to seal the edge of the label to the receptacle, so that it cannot be removed by soaking.

19. In all cases where a screw-capped bottle or any receptacle which cannot conveniently be sealed is used it should be labelled with the necessary particulars, and enclosed in an envelope of stout paper secured at the end with the official seal. The serial number and other particulars should be placed both on the bottle and on the envelope.

20. It is particularly important that there should be no doubt about the nature of "appeal to cow" samples, and where cows are milked under the supervision of a sampling officer he should ensure that an adequate number of witnesses, officials or others, are present. A sample of such a milking submitted to a Public Analyst should be marked "appeal to cow sample," or in some other distinctive way to indicate the circumstances in which it was taken.

21. When a sample of a prescribed medicine is taken, the height of the contents in the bottle supplied by the vendor should be marked in his presence prior to the division of the sample. The bottle so marked should be submitted to the Analyst in order to enable him to determine the total quantity of medicine supplied.

22. The retained portion of any perishable article should be kept at an equable and cool temperature in a dark place.

23. It is desirable that articles of food which experience shows to be likely to contain preservatives should be examined for preservatives. Where a sample is taken for the determination of the sulphur dioxide content, it should be placed in an airtight receptacle so as to minimise the loss of sulphur dioxide which normally occurs on keeping, and which may be accelerated by exposure to air.

V.—PUBLIC ANALYST'S REPORTS

24. The Analyst is required by the Act of 1938 to make quarterly reports, and these should be made up to the last day of March, June, September and December respectively.

25. The Analyst should record in his reports the results of the examination of all samples of food and drugs sent to him for the purposes of the Act of 1938, etc., including those taken without the prescribed formalities and the special samples of milk (some of which may be taken outside the area for which he is appointed) under the Third Schedule of the Act. The reports should include the results of the examination of samples submitted by private purchasers (including supply departments of local authorities) in pursuance of Section 69 (2) of the Act, but not of samples submitted to the Analyst by producers or manufacturers.

26. It is desirable for the sake of uniformity that every report should contain the following particulars (preferably in tabular form *) :—

(1) Name or description of article.

(2) Number of samples of each article examined classified as (a) formal, (b) informal, and (c) private samples ; together with (d) total.

(3) Numbers of samples of each article regarded as adulterated or otherwise as giving rise to irregularity also classified as in (2).

(4) Totals of (2) and (3) for all articles.

The following particulars should be given as to the samples regarded as adulterated, etc. :—

(1) Serial number of the sample ;

(2) Name or description of article ;

(3) Whether a formal, informal, or private sample ;

(4) Nature of the adulteration or irregularity.

27. An indication of the samples which have been examined for preservatives, and any comments which the Analyst may desire to make on any of the samples examined (other than such observations as fall to be included in the last column of that section of the report headed " Adulterated Samples, etc.") should be made under the general heading " Comments " in the main body of the report. As regards milk samples the report should show whether they were " appeal to cow " samples and in the case of samples below the presumptive limits of the Sale of Milk Regulations, whether they were adjudged genuine by the Analyst on other grounds.

* A suggested tabular form is contained in the Appendix.
